SC Courts Continued to Struggle With Backlog

BY LAW OFFICE OF JAMES R. SNELL, JR., LLC
snelllaw.com

Like most court systems post-pandemic, South Carolina courts are struggling with a backlog. However, their trouble began long before the COVID-19 Pandemic. There are many cases that have been pending before the pandemic that were only prolonged when the pandemic hit and the courts shut down. Though many cases were able to be resolved via virtual court rooms, many have sat and are still not being resolved which has led to much frustration for defendants and their attorneys. It was not until March of 2022 that the South Carolina Supreme Court ordered all courts to open back up to full capacity. So, what is going on with the backlog and how will it affect those waiting their turn in court?

According to Lexington County Judges, there are over 2,000 pending criminal cases in Lexington County alone. What most people are not aware of is that there are a total of about twenty criminal courts in Lexington County that include General Sessions, Magistrate, and Municipal Courts. However, where as General Sessions and Magistrate are public systems with public files, the Municipal Courts have their own Police Departments and they run their own court systems outside of the main-stream court docket. This leads to many delays in the Municipalities as they hold fewer court dates with usually the same case load as the Magistrates.

However, even though there is a large backlog of cases from prior to the pandemic and from the pandemic closures of the court houses, the courts are working on quickly scheduling and resolving cases. This does take time, however, most of the courts are very accommodating for Defendants that need their cases resolved very quickly due to outside circumstances, such as health or out of state residents.

Recently, the South Carolina way of letting solicitors control the criminal court docket and court calendar has changed. The old way led to Defense Attorneys across the state complaining for many years about the old system being unfair to victims and defendants alike. The courts now run a clerk and Judge run docket where they are able to fast track cases and keep them moving so that the backlog decreases and cases are able to be closed quicker. This has led to the Judge holding more hearings every week to pull the old cases forward and put timelines for them to be resolved so that the solicitors cannot sit on them nor pick when and what they will resolve at their leisure. This system, although it takes adjustment, will lead to the push in the number of cases resolved to both benefiting defendants and victims and allow both "their day in court".

Gail Clark–Clark Law Office

BY CLARK LAW OFFICE

clarklawllc.com

Geneva M. “Gail” Clark was born and raised in Rockingham, North Carolina. She married her high school sweetheart, Brian Lee Clark, of Rockingham, NC, a Road Foreman of Engineers with CSX Transportation. They have three daughters, Breleigh, Haleigh and Carleigh Clark and attend Kittiwake Baptist Church in West Columbia. Other than her love of family, Gail enjoys spending her downtime on beautiful Lake Murray.

Gail graduated from Richmond Senior High School in 1996. Following High School, she attended Wingate University where she earned a B.S. in Business Administration with an emphasis in Management in 2000, graduating with Dean’s List recognition for her academic accomplishments. Her eagerness to engage in the process of learning continued as she acquired a Master of Arts in Teaching in 2006 from Wingate University. During this time, Gail acquired a North Carolina Real Estate Sales License in April 1999. Additionally, she obtained Broker status in July of 2001 and Broker-In-Charge eligibility in August of 2007.

Except for a brief break to obtain her master’s degree, Gail worked full time in the business field until May of 2015. Examples of her career experiences include working with residential and commercial developer; and working in collaboration with local government department heads to interpret and assist in development of program policies, review grant applications, personnel actions, and budget requests on an agency wide scale for compliance with federal, state and agency guidelines. A 2015 job transfer for her husband resulted in the relocation of her family to South Carolina and an opportunity for her to go back to school full time and pursue a law degree. The logistics of the move in conjunction with helping her three young daughters adapt to their changing circumstances was without a doubt extremely challenging at times. However, she was determined to succeed and committed to making the daily drive to Charleston, where she attended Charleston School of Law. Gail graduated from Charleston School of Law with her Juris Doctor in May of 2019. While attending Charleston she received the CALI Award of Excellence in Contracts I, and Upper-Level Writing.

Gail started the Clark Law Office, LLC in the fall of 2020.

How Athletes Can Stay on Top of Their Game During the Off Season

PrismaHealth.org/ApexSports

To take your game to the next level on the field, it is important to focus on your habits and skills off the field. Joshua Vaughan, physical therapist at Prisma Health Apex Athletic Performance, shared what you can do during the off season to help you prepare to get back out there when your game begins again.

“In order to become a bigger, faster, stronger, athlete overall, you need to be devoting time to your body in the weight room and gym,” said Vaughan. “Strength and conditioning are incredibly important and have many benefits, including faster speed, better endurance, and it can decrease your chance of getting injured. But don’t forget about your specific game or sport. Practicing your game or sport for a few hours a day multiple times a week year-round will also improve your skills on the field.”

CAN WORKING OUT HELP YOU STAY HEALTHY AND INJURY FREE?

While injuries in sports are inevitable, Vaughan said proper programming for both in-season and out-of-season training can decrease your risk for injury. Spending time improving your strength, endurance and movement mechanics will set you up to perform at your highest potential with the greatest chance of staying on the field for the whole season. “If you don’t know where to start, seek out a training or rehab professional who can help set you up on a specific plan to meet your goals,” he said.

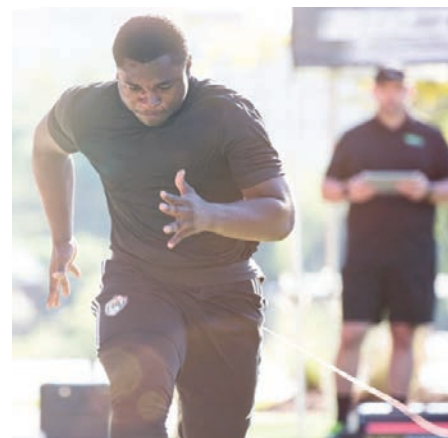

SHOULD YOU DO THE SAME TRAINING YEAR-ROUND?

“During a portion of the off season, you need to train differently than you do during the in season. It is important to shift your focus from practicing on the field to getting stronger and faster. This may mean fewer soccer practices and more weight room sessions, fewer long practices/runs and more running mechanic training,” said Vaughan. The off season also gives you an opportunity to focus on resolving any lingering injuries or aches from your in-season training.

WILL PLAYING OTHER SPORTS HELP YOU BE A BETTER ATHLETE?

Vaughan said research shows there are great benefits from playing other sports. “Playing other sports can help promote overall athleticism and introduce new ways to strength train or improve cardio endurance, as well as prevent athlete burnout and reduce your overall risk of injury.”

Use a Pro to Get Your Home Ready to Sell

www.bestlakemurrayhomes.com

There are always things to do in order to get your home ready to put on the market. Some are large ticket items, some small, and some may not be necessary at all. It takes a pair of skilled eyes to help you separate the must-do from the don't-bother. An experienced, savvy real estate agent can assist you in deciding how to put your checklist together.

For example, your aged kitchen may really need a makeover, but that's a very expensive project. So, you're thinking about simply putting on new countertops to give the room a little punch. Your agent might agree or might say that's only putting a bandaid on something that needs a total facelift. Your new countertops could stand out like a sore thumb instead of helping the kitchen's appearance. New owners may want to do the complete remodel themselves and your new countertops will be ripped out anyway.

Agents are experts at evaluating what needs to be done. Your agent will tour your property inside and out to show you what needs to be done to attract qualified buyers. It is very difficult to look at your own home with an objective eye. You need to look at it the way prospective buyers will, and that's a difficult task. It's hard to see flaws after living with them for years. It also can be very emotional because your home is full of memories and your individual decorating choices. Deciding what to change or repair to give it a more neutral appearance can be a sensitive issue. You need an agent to walk you through the process.

Choosing the Right Attorney

If someone asked you to name your single largest financial asset, what would you say? For most people, the answer is "my home." It makes sense. It is an asset buyers put down thousands of dollars to acquire, and for which sellers have to navigate successful transfers. The crazy part is that most buyers and sellers only do it a few times in their lives and are therefore naturally inexperienced in this process. Unfortunately, inexperience in real estate matters can result in problems in the future with the property and nobody wants that to happen. Buyers and sellers therefore have to rely on the experience and expertise of others, including realtors, lenders, and real estate lawyers. In South Carolina lawyers are required to be involved in real estate matters. This helps everyone involved, as the lawyer performs many functions which result in buyers and sellers having the confidence that their largest assets are legally protected and properly transferred. You have the right to have the lawyer YOU choose representing you. Sometimes everyone will agree to use the same lawyer- (that's OK if everyone agrees and is common). If not, that's OK, too. It's YOUR choice. In choosing your lawyer you should choose a lawyer with whom you can feel comfortable and confident. Just because a lawyer can perform the work, doesn't mean that they are always the right lawyer for you. Whomever you choose should be willing to answer your questions. You should not feel like a "deer in the headlights." Your lawyer should be able to put you at ease and give you confidence that your biggest asset matters to them, too. At the end of the day, that can make all the difference.

Lexington Medical Center Launches "Be Well" Campaign

Lexington Medical Center has partnered with several local municipalities and Dominion Energy to provide water fountains and hand-painted murals that encourage wellness.

The drinking fountains, which include water filling stations, are located at these popular locations in Lexington County:

- Gibson Pond Park in Lexington
- Riverwalk Park & Amphitheater and Carraway Park in West Columbia
- Cayce Riverwalk at the Naples Street and Timmerman Trail entrances in Cayce
- Lake Murray Dam Walkway (Irmo and Lexington sides of the dam)

The partnerships between Lexington Medical Center and the City of West Columbia, the City of Cayce, the Town of Lexington and Dominion Energy promote healthy living and encourage the public to "Be Well."

"We selected locations widely used by residents and visitors," said Lara Lott Moore, vice president for community medical centers at Lexington Medical Center. "Providing water filling stations throughout the communities we serve promotes outdoor activity and good health. We want everyone to live a healthy life and be well."

In addition, the hospital placed hand-painted murals with the "Be Well" message at Irmo Community Park, Riverbanks Botanical Garden, Columbiana Centre mall and Segra Park. The rocket at the South Carolina State Fair and a flower bed on the hospital's front lawn also carry the "Be Well" message.
