Welcome To A Town that's Closer To What Matters

It's when you look up that you truly know you're home. The oak canopy reaches high, nestling this small town just beside the big city. It gives you shade, serenity and security in a world that often struggles to. Snow globes are made of scenes like this - a microcosm of the best a community can be. You and your family are at the center of it. Closer to nature. Closer to history. Closer to opportunity. Closer to friends, family and faith.

Closer... to what matters.

The live oaks have towered over us for centuries, rooted in a tradition of welcoming. A Spanish colony evolved to Laurel Grove, then to our founding in 1877. America's largest sign, "ORANGE PARK," beckoned steamboats of winter tourists to our shores. They found something different. Comfort, beauty and an ease of living. Orange trees, once a driver of our economy, were symbols of hospitality. So, too, were pecans. The Clarkes shipped them nationwide, a simple exchange to keep friends and family closer.

Closer... to what matters.

As Jacksonville grew, this Town attracted more residents than visitors, though they still come. Here, at the pinnacle of Clay County, neighborhoods, places of worship and businesses were born - and a tradition of outstanding police and fire protection. Unchanged was the priority placed on natural beauty and recreation. River Road gives everyone their place on the water. Our birds sing music from the trees. The St. Johns and Doctor's Lake. Clarke House Park. Town Hall Park. TC Miller. The Veterans' Memorial. These are the places that keep us closer to nature, closer to one another and closer to something bigger.

Closer... to what matters.

Our peaceful setting is also abuzz with activity. Isn't that what community is all about? Our events and festivals are a signature - the Farmers' Market, Fall Festival, Longest Table. Day to day, we come together at genuinely local establishments, each with its own character. Morning coffee at Urban Bean or Grumpy's, a tasty meal at OP Fish House. A local brew at Cultured Collective. And don't forget a chocolate covered cone at the DQ. Special occasions at Club Continental, Winterbourne and Azaleana Manor, each with the river in view. This is a Town that keeps life's lighter moments in balance, keeping us closer to enjoyment.

Closer... to what matters.

This is a place for the ambitious, too. Our elementary schools and middle school prepare students to achieve their aspirations. Our active trading area is fertile ground for entrepreneurs and professionals, alike. US-17 and Kingsley pulse with energy, making us the commercial center of Clay County. For those looking to climb the ladder, thriving Jacksonville provides limitless career opportunity and access to everything you need. Atop Clay County and hugging Jacksonville's border, no place keeps you closer to your goals.

Closer... to what matters.

That this peaceful enclave has been preserved within a high growth region is remarkable. We won't grow out of control because, at 5.3 square miles, we can't. We'll only grow better, buoyed by the power of friends, family, faith and our natural assets. There's a comfortable connection here, 150 years in the making. Real and unpretentious. We cling to it like the Spanish moss on our majestic oaks. Won't you join us? Look up and you'll see it, look around and you'll feel it. You're in the Town of Orange Park.

You're closer to what matters.

Somer's Sunshine Park: Spurred by the tragic story of Somer Thompson, the Town Council dedicated a one-acre parcel of land as a park that would bear Somer's name and provide a peaceful place to spend time with family and friends. Business owners and residents rallied together and donated approximately $25,000 in labor and materials. Community members and local organizations gathered in March 2012 to put the finishing touches on the park, which includes a walking trail, butterfly garden, shade trees, picnic areas and benches. Somer's Sunshine Park is a shining testimony to the spirit, unity and dedication of the Orange Park community. Located at the intersection of Gano Ave and DeBarry Ave, Orange Park, FL.

Historic Clarke House Park remains the historic, futuristic hub of Orange Park

Article and Photos By Don Coble

ORANGE PARK – The sounds of children swinging, climbing on Jungle Gyms and laughing is the perfect buffer against the noise of busy Kingsley Avenue traffic.

On a routine day, especially on weekends, the Clarke House Park is filled with residents who enjoy the 20,015-square-foot playground and Clarke House, which is listed in the National Register of Historic Places. The house was built in 1912 by William Clarke, and it continues to be the focal point of the Town.

In addition to the newly-reconstructed playground, the park also has a sand volleyball court, nature trails, gardens, a lake, pavilions, grills and restrooms. Most of the park is shrouded by the shade provided by oak trees that are older than the historic house.

The original wooden playground was demolished for safety reasons in early 2021. The Town Council voted to rebuild it to allow for a capacity of 450 children from 2 to 12 years old.

The rebuild finished in September 2021, and it included the addition of playground equipment designed for children with physical challenges. Other changes include a toddler play zone and the addition of a sandbox. The playground cost $682,735.

The Town celebrates Carrie Clarke Day every March to honor the influential resident who lived there more than 110 years ago.

“The event is done to honor Carrie Clarke. She is a kind and generous woman who, along with her husband, served the community in many ways, offering her home for gatherings that helped launch many groups in Town. The community has always been very supportive of this event,” said Historical Society of Orange Park President Cynthia Cheatwood.

Carrie Clarke bought the land across Kingsley Avenue and sold it for $1 to allow for the construction of the First Baptist Church of Orange Park. She also was known for feeding the hungry, and she opened her doors for weddings to brides who couldn’t afford lavish receptions.

The original property was 30 acres and it included a pecan tree farm. In 1991, the Town bought the remaining 15 acres. The pecan trees are gone and with so many visitors, attempts to plant new saplings haven’t been fruitful.

The three pavilions are available for rent in three-hour increments.

The park is open from 8am to sunset daily.

Moosehaven - Our 100-Year-Old Neighbor

by Cynthia Cheatwood, Historical Society of Orange Park

For decades, Moosehaven has been a valued part of Orange Park. Its history is charming. In 1922, the Loyal Order of Moose came to Orange Park to create a “City of Contentment” which was later called Moosehaven. The Loyal Order of the Moose needed a place for their elderly fraternity members and their spouses to spend the golden years of their lives. Starting in 1918, the Moose scouted many locations before settling on Orange Park. In 1921 they purchased the old Hotel Marion and eight acres of land.

Moosehaven records give details of the lease-purchase agreement with local developer Charles Brown that stipulated a deposit of $4,000, rent of $150 a month for two years with the option to purchase for $30,000 during that time. On October 3, 1922, Moosehaven was officially dedicated. By 1922 there were 21 residents living in the old hotel, renamed “Brandon Hall” in honor of the Moose Supreme Secretary, Rodney H. Brandon who had arranged its purchase. By the end of that year the land area had grown to 26 acres of land and included several cottages. New residents planted gardens and raised chickens. In 1924 a farm was established.

In 1924, Orange Park was struggling to bring electricity and phone services to town. This became the focus of the Orange Park’s Woman’s Club and other local citizens. To qualify for the service there had to be a minimum number of subscribers. Moosehaven, with their growth, had the numbers needed. They guaranteed one half of the pre-subscriptions required to bring the services from Jacksonville. An excited Orange Park celebrated with the help of the ladies of the Woman’s Club who appointed a trio of Mrs. Anna Allen, Mrs. Carrie Clarke and J.V. Mrs. Carnes to organize a turning-on-the-lights event on Feb. 28, 1928. The town’s longest resident, Mrs. Anna R. Marson, 82, flipped the switch in the community center and a grand party ensued.

On July 13, 1927, the Moose, needing more accommodations, bought three old dormitory buildings that had been part of the Orange Park Normal School complex. The organization applied a stone covering to all surfaces, similar to the brick structures in their parent complex, Moosehart, Illinois. By this time there were around 150 Moose living in Orange Park, performing all their own work, operating a successful dairy and farm.

By 1930 more buildings dotted the Moosehaven grounds. These included a commissary, shoe shop, laundry and general workshop. Growth continued even during the Great Depression. Two rooms inside Brandon Hall served as a hospital until growing need led to a free-standing hospital annex. In the 1960s, the $2 million Paul P. Schmitz Health Center would be built to meet the needs of up to 500 residents. (

In 1933, the Philadelphia Building was added for several purposes. Among those was an area functioning through the Women of the Moose where new residents could join a sewing circle and become more comfortable in the community. All this prosperity, in the midst of so much need, set nerves on end with local residents. The Moose, as a charitable institution, were tax exempt. That too bothered local tax payers.

By 1940, the economic climate of the country and Moosehaven was changing. The introduction of the social security system led to reconsideration of financial arrangements. Residents were no longer admitted on a “pay” basis. Over half the residents were now in need of medical care which would require hiring more staff. A system was begun in which retirees turn over everything they own when joining and are guaranteed lifetime care.

In the 1940’s, Orange Park residents, fewer in number than their elderly Moose neighbors, became alarmed when seeing postcards printed with the words, “Moosehaven, Florida” printed on them. Panic ensued that the town’s name might be replaced. Conflicts grew even worse after World War Two because local land prices were rising at alarming rates and Moosehaven by 1949, had over $2 million invested in Orange Park’s best land. Town commissioners sued Moosehaven for taxes, in spite of their charity-status. The dispute was settled out of court with Moosehaven agreeing to donate $1000 per year to the town in place of taxes. They agreed that their residents wouldn’t be part of local elections. Also, when they built a new complex for themselves, they gave the town part of the original normal school buildings they had bought in 1927.

By the 1960s most of the people of Orange Park saw the Moose as an integral part of their community. The grounds of Moosehaven became useful for residents once the farming initiative changed for the retired Moose. The first attempt at organized baseball for boys in Orange Park was played on the open grounds that had once been farmed fields.

Moosehaven is an important part of the Town of Orange Park’s story, past and present. The old water tower was an icon for decades, demolished in 2016 to make room for more residences, was recognizable to generations, even if they never went through the Moose gates. Today the Town depends on the parking space provided by the Moose for big Town events. Community breakfasts and social activities invite residents to enjoy the beautiful grounds and river view that Moosehaven maintains. So, it is a good time to say “Thank You:” and “Happy Anniversary” to our good neighbors, the Moose.

This history in this article is adapted from the Moosehaven chapter of Images of America: Orange Park, by Cynthia Cheatwood.

Closer To What Matters

The Story of Club Continental in Orange Park, Florida

By Cynthia Cheatwood, Historical Society of Orange Park

The property we call Club Continental sits at on the banks of the St. John's River, in a central location of what we today call the town of Orange Park. But its story begins before there was a Club Continental, when the idea of a town was just getting started. An ambitious developer named Washington Gano Benedict started the Florida Winter Home and Improvement Corporation during the Reconstruction period, specifically to capitalize on inexpensive land available in Florida. Benedict named the town and advertised it far and wide. A large hotel was constructed with a great steamship pier. Lots were laid out neatly with hundreds of orange trees planted on them to increase buyer interest. People started coming from northern climes, looking for a warmer place to spend the winter.

Burdette Jay Johnson, owner of the BJ Johnson Soap Company came to the new town in 1878, arriving on the same steamboat that carried Ulysses S. Grant and General Philip Sheridan for a visit. Johnson had lost two daughters to consumption and when Karrie, his third daughter, came down with it, he brought the family to Orange Park to facilitate her recovery. No doubt Benedict's advertising gave him hope.

Karrie did recover and from that time on the family became intertwined with the town. Wintering at first at the Park View Hotel, and then in the small house across the street from the hotel, they found the environment charming and comfortable. While in town, Johnson contributed his time and talents to local improvement projects. He supported the construction of Grace Episcopal Church and, with Benedict, planted oaks to line Kingsley Avenue, a feature that would become a popular scene on postcards sent from the Hotel Marion. (The Park View Hotel burned and was replaced by Hotel Marion.) It is not difficult to imagine Benedict and Johnson in business conversations, perhaps occasionally in the company of Harriett Beecher Stowe who took up residence in Mandarin. She too had written enticing descriptions of Orange Park to invite northern visitors.

When Mr. Johnson passed away, his son Caleb took over the Soap Company. Caleb created a new soap, one with an unusual green color, made with the same coconut oil as BJ Johnson's popular Galvanic Soap, but adding into that, a mix of palm and olive oils, together with coca butter. The combination was a huge success. The company was very profitable.

Time passed and the town grew slowly. Trains came to Jacksonville with a short rail to Orange Park, making travel easier. Young Karrie matured and married John Ferguson in 1894. In 1906, she convinced her husband to buy the small house they had rented each winter throughout her post-consumption life. She increased the size of the house and added beautiful gardens, making it all more elegant over time. The name became Winterbourne, reflecting her history in the name. In 1917 she sold 20 acres of the land to her brother, Caleb. That land was used to create the property that would become Club Continental.

The Fergusons contributed much to their new community. They donated 26 books to the Orange Park Woman's Club in 1911, starting Orange Park's public library. Karrie was an active member of the Jacksonville Garden Club and in 1925, chaired the committee responsible for writing the constitution and by-laws for the Florida Federation of Garden Clubs. Karrie Ferguson lived at Winterbourne until her death in 1952.

Karrie's brother, Caleb, and his wife, Elinor Johnson came to live on the property around the 1920s, following his retirement from the soap company. The house that Caleb and Elinor built was named Mira Rio, which means River View, in honor of the Italian architecture they couple enjoyed so much while traveling in Europe. Mira Rio was modeled after a Medici villa, and designed by Milwaukee architect, Fitzhugh Scott. By summer, 1923, Caleb and Elinor Johnson had put over $2 million into the project and the pool, bathing pavilion, formal gardens, etc had just begun. A gate house was constructed for the entrance, as well as a building that served as the caretaker and chauffeur's quarters. That building would later be used by the Johnsons' grandson, Jon Masee. In the 1960's it was Jon, and his wife, Fredericka (Frica) Masee, who converted Mira Rio into a private club, and thus, established Club Continental.

During World War Two, Caleb's daughter, Margaret Masee, ran a genteel boarding house at Mira Rio, renting rooms to officers in flight training at NAS and Cecil Field. For that time period, Mira Rio was called Azaleana Manor. They operated a low key dinner club at the same time for officers and civilians. Young Joe Kennedy is said to have been among the aviator guests at that time.

Jon Masee married Frederica "Frica" Masee in the mid-1940s.. Frisca loved Florida plant life and local history and spent a lifetime teaching and preserving history. After receiving her master's degree from Vassar, Frisca taught at Orange Park High School. She generously gave this community the gift of her time, energy and attention.

In 1978, Frisca Masee became infatuated with a building originally located at Hibernia Plantation, south of Orange Park, that was on the verge of demolition. She bought the house for $1000 to save it after learning it had been built by a carpenter named Biggers, the same man responsible for the construction of Grace Episcopal. Biggers or his foreman might have lived in the River House. The building was moved to Club Continental property in 1981 in 3 pieces, not by barge as had been rumored but locals.

In 1980, Jon and Frisca purchased the Winterbourne property bringing it back into the family. Club Continental was successful and in 1993, another building on site was made into a tourist bed and breakfast and named River Suites.

In 2018, Karrie Masee, the last family member to manage the property, designed a building near Winterbourne for overnight rentals. Bringing history back into view, the new enterprise was named Azaleana Manor. Ms. Masee continues to oversee operations on the property where so many of her family laid the groundwork. The Club, in all its incarnations, has been and will continue to be an important asset for the local community and a touch of class for Orange Park.

Orange Park Names- Food for Thought

By Cynthia Cheatwood, Historical Society of Orange Park

Some of the frequently asked questions received by the Historical Society concern the meaning behind the names used around town. It is true there are many stories behind those names. To explore some of those, consider the following information.

The Town of Orange Park is so called because of the enterprising efforts of the town's founder, Washington Gano Benedict. When his Florida Winter Home and Improvement Company in 1877, he planted orange trees on every home lot to encourage northern transplants. Before Benedict, the town had been a plantation under several owners, starting as the Crisp Grant in 1765, then becoming Laurel Grove Plantation in the 1770s when William and Rebecca Pengree tamed the land and established the first homestead here. After the Pengrees, Zephaniah Kingsley developed the property even further before losing it in the Patriot's Rebellion of 1813.

We in the Society are also often asked about the origin of the name "Doctor's Lake" (called Lake Levett after Francis Levett land grant, during the British period). There is no good explanation that historians agree upon. Dr. John Bartram wrote about it on February 6, 1766, and so some think it is named for him. However, in his journal he writes that he is going there to stay with a man who had lived there a long time. So, if he referred to visiting "Doctors Lake", even though it is really an inlet, not a lake, he certainly is not the source of the name.

By the time Benedict's company purchased the property, it was in bad shape. He masterfully marketed the land. A map of 1884 lays out the original 55 streets in the town limits. Of those names, 26 are no longer in use, roughly 46% having been renamed. Some of those gone represent important names in the town's story, such as Copeland, May, Holt and Hookey as well as names of men on the board of directors for the Florida Winter Home and Improvement Company. Copeland references a Union general, Joseph Tarr Copeland who came here and became a judge. May was an early settler who had been a judge in Milwaukee, WI. Though his name left the map, Milwaukee Avenue still honors him. E. N. Holt owned the first store and post office in Orange Park along with Edward Sabin. Catherine Hookey owned Laurel Grove during the Civil War. Hookey Street's name got changed somehow to Hooker Street and people objected. It is now Miller Street, named for Terersa Miller, first principal of Grove Park Elementary.

Some of the names associated with the FWHI Company remain. Blake Avenue is named for Alpheus Perley Blake, a Massachusetts land developer, second in command for the Company. He also developed some other places in Florida including the town of Blake, Florida, named for him until 1930, when the name changed to South Daytona. Loring Avenue is named for David Loring, the Company's Secretary and Treasurer (Loring's ancestor signed the Mayflower Compact of 1620). Eldridge Avenue is named for John F. Eldridge, an early investor in the company and early resident. He served as mayor and town clerk of Orange Park. Mr. Eldridge had a sugar refinery business in Orange Park, which a 1900 newspaper reported as having 100 acres of sugar cane planted. Eldridge also worked with the Hotel Marion (formerly Parkview Hotel).

Several streets are named for early residents. Campbell Avenue is named for O. E. Campbell, was first President of OP Town Council. There are also Shaw Street (named for W.A./ E.K. Shaw), and Carnes Street named for J. Vincent Carnes who ran a fishing business, first off River Road and then on Doctors Lake where Rob Bradley Conservation Park is now. Morgan Circle (and Street) are named for Stanley and Nellie Morgan, early residents who owned a store in the first half of the 1900s. Plainfield Avenue is named to recognize the Ball family's hometown, early residents of the town. McDower Avenue (turpentine industry), Fillmore Lane (tavern/restaurant on Kingsley), and Solomon Street are named for early African American families in the town.

Stiles Avenue (and Lane) recognizes the family of Benjamin Franklin Stiles who came to Florida for health and pleasure in 1868, and returned every winter thereafter until 1872, when he arrived very ill, with pneumonia. From 119 pounds his weight has increased to 180 pounds. He stayed here year-round after that; bought 60 acres of riverfront in Orange Park, with a grove of 30 acres containing 2,300 trees, said to be the largest in Clay County. Stiles was a grandson of the sixth Yale College president, Rev. Ezra Stiles, a personal friend of Benjamin Franklin.

Some other early historically recognized names include Mound Street, which did have two documented Timucua mounds as well as Fatio Lane, named the Spanish wife of George Fleming (Hibernia Plantation, Fleming Island). Egremont Drive remembers the Earl of Egremont, Secretary of State for the Southern Department during the British occupation of FL. Laurel Grove Lane recalls the plantation history of the town, as does Kingsley Avenue (owner of Laurel Grove, 1803-1814), Anna Avenue (Kingsley's wife), and McIntosh Lane. John Houston McIntosh was the owner of Laurel Grove Plantation from 1814-1836.

The only street that relates to the town's founder is Gano Ave, named after Washington Gano Benedict's grandmother's maiden name. Stowe Avenue and Beecher Lane are reminders that Harriett Beecher Stowe was here for a couple of years after the Civil War, before relocating to Mandarin. Reed Street is named for Arthur M. Reed, a Jacksonville neighbor, the owner of Mulberry Grove Plantation, 1861-1899; NAS Jax is built there now.

DeBarry Avenue was the misspelled name of Count Fredrik deBary, a wealthy wine importer, businessman and steamboat line owner. Count deBary cornered the market for Mums champagne, generating a fortune that helped him build a prosperous steamship line.

The area we know as Club Continental has significant history. Winterbourne Drive (and Street) takes the name of the earliest local residence of the B.J. Johnson family. Johnson Slough is also named for this founder of the B.J. Johnson Soap Company, later to become Palmolive. Other names related to the family include Via Tisdale (Col. Achilles Tisdale married Margaret Masse, granddaughter of BJ Johnson) and a family friend is recalled with Astor Street. William Astor was 3rd Viscount Astor, a yachting friend of Caleb Masee, BJ's son-in-law. Caleb built a large estate next to the family's Winterbourne house that had been added onto many times over the years. The new mansion was named Mira Rio, recalling days of travel in Europe. During World War Two, Mira Rio was called Azaleana Manor, serving as housing for pilots in training. After the war, that name was returned until being resurrected for newly renovated rental units on the property. When Mira Rio was converted into a member's club, the name Club Continental was added.

Some names reflect residents who came later. For example, Dudley Branch, a spur off Johnson Slough, is most likely named for the only Dudley in Orange Park's story, Peter Dudley, African-American farmer who lived near the railroad depot. Annie Keyes, a local educator and civil rights worker, has an honorary street named for her. Once called Railroad Avenue, it now sports a brown historical street sign in recognition of her contribution to the community. There are also Floyd, Ralph, Wells and Smith families who established when the town was a few decades old.

Still more recent names include Fromhart Street, named for Richard Fromhart, who was a driving force in the creation of Orange Park Athletic Association. Nelson Drive is named after John Nelson, a World War Two veteran who came to Orange Park and established a large homestead on Doctors Lake. Mr. Nelson had the road named after himself, something that does not happen very often. His land is now the site of Rob Bradley Conservation Park, named in honor of Robert Bradley, Jr. who faithfully served Orange Park in the Florida Senate for eight years.

When the 1884 map was drawn up there were two Smith Streets. One, that was Jno. Smith Street is gone, but the other continues. Perhaps he was a family member though the two streets were distant from each other on that early map.

Preble Court is named for a resident who ran greyhounds at the dog track, according to Arthur Hall, a founder of the Society who worked for Mr. Preble as a boy in the 1930s. Walking the greyhounds to cool them down after they raced. Another Plainfield connector, Silver Wing Circle, has its name explained by the same founder. There was a tavern nestled back in the woods that had that name. Arthur Hall and other boys of the town gathered bottles from all around the town and were paid a penny each as these were washed and reused by the tavern keeper.

In Orange Park today there are over 40 streets with names that reflect nature. These include animals, trees, flowers, and at least one weed (dog fennel). There are also some quirky names like Candy Lane, Chablis Court, Freckles Court, and Upchucks Lane. There are at least six streets with the first name of ladies.

We have names for parks in the town as well. Clarke Park is named for William and Carrie Clarke, a local family who ran a prosperous pecan grove and helped their community at every opportunity. Somer Sunshine Park was named to remember a local girl slain on her way home from school.

So, for a small town, there is a lot of history to be learned in asking why names were chosen. If you know the story behind any names not listed here, please share the story with us at info@ophistory.org. Also, if you have your own interpretation of Doctor's Lake, we'd like to hear that too.

Magnolia Cemetery: The deed to Magnolia Cemetery was given to the Town of Orange Park in 1886 by Washington Benedict and A.P. Blake of Boston, Massachusetts. Many former Town mayors and other prominent citizens, including veterans, are buried in Magnolia's 14 acres of shady lawns. The oldest grave markers date back to 1845. Magnolia Cemetery is the traditional site of the annual Memorial Day observation ceremony. There are currently no cemetery plots available for purchase. Located at 1040 Kingsley Ave, Orange Park, FL.

Message from the Police Chief

Welcome to the Town of Orange Park. Whether you are a lifetime resident, a first-time visitor, or a person simply traveling through our town, the Orange Park Police Department's number one goal is your safety and security. We pride ourselves on being a department that goes the extra mile to provide the service you expect from a premier law enforcement agency.

As a police organization, we are grateful for the connection that we have with our community. Our effectiveness is increased with community involvement, and it is my commitment to be responsive to the needs of those we serve. Our department works continually to build a strong trust with the public, and we accomplish that mission through personal accountability and the highest measure of training with our professional officers and staff. We genuinely care about you, and we strive to show that care with every interaction.

Part of our process is ensuring your safety is to regularly evaluate and enhance our community interaction programs. Last year, we launched our body worn camera program, the first in Clay County. We were able to secure these cameras with the American Rescue Plan Funds (ARPA) to create another level of transparency for our department. These will also improve officer safety, increase evidence quality, and reduce agency liability.

We are proud to serve and protect you, and we always appreciate your feedback. If you ever have any concerns, comments or suggestions that may assist us in enhancing the quality of our service, please do not hesitate to contact me at (904) 264-5555.

Thank you,
