"Fear not; for I am with you: be not dismayed; for I am your God: I will strengthen you; yes, I will help you; yes, I will uphold you with the right hand of My righteousness." - Isaiah 41:10

If you are fearful or anxious about situations in life, then welcome to humanity. The faulty belief that it's wrong to feel the emotion of fear has caused many strong Christians to spiral down into spiritual depression. It is quite common in Christian circles to be condemned for having the feelings of fear, yet fear itself is not sinful. The issue is how we handle fear in our lives.

Numerous times the Lord Jesus told His disciples not to be afraid. What Jesus was teaching them was not to embrace fear and allow it to control their spirit and their emotions. The Lord Jesus did not mean that they were sinful because fear popped up spontaneously due to an unexpected startling experience. It is unrealistic to think that we won't have those fearful feelings. Even though God has not given us "the spirit of fear" (2 Timothy 1:7), don't think that fear won't be lurking around. However, the question is, "How do we handle fear and anxiety when it does pop up?"

In Isaiah 41, God gives three reasons why we do not have to embrace the fear that comes our way. First, God reassures us that "I am with you." The very reason that God's presence is with us should be our confidence in the face of fear.

Secondly, God reassures us that "I am your God." Our God is the Sovereign One, and this statement declares that He has an invested interest in His people. God is not indifferent with the affairs of our lives. God declares that we belong to Him - and He to us! So God stands supreme over our lives and all things that seem to threaten us.

Lastly, God reassures us that "I will strengthen you, yes, I will help you; yes, I will uphold you with the right hand of My righteousness." What God is affirming is that as the Sovereign One He is proactive for us. We were not saved from sin and then left to ourselves to navigate through life on our own until we reach heaven. Absolutely not! The God who says, "Fear not," will take up our cause by strengthening, helping, and upholding us in all of our fearful trials.

If you find yourself fearful, don't condemn yourself for having that initial feeling. The apostle Paul once wrote, "I was with you in weakness and in fear and in much trembling" (1 Corinthians 2:3). Nevertheless, Paul faced fear by faith in God. Someone once said that, "Courage isn't the absence of fear, but acting boldly in the face of fear." Our greatest threat is not fear. Our greatest threat is inactivity because of fear. Regardless of our fears and anxiety may we move forward by faith trusting in the God who says, "Fear not."

Welcome to our Church

Another Disney classic, produced with a cast of Marshall County youth, comes to the stage starting this weekend with a production of Moana Jr., based on the 2016 animated movie.

Moana Jr. comes ashore this weekend

By Scott Pearson
Associate Editor

A stirring tale of old Polynesia comes to the Dixie Theatre this weekend as the Marshall County Community Theatre's version of Moana Jr. opens Saturday.

Based on the 2016 Disney animated film "Moana", the musical follows the story of Moana, a Polynesian girl who is chosen by the ocean itself to right a past wrong and free her island from a blight that keeps them from sailing the open sea.

Moana, played by Alex Whiteside, must defy her parents Chief Tui, played by Will Beasley, and Sina, played by Ginny Newton, and tries to set sail with her rooster Hei Hei, played by Grayson Tidwell, and pig Pua, played by Abigail Grant, before a storm wrecks her canoe.

Trying again with the support of her grandmother Tala, played by Hannah Grant, and ancestors, played by Reagan Harris, Kyleigh Neill, and Caroline Perryman, Moana sails to find the demigod Maui, played by Anthony Smith, to assist her in her quest.

The pair battle monsters, played by Will Beasley, Julian Adams, and Ben Beasley, face off with the crab Tamatoa, played by Brax Hunter, and struggle with their own fears before the final confrontation with the volcano demon Te Ka, hoping to restore the nature goddess Te Fiti, both played by Karlie Lohr, to health.

Along the way, they encounter a tiny insect, played by Adie Rae Miller, and various fishers, played by Julian Adams, Olympia Cathey, and AnnElise George, and villagers, played by Eleanor Buckley, Caroline Jackson, and Anna Perryman.

The ensembles in the show play particularly important roles, with the Ocean, fitting for a story set in the vast Pacific, spending most of the musical on stage and acting as a character in the plot.

Ocean Ensemble members are Jerni Armstrong, Charleigh Bailey, Anna Kate Bass, Carrie Bollinger, Kensley Demastus, Brooke Dyer, Kennedy McKay, Maggy Phillips, Alexis Price, and Emma Grace Walker.

Treasure hungry Tamatoa's Shiny Ensemble earns their title as well, played by Eleanor Buckley, Olympia Cathey, Mattie Cockerill, Kylie Demastus, Ginny Newton, Karlie Lohr, Landry Smith, and Ava Wakham.

The Maui ensemble consists of Julian Adams, Ben Beasley, Ca-

Marshall County Recovery Court receives certification

Recovery Courts improve education, employment, housing and financial stability, reduce foster care placements, promote family reunification, and increase the rate of addicted mothers delivering babies who are fully drug free. Tennessee operates only 50 adult recovery courts, and Marshall County is home to one of the newest State Certificated Recovery Court Programs. Under the leadership of presiding judge, Lee Bussart, the Recovery Court reduces correctional costs while ensuring public safety with strict clinical oversight.

The Marshall County Recovery Court is available to misdemeanor, non-violent offenders in Marshall County. Marshall County receives an annual $50,000 grant from the State of Tennessee to fund the Recovery Court Program.

Recovery Courts rely on community partnerships. Marshall County's Recovery Program created a unique legal-medical partnership between Marshall County and Maury Regional Hospital. Commission establishes new department

By Scott Pearson
Associate Editor

The Marshall County Commission marked the beginning of some new projects and heard updates on the progress of others at Monday night's monthly meeting.

The commission approved a resolution establishing the county's human resources office as a department level entity, reporting directly to the County Mayor's Office.

When established in 2017, human resource employees were included in, and reported to, the county budget office.

Mayor Mike Keny said that the intention from the beginning was always to split off the department and with current Director Beth Stockwell in place for over a year it made sense to "do it now or never bother."

Commissioner Tony Beyer added that the budget office had enough on its plate and that while the departments were aligned there was enough difference in duties to separate the two.

Commissioners also celebrated the state's certification of the county's newly established Recovery Court. See separate story on Page 1 of today's Marshall County Tribune.

Commissioners approved a pair of resolutions concerning funding finishing touches at the new health department building being constructed on War Eagle Drive.

One item was the acceptance of $75,000 in CARES Act funding to install an awning

Obituaries

Nancy Jane Boyd Bradley

Nancy Jane Boyd Bradley, 83, passed away Friday, February 25, 2022, in NHC Oakwood after suffering a stroke a few weeks earlier. The daughter of Oscar Stephens Boyd and Alice Elizabeth Thomas Boyd, she was born at the family home on Third Avenue, Dec. 24, 1938, into one of Lewisburg's most influential business families. She was predeceased by her parents, her younger sister, Betty Louise Boyd Pusey and husband, Bob Pusey, her sister-in-law, Charlene Bradley Nicholas (Nick), and her son George Ewell "Brad" Bradley, Jr. She is survived by her loving and devoted husband, George Ewell Bradley, Sr., who she married Aug. 31, 1963 (58 years ago); her son John Stephens Bradley and his wife, Tammy of Cornersville; her daughter-in-law Terrie K. Bradley of Lewisburg; her three granddaughters, Lauren Bradley Johnson (Zach) of Lewisburg, Anna Grace Bradley and Mary Kate Bradley of Cornersville; her nieces and nephews, Nancy Nicholas Hobbs of Lewisburg, Elizabeth Pusey Brown (Mike) of Virginia Beach, VA; Boyd Pusey of Unicoi, TN; Brian Pusey of Radford, VA; and Eleanor Pusey of Little River, SC. Her first great-grandchild is expected in May. To all of these family members and her many friends, she was a ray of sunshine and a great source of personal encouragement.

School for Laboratory Technology in Atlanta and became certified by the American Society of Clinical Pathologists. During the years 1962 to 1993, she held laboratory positions at Crawford-Long Hospital in Atlanta; St. Thomas Hospital in Nashville; Rohm and Haas Chemical Manufacturing in Huntsville, AL; Maury County Hospital in Columbia, TN; Taylor's Hospital in Lewisburg; and Williamson Medical Center in Franklin, TN. She became a certified medical supervisor in 1985.

Apart from her medical career, she enjoyed music, art, antiques, gardens, history, and literature. As a trained pianist, she found great pleasure in playing the oldest hymns for her own enjoyment and truly appreciated classical music. She was an early supporter of the Nashville Symphony where she often took friends to afternoon organ concerts at the Schermerhorn Center. For many years, she volunteered monthly at the Birmingham Botanical Garden, where she knew the scientific names of most of the plantings. At one time she had over 100 varieties of ferns in her personal garden and knew the Latin name for each one. For several years, she was an active member of the local Iris Society and the Tennessee Iris Society. With an appreciation for fine antiques, she surrounded herself with collectibles and helped preserve many Marshall County artifacts. A charter member of the Marshall County Historical Society, she has served on the board of directors for the past 20 years. She and her husband were instrumental in establishing the Marshall County Museum at Hardison Annex. The highlight of each week was the time she spent with the Friday Night Friends at the Lewisburg Elks Lodge, where her husband has been a member for 60 years.

A life-long Christian, Mrs. Bradley attended Church Street Church of Christ during her childhood and teen years, but made sure to attend church camp each summer with the youth at First Cumberland Presbyterian Church of Lewisburg, where her grandmother, Mrs. Bessie Boyd, was a noted Bible scholar and much-loved Sunday School teacher. Most recently she has been an active member of First United Methodist Church of Lewisburg. In prior years she was a member of the Farmington United Methodist Church where she served as the Youth Leader. She also was a Cub Scout den mother for her son's troop.

Active pallbearers are Zach Johnson, Todd Lovett, Roger Carroll, Chesney Gold, Eric Walker, and Mike Wells. Honorary pallbearers are the Friday Night Friends of the Lewisburg Elks Lodge and members of the MCHS Class of 1957.

For those who wish, donations may be given to the First United Methodist Church Building Fund or a charity of your choice.

Don't you just love laundry day?

By Danny Tyree

I despise airing my dirty laundry in public, but I'll make an exception for kvetching about my clean laundry.

I have primary responsibility for my family's laundry. Fair enough. I realize I should be grateful that I am spared the drudgery of the old wringer washer or beating garments against river rocks; but because of various aggravations, my thoughts tend to be less "ring around the collar" than "hands around somebody's throat."

It's not just the cliché of vanishing sock mates or the unergonomic design of washers and dryers or the notion that in 2022 we still have dyes that run fast enough to win Olympic gold.

It's not just the confusing settings (I stick with two favorites: "like it" or "lump it") or even "never needs ironing" malarkey. (That's like the maternity ward sending a baby home emblazoned with a "Never Needs Changing" stamp.)

Surely, I'm not the only person who suspects that clothes washers are sentient beings who know exactly when to make mischief. If you're shaving, relaxing on the throne or battling a grease fire, odds are that the house will suddenly reverberate with the "WOMP WOMP WOMP" of the dreaded Unbalanced Load. ("Thanks for moving the mitten a silly little millimeter to the left, buddy.

Fourth time's the charm. We cool?")

If you manage to get most of the water spun out of the load, then the eccentricities of the clothes dryer come into play.

You'll convince yourself that you have time to empty the dryer and put in a new load of wet wash before scooting out the door for work, but you'll come up against the harsh reality that a playful sheet has made the Ultimate Sacrifice in the dryer.

Like a parent shielding his child from a crazed gunman, the soggy queen-size sheet has wrapped five pairs of socks, two towels and a Hard Rock Café T-shirt in its loving embrace. (Hey, queen - we are not amused!)

C'mon, dryer, you've got basically two jobs: tumble the laundry and dry it. But I'll bet the show-off could work a Rubik's Cube without breaking a sweat. I really don't need the sleeves of multiple shirts eternally melded like family members at Pompeii. And I'm not awarding a Cub Scout knot-tying merit badge just because ol' Kenmore can convert frayed towel threads into a sheepshank around blouse buttons.

No matter how expertly you position the clothes basket, you'll have E.D. problems. And by E.D. I mean "escaping drawers." (Grow up!) Open the dryer door and nice, clean underwear will turn somersaults in a death-dive for the floor.

It's weird that we used to call underwear "unmentionables." I mention them quite often. ("Dirty razzin frazzin...")

My mother does not own a clothes dryer, preferring to go "old school" with an outdoor clothesline. (Ironic that the people who hated school are the ones who wind up clinging to "old school" behavior. But I digress.) Yeah, she saves some electricity, but having seen tomcats marking their territory on perky percales, I would be willing to fly a kite in a thunderstorm to keep the clothes dryer going.

Don't get me started on opportunistic birds scouting your neighborhood. ("Whoa! Victoria's Secret is the Mercedes Benz of lingerie! Anybody need a pit stop?")

Forgive the rant. But nothing gets your panties in a wad like getting your panties in a wad.

Defeating patent trolls

By Grover Christopher Collins

Main Street has had a tough few years here in Tennessee and across the country. Restaurants, shops, and hotels - the businesses that make up the heart of our downtowns - have struggled to stay afloat during the pandemic. Unfortunately, when many of these businesses are already facing challenges from supply chain problems to labor shortages, too many small businesses have been confronted by yet another hurdle: letters from "non-practicing entities" (sometimes called NPEs or patent trolls). These NPEs scam small businesses by demanding payment for supposed infringement on patents they own for very common processes.

These NPEs, or so-called trolls, are companies that exist only to purchase vague, low-quality patents and threaten businesses with baseless lawsuits. In one notorious example, an NPE purchased a patent that claimed to own the very idea of scanning a document to email - and then sent out letters to hundreds of small businesses around the country demanding they pay up. For many small businesses, it's cheaper and easier to pay off an NPE with a settlement than to go to court. With $29 billion lost in patent troll litigation each year, these growing, frivolous lawsuits have stymied American innovation, directly hurting consumers and businesses in the process.

Congress has long recognized the damage that NPEs can inflict on small businesses and took action to fix it in 2011 through the America Invents Act (AIA). The bipartisan bill established the Inter Partes Review (IPR) program, which gives businesses a cost-effective way to challenge patent trolls and the validity of low-quality patents. Reforms like these have led to a $2.95 billion increase in GDP and an over $1 billion increase in personal income for everyday Americans.

In recent years, the AIA has been gutted by changes from the USPTO, undermining the law's original intent. These changes include dramatically weakening IPR by ignoring valid patent challenges. As a result, these alterations have allowed bad actors to continue weaponizing patents for their own financial gain, all while businesses lose $29 billion from litigation each year.

When so many businesses are struggling, we need Congress to take action again. Fortunately, there is bipartisan legislation that can help. Last year, Senators Patrick Leahy (D-VT) and John Cornyn (R-TX) introduced the Restoring the America Invents Act (RAIA). The RAIA will restore the AIA to its original intent of protecting innovators and small businesses by strengthening the IPR program, closing loopholes, and ensuring IPR petitions are heard. So far, neither of Tennessee's senators have signed on to this important legislation, despite their talk about standing up for Tennessee's business community.

Main Street can't wait any longer for Congress to address the ongoing abuse of our patent system. Congress can fix this problem - they've done it before, and there is good legislation in the Senate right now that will help businesses like mine. It's time for Senator Marsha Blackburn and Senator Bill Hagerty to stand up for Main Street and sponsor the RAIA. By passing the RAIA, we can ensure that our patent system reinforces high-quality patents, dismisses low-quality patents, and continues supporting Tennessee's innovators, businesses, and manufacturers.

The urine tax

Some of you may have wondered whether my cat was walking across the keyboard while I was typing the title of my column, Pecunia Non Olet. Or those of you who went to or have kids in law school or medical school may have detected something vaguely familiar in those funny-looking words. Pecunia non olet is a Latin phrase that translates into "Money has no smell." So why have I chosen that as the title of my column?

The words are ascribed to the Roman emperor Vespasian (69 - 79 AD). In an effort to increase the tax take of his empire, Vespasian imposed several levies, one of which was on urine from public toilets. Though its commercial use has thankfully fallen out of favor in the last few centuries, urine once had several economic uses, primarily in tanning.

Vespasian's son Titus, who would succeed Vespasian as the reigning emperor during the eruption of Mount Vesuvius, was put off by the malodorous tax. Holding up a gold coin in his defense, Vespasian asked whether the scent of the coin offended his son's senses, to which Titus replied that it did not. When Vespasian pointed out that the money came from urine, the phrase Pecunia non olet was born.

The phrase generally is used to express the belief that money is money, regardless of where it came from. While the phrase most often is associated with money acquired from dubious sources, I like the phrase in a more unprejudiced connotation: there are many [legitimate] ways to make money. And this is meant to be a general business, money, economics, and investment column.

In the spring of 2020, the owner of this newspaper suffered severe wind damage to its Shelbyville, TN property, with the effect that employees practically had to carry umbrellas inside the building that summer on rainy days. The roof ultimately was replaced at a cost below the final insurance payout, and in a plague year the surplus payout was very welcome. To people who say I was lucky, I say, "Pecunia non olet."

Navigating the next few years

By Lee H. Hamilton

A few weeks ago, New York Times columnist Thomas Friedman made a startling suggestion. He proposed a cross-party 2024 presidential ticket: Joe Biden and Liz Cheney, perhaps, or Kamala Harris and Mitt Romney, or another combination of a leading Democrat and an anti-Trump Republican.

Friedman's reasoning is that the US is at a crossroads, and he contends that the main body of the Republican Party "has shown that it isn't committed any longer to playing by democratic rules, leaving the United States uniquely threatened among Western democracies." Under these circumstances, he wrote, the country needs a "broad national unity vehicle" that would draw members of both parties. "We all have to be small-d democrats now, or we won't have a system to be big-D or big-R anythings," he continued.

To buttress his argument, he turned to Israel's current national unity government, which united members of the right and left in an effort to turn down the heat generated by former Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu's bid to delegitimize the government and judicial system. As Israeli leaders "treat each other... with a little more respect, and a little less contempt, because they are out of Facebook and into face-to-face relations again, stuff is getting done," Friedman writes.

It was certainly an attention-getting column, and it's hard to argue with the idea that we and our democratic system remain in perilous times. It may well be that to avoid a lurch toward authoritarianism, or at least toward a government that willfully violates democratic norms, some dramatic development like Friedman's suggestion will prove appealing to many Americans.

But looking back at the sweep of American history we also need to keep in mind that our system as it stands now, for all its flaws, has served us remarkably well. For over 200 years, through some very tough times, we've wrestled with the problem of how government should work in a democracy. We've persisted through economic turmoil, world wars, a terrible depression, and social and racial tumult. Each time, though the path has at times been harrowing, we've adjusted, found common ground, passed legislation that, in general, has made this a fairer and more just nation, and moved forward.

It's worth remembering that this is a pragmatic country that mostly prefers the middle to the extremes. In a writeup noting that 2021 saw the balance in party identification shift from leaning Democratic toward leaning Republican as the year wore on, Gallup pointed out that, overall last year, "an average of 29% of Americans identified as Democrats, 27% as Republicans and 42% as independents. Roughly equal proportions of independents leaned to the Democratic Party (17%) and to the Republican Party (16%)." Ours is still an electorate that is most comfortable in the center.

The truth is, it's impossible to see around the next political corner. There's no question that there are worrisome trends, especially the taste for restricting and possibly even overturning the vote that we've seen in recent years in Republican-dominated state legislatures and the increasingly outsized influence that sparsely populated states hold on Capitol Hill. Yet if there's one thing that our centuries of experience with representative democracy tell us, it's that Americans are fiercely creative about exercising their democratic rights and that when things get out of kilter they pull the country back on course.

Don't get me wrong. When Lincoln asked at Gettysburg whether this nation "so conceived and so dedicated" can endure, he was posing a question for all time. Our status as a democracy and as a land of opportunity for all has never been a given, and never will be. Lincoln spoke at a battlefield that was the result of the last time we failed utterly to navigate deep national divisions; the Civil War left such deep scars that we're still not over them.

Clawing our way back from perilous times to a government in Washington that is capable of "getting things done," as Friedman put it in his column, will take time, patience, and a willingness to compromise—on both sides of the aisle—that's been in short supply in recent years. But we've done it before. My hope and belief is that we can do it again.

Tips to Recognize Ripe Fruits

(Culinary.net)

Keeping fresh fruit around the house provides a healthier alternative when your sweet tooth comes calling. Understanding how and when to buy at the peak of ripeness (or just before, in some cases) can help you avoid food waste while keeping your doctor happy.

Consider these simple tips for recognizing ripe fruits:

- Strawberries: Check the area at the top of the berry near the stem and leaves. A ripe strawberry is fully red; green or white near the top means the fruit is underripe.
- Watermelon: The "field spot," or the area where the melon sat on the ground, should be yellow, and a tap on the rind should produce a hollow sound.
- Cherries: Flesh should appear dark with a crimson color and feel firm.

- Blueberries: Similar to cherries, color should deepen to dark blue. A reddish or pink color may be visible in unripe berries.

- Blackberries: Look for a smooth texture without any red appearance. Because blackberries don't ripen after being picked, they tend to spoil quickly.

- Cantaloupe: You should detect a sweet smell, and the melon should feel heavy upon lifting.

- Peaches: A sweet, fragrant odor should be apparent. Skin should feel tender but not soft.

- Pineapple: Smell is again an important factor for pineapple - a sweet scent shows it's ready, but a vinegary one likely means it's overripe.

- Raspberries: Generally follow the same rules as blackberries. Best eaten within a couple days of purchase, a bright red color represents ripe berries.

- Bananas: A ripe banana features a peel lightly spotted without significant bruising. Your best bet may be to purchase bananas still slightly green and allow them to ripen at home.

McCoy's run highlights Rockets in state tourney

By Chris Siers
sports@t-g.com

FRANKLIN — The Forrest Rockets saw four wrestlers qualify for the Class A state wrestling tournament, held at the Williamson County Expo Center.

While all four Rockets won matches in the state competition, it was Seth McCoy's run at the 145-pound weight class that highlighted the tournament for Forrest as he finished fourth overall in his division.

McCoy got his tournament started with a win via pin over Fairview's Blake Mitchell at the 1:53 mark.

In the quarterfinal round, McCoy posted his second-straight victory in an all-out battle where he finally pinned Cole Jenkins of Signal Mountain at the 4:42 mark.

It wasn't until the state semifinals that McCoy suffered a defeat when he was pinned by Greeneville's Hunter Mason at the 1:23 mark.

He rebounded in the consolation bracket to defeat Polk County's Sasha Warner just 44 seconds in to the match with a pin.

In the fight for third place, Knoxville Halls' Harlen Hunley pinned McCoy in 1:19 to finish third in the 145-pound class.

In total, McCoy scored a total of 18 points for the Rockets in the tournament.

Braiden Vanderploeg competed in the 138-pound class and after falling in the opening round at the 4:46 mark, rebounded to pin Gibbs' Juleon Maldonado in the consolation bracket in a 4:55 battle.

came to an end in the second round of the consolation bracket when he was defeated by a 3-1 decision.

At the 160-pound class, Forest Ozburn got off to a red-hot start with an 8-0 major decision victory over Bennett McDougal.

In the quarterfinals, Ozburn gave Briar Whaley an all-out battle that took 4:41 before Whaley got the upper hand and win via pin.

Ozburn answered with a 9-5 decision in the consolation round over Martin Luther King's Samuel Mast before seeing his run come to an end in a 7-0 decision to Billy Tate.

Nathan Hall was the final Forrest wrestler to reach the state tournament and after falling in just 54 seconds in the opening round match to Hixon's Landon Moore, Hall answered with a pin over Caleb Turner of Knoxville Halls in 3:54.

His tournament run came to an end via major decision when Jalen Wright won a 9-1 major decision in the second round of the consolation bracket.

Vanderploeg finished the season with a 21-8 overall record, Ozburn finished with a 22-10 record, with Hall turning in a 24-9 overall record. Including his fourth-place finish, McCoy finished the 2021-2022 season with a 24-5 overall record.

Forest Ozburn gains the upper hand against Bennett McDougal in his 8-0 victory in the first-round of the 160-pound class.

Tiger senior picks Columbia State

By Chris Siers
sports@t-g.com

When it came time for Tristan Griggs to sign his letter of intent, the closeness of Columbia State and the homey feel just made it the perfect fit for the Marshall County senior made it official as he recently signed with the Chargers.

With the pressures of choosing a college, not just for academics, but for baseball as well, out of the way, Griggs says he's ready to focus on having a strong finish to his career at Marshall County.

"I just came in and signed. I'm just ready for the season to start. I really loved the coaching staff. They have a really good ball club this year. It just felt like home to me," he said.

Griggs has become known as Mr. Utility with his versatility to play just about any position on the field—a perk which Tiger coach Mike "Monk" Reese says is an invaluable asset for the Tigers this season and Columbia State in the future.

"This year it's tremendously important. Bryson (Hammons) signed with Motlow and is coming off a knee injury and probably won't get to catch this season," Reese said.

Griggs primarily plays in the outfield, but aims to be the go-to backstop for the Tigers this season.

"Hopefully we'll get him (Hammons) back to do some other things, but Tristan has taken on the role as our catcher. He was our backup catcher when Bryson would come in to pitch or close. I like him back there. He can play lots of positions, but he can really run that outfield."

In addition to his versatility that allows him to field just about any position, Griggs factors into the Tigers' batting lineup with his power hitting as well.

"Tristan is a remarkable young man in terms of his work habits. If not the best, he's right at the very top of the best athletes in our school. He's a tremendous guy to coach. He's fun to coach because of his work habits and his

Bulldogs' season ends in region quarterfinals

Tribune Staff Report

RICHLAND — After playing the Richland Raiders within four points at halftime of the Region 5-A quarterfinals on Saturday, the Cornersville Bulldogs struggled to match second-half scoring and suffered a season-ending, 52-36 defeat.

Richland built a 16-10 lead by the end of the first quarter, but Richland managed to hang around.

The biggest difference in the opening quarter came with a pair of made 3-pointers by the Raiders to build the six-point lead, while Cornersville was held scoreless from the arc.

After falling behind by six, the Bulldogs rallied around Eli Welch in the second period and outscored the Raiders, 12-10, to cut the lead to four by halftime.

Welch wouldn't be denied as he went for eight of the Bulldogs' 12 points in the quarter.

While momentum had shifted in favor of the underdogs in the second quarter, the pendulum swung the other direction in the third quarter as Cornersville was held to just four points, including one field goal by Welch.

The other two points came via free throws by Blaine Woodard, while Richland charged ahead with another 14 points, powered by three more 3-pointers.

While the Bulldogs rallied for 10 in the fourth quarter, Cornersville just couldn't overcome the deficit from the third quarter.

Richland put three players in double figures, with Jace Derryberry's 16 points leading all scorers.

Carter Edwards and Trey Luna chipped in 12 and 10, respectively.

Welch was the only Bulldog to reach double figures as he posted a team-high 12 points, while Blaine Woodard added nine.

Cornersville closes the 2021-2022 season with an 11-14 overall record.

Rockets' rally not enough as season ends

Tribune Staff Report

NASHVILLE — A 20-point fourth-quarter rally wasn't enough for the Forrest Rockets in the Region 4-AA quarterfinals on Saturday at Pearl Cohn.

Despite unleashing a barrage of 3-pointers, the Firebirds were able to withstand the Rocket rally and claim the 66-56 win to end Forrest's season.

The Firebirds posted an 11-point, 24-13 lead after the first frame, but was never able to truly put the Rockets out of reach.

After being held to single digits in the second quarter, Forrest rallied in the third for 15 points, while Pearl Cohn tacked on another 20 for a 53-36 lead after the third frame.

But Forrest, led by Hunter Bennett, went for 20 points in the fourth quarter, including four made treys.

Bennett scored 10 of his team-high 20 points in the quarter, including two 3-pointers.

Brennan Mealer and Andrew Timmons both added 11 points for the Rockets as well.

Pearl Cohn was led by Jack Wade's game-high 25 points.

Forrest closes the season with an 11-16 record.

think the plate as well.

"They want me to play outfield as the main and my secondary will be catching," he said.

Since his earliest days of playing since he was four to five years old, Griggs has continually grown in the game and Reese feels Griggs' best playing days are ahead of him.

"He has another upside. I don't think he's come close to reaching his potential because he's a tremendous athlete. I'm hoping he's going to have a great year for us. I see him in the near future progressing and not only going to junior college, but to Division I ball because he has that ability," Reese said.

Throughout all his time playing, one game stands out for Griggs and it came in a 3-2 win at Lewis County during the 2019 season.

"I remember freshman year, I think we were playing Lewis County. I hit one to left field, but they ended up catching it, but I scored the winning run," he said.

While he's undecided in terms of choosing a major, Reese says no matter how he fits in the roster his senior season and in the future, Griggs will be a key impact player as long as he's on the field.

"He has a lot of pop in his bat and that can do nothing but get better. He's an impact player, not just for our team, but also our district this year. I know Columbia State is happy to get him," Reese said.

Forrest's Megan Mealer (15) was taking the ball to the rack all night and it turned into 13 points, including a 7-for-10 effort from the free throw line.

Lady Rockets pummel Whites Creek in region opener

By Anthony S. Puca

CHAPEL HILL — The Forrest Lady Rockets' senior class had never played in a region tournament quarterfinal until Friday at Chapel Hill where they took full advantage of the opportunity, pummeling the Whites Creek Lady Cobras 62-12 in the Region 4-AA Tournament.

The 50-point win was the largest margin of victory for Forrest since the ultra-lopsided 91-13 landslide over F.C. Boyd Christian School on January 19, 2010 at Chapel Hill.

"I'm more happy than anything for my two seniors in Addison Bunty and Ryann Lewis, who have never had a chance to go to the second round of the region," Forrest coach Hal Murrell said. "If you would have told us this summer when we were playing in camp at Eagleville that we would be where we are, I would have said no way."

The two Forrest seniors combined for 23 of the 62 points in the game, with Bunty leading all scorers in the contest with 16 points, including four 3-pointers.

Lewis scored all seven of her points in the game from the charity stripe, missing just one free throw.

Freshman Kinslee Inlow banged home four 3-pointers and a field goal for 14 points and Megan Mealer also had a solid game with 13 points and a 7-for-10 effort from the free throw line.

Macyn Kirby had five points with one long bomb and went 2-for-2 from the charity stripe. Carli Warner knocked down a long rainbow 3-pointer in the second half and Cadence Chapman and Meagan Scaggs had two points apiece.

Forrest started the game strong and fast as they took advantage of a myriad of Lady Cobra turnovers that turned in to points at the other end.

"I had watched them play a few days ago in their district tournament and I felt like it was a team would could pressure and get some easy baskets," Murrell said.

Bunty drilled three 3-pointers in the first quarter and Mealer had seven points as the Lady Rockets blanked Whites Creek 23-0 in the stanza.

A 10-0 run that was capped off with a Mealer rebound and put-back to begin the second period made it 33-0 when Zakiyah Meneese knocked down a 3-pointer for Whites Creek with 2:28 remaining in the first half.

Chapman came up with a bucket in the paint and Bunty picked up where she started, draining a long bomb to give the Lady Rockets a 38-3 lead at the break.

Inlow owned the third, knocking down a pair of 3-pointers and a field goal while Warner's three gave Forrest a 55-9 lead late in the stanza.

The fourth quarter was played under the TSSAA 35-point mercy rule with a running clock as the Lady Rockets celebrated what was their final home game of the season.

MLB fans take gut-punch of canceled games

By DAVID BRANDT
AP Sports Writer

PHOENIX (AP) — Nathan Rueckert's personal finances are loosely tied to Major League Baseball, thanks to the 20 years or so he has spent building his company that produces hand-crafted artwork catered to fans.

That's not why Tuesday was a very bad day. At heart, Rueckert simply loves baseball. And like most baseball fans, he reacted with a mix of resignation, dismay, sadness and anger when MLB Commissioner Rob Manfred announced that opening day on March 31 was canceled because the players' union and management couldn't strike a labor deal in time to end a 90-day lockout.

"I just think of all the father-son moments that are going to be missed," said Rueckert, who operates Baseball Seams Co. from his home in South Dakota. "All those opportunities that are robbed by a season that might not even exist. Especially with the state of the country and the world, baseball is such a great distraction.

"People want to go to the ballpark, have a hot dog and get rid of stress."

For fans, MLB's decision to cancel games only adds to their stress. And anger. Or, maybe most concerning — apathy.

It's the latest setback for a sport that's had arguably the worst luck of the biggest U.S. sports leagues — which include the NFL, NBA, NHL and MLB — when it comes to COVID-19. The pandemic started in mid-March of 2020, immediately shutting down spring training less than three weeks before opening day and causing the season to be shortened by more than 100 games.

No other league lost a bigger chunk of its schedule.

There wasn't much that could be done about a pandemic. Labor squabbles over how to allocate money in a $10 billion industry are a different story. Now, for the second time in three seasons, at least some regular-season games won't be played.

There are no heroes in this lockout tale, but much of the social media vitriol has been directed at Manfred, who has been commissioner since 2015. He was spotted practicing his golf swing between bargaining sessions by an Associated Press photographer on Tuesday. Others were upset that Manfred was laughing and jovial with reporters at his news conference announcing the cancellation.

It's safe to say baseball fans are not amused.

"The people need the games after getting through COVID-19 to lift our spirits and get back to normal," said Toronto Blue Jays fan Bill Farina, who lives in Palm Harbor, Florida, and was watching a Senators-Lightning NHL game. "I am disappointed in baseball. They don't care about the fans, and fans are going to leave them behind.

"Why would they stay and support these guys just to get burned?"

St. Louis Cardinals fan Hunter Kniffin is among many who wonder if the game can survive a lengthy work stoppage. He was a teenager during the 1994-95 strike that wiped out a World Series and about 70 regular-season games for each team.

He remembers the fan apathy that followed and the way the sport was eventually energized by the Mark McGwire-Sammy Sosa home run race that captivated the country in 1998. He's not sure baseball will be as fortunate this time. It's a different world than the mid-to-late 1990s and there are more options for entertainment than ever.

"It could be a lot harder to bounce back this time," said Kniffin, who goes to about 10 games each year. "I just don't see how baseball can afford to lose any more exposure to the other major sports."

Pittsburgh Pirates fan Anthony Margiotta has two sons who play youth baseball. He's a diehard who said the lockout won't affect his plans to attend games when and if they're played, especially if there's good weather on a summer night.

But he also knows many fans aren't like him. If baseball's out of sight, it's out of mind, and it's certainly not attracting any younger fans when games are canceled.

"I'm sure this isn't helping things, let's just say that," the 45-year-old Margiotta said.

The scariest part for MLB could be that many fans seemed resigned to baseball's popularity fade. Joe Hart was wearing a Detroit Tigers hat on Tuesday night but watching another sport, taking in a Pistons-Wizards NBA game in Washington.

He said the decision to cancel baseball's opening day is "not a surprise" and blames the owners slightly more than the players for the current fiasco.

But more than the desire to place blame, there's simply disgust. Being a baseball fan isn't easy these days.

"People struggling and having a hard time, and they're trying to figure out how to divide billions of dollars," Hart said. "It is what it is."

Russia excluded from more sports as sanctions mount

GENEVA — More and more sports are following the appeal of the International Olympic Committee and banning Russian athletes from competing in the wake of the country's invasion of Ukraine.

Russia was barred from competing in international ice skating, skiing, basketball, track and some tennis events Tuesday, a day after being kicked out of soccer competitions and hockey — Vladimir Putin's favorite team sport. The decisions follow the IOC's request to international sports federations to keep Russian athletes out of events they organize.

The International Skating Union, the body that runs the sport around the world, said no athletes from Russia or Belarus "shall be invited or allowed to participate" in events until further notice.

Belarus has been a key ally of Russia in its attack on Ukraine.

The world figure skating championships are scheduled for later this month in Montpellier, France. The ISU decision means Olympic champion Anna Shcherbakova and 15-year-old teammate Kamila Valieva, who was the focus of a still-unresolved doping dispute at last month's Winter Olympics, will be excluded from the competition.

The sports restrictions have drawn sharp criticism from Russia.

"Our country has always adhered to the principle that sport is beyond politics, but we are constantly drawn into the politics, because they understand the importance of sport in the lives of our Russian people," Deputy Prime Minister Dmitry Chernyshenko, who was stripped of an IOC honor for organizing the 2014 Sochi Olympics, said Tuesday at a Sports Ministry meeting.

Russian and Belarusian tennis players including top-ranked Daniil Medvedev, who is Russian, can play on the ATP and WTA tours, but without national flags, and at the Grand Slams. The countries are barred from team competitions like the Davis Cup and Billie Jean King Cup until further notice. Russian players won both last year and are already qualified for this year's finals as defending champions.

In Norway, Russian cross-country skiers — who won 11 medals at the Beijing Olympics — were heading home after being excluded from competition by the International Ski Federation, known as FIS.

The decision came after a three-day standoff with Norwegian ski officials, who said they would refuse to let Russians and Belarusians race if FIS maintained its previous policy of allowing them to compete as neutral athletes.

"Firstly, I am glad that FIS has taken this decision," said Norwegian ski federation president Erik Røste, who also sits on the governing body's ruling council. "Then I have to be honest and say it has taken too long."

The FIS position shifted Tuesday morning after its president, Johan Eliasch, took part in a conference call hosted by the IOC with the governing bodies of Olympic sports.

In track and field, Russia has been suspended since 2015 for doping violations but allowed to compete as "Authorized Neutral Athletes." On Tuesday, the sport moved to a blanket ban on Russia and Belarus.

The governing body of track is run by Sebastian Coe. As an athlete, Coe defied calls to boycott the 1980 Moscow Olympics because of the Soviet Union's invasion of Afghanistan and won a gold medal in the 1,500 meters.

"I have railed against the practice of politicians targeting athletes and sport to make political points when other sectors continue about their business," Coe said. "This is different as governments, business and other international organizations have imposed sanctions and measures against Russia across all sectors. Sport has to step up and join these efforts to end this war and restore peace. We cannot and should not sit this one out."

Russia was suspended by the International Basketball Federation. That will hit Russia's bid to qualify for next year's men's World Cup. Russia already had one qualifying game against the Netherlands called off last week. The Russian women's team has qualified for a place at the World Cup in September.

The International Volleyball Federation stripped Russia of hosting the men's world championships in August. Volleyball also suspended Russian teams and clubs from international events, while rowing, badminton, canoeing and triathlon decided to exclude Russian athletes from their competitions.

Other sports like swimming, cycling and auto racing haven't followed the recommendation from the IOC to ban Russians.

Swimming's governing body, known as FINA, said Tuesday it would allow Russian and Belarusian swimmers to take part "as neutrals, competing under the FINA flag and with the FINA anthem."

Russia is hosting the world short-course championships in December. FINA said it had withdrawn a federation honor awarded to Putin in 2014.

Cycling will allow Russian riders to compete as neutrals but will bar Russian and Belarusian teams and sponsors. Auto racing's international body, the FIA, said Russian drivers like Nikita Mazepin can still compete but a block on having cars in national colors would stop Mazepin's team Haas bringing back the Russian flag-stripe livery it removed during last week's testing. The Russian Grand Prix was cut from the calendar on Friday.

The World Games, a multi-sport competition set to be held this summer in Birmingham, Alabama, banned athletes and officials from Russia and Belarus from taking part in the 11-day event featuring sports and disciplines that aren't on the Olympic program. Organizers said they were following the direction of the IOC, which provides support for the World Games.

Russia and Belarus combined to send more than 150 athletes to the last World Games, held in Wroclaw, Poland in 2017.

Russian athletes have already arrived in China for the Winter Paralympics, which open Friday. They are scheduled to compete as RPC, short for Russian Paralympic Committee, after the IOC offered a possible exemption for events starting at short notice. The Ukrainian team isn't yet in Beijing, but organizers said they expect the country's athletes to arrive in time.

The U.S. Olympic and Paralympic Committee opposes the Russian team competing.

"As the world watches in horror while Russia brazenly attacks the innocent people and athletes of Ukraine, this is the only acceptable action to be taken until peace has been restored," the USOPC said in a statement.

The governing bodies of three Olympic sports — fencing, shooting and boxing — are led by Russians. So far, only shooting has barred Russian athletes from competing.

The billionaire president of the International Fencing Federation, Alisher Usmanov, said Tuesday he would "suspend the exercise of my duties ... until justice is restored" after being sanctioned by the European Union.

The invasion has also led to some sponsors and companies cutting ties. Adidas, the maker of the Russian national soccer team jerseys, said it was suspending its partnership with the federation with immediate effect.

NFL's competition committee considers changing OT rules

By MICHAEL MAROT
AP Sports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS — All the Buffalo Bills wanted in January was one more chance to beat Kansas City.

Now they're trying to make sure no NFL team begins the offseason as it did.

On Tuesday, more than a month after enduring a crushing AFC divisional round loss without ever touching the ball in overtime, Bills general manager Brandon Beane threw his support behind a proposal to change the league's postseason rules.

"Ours is going to be more instead of one possession and then you get the other possession, is a time, similar to in basketball, you play five minutes," Beane said.

"Baseball, both teams get the top half and the bottom half (of an inning). So a time limit, and I'm talking about postseason only. That way, both teams will definitely have a chance and maybe even more than one possession."

Beane acknowledged the league's competition committee could field multiple proposals during this week's meeting at the annual NFL scouting combine in Indianapolis, joking there could be one from all 32 teams. No decision is expected this week.

And it's not just current Bills jumping on board.

Colts coach Frank Reich, the former quarterback who orchestrated the NFL's greatest comeback during his tenure in Buffalo, also supports the move. Reich is a first-year committee member and is uncertain what that might include.

"It's basically something that would guarantee each team a possession," Reich said. "My opinion is that I think there's a place for both teams to have a possession. But I can see both sides of it. You've got 60 minutes to win a game, so go win the game. Or play defense."

The NFL last changed its overtime rules in 2010 after complaints the coin flip often determined the winner. Under the current system, if the opening possession of overtime results in a touchdown or a defensive score, the game ends. That's what happened to Buffalo.

But if the opening possession results in a field goal, the opposing team gets a chance to tie the score or win the game. Those rules apply throughout the entire season.

And now the Bills want every playoff team to get one last opportunity.

"I think, experiencing what we experienced overall, I think there's a better way out there," Bills coach Sean McDermott said. "We've got some ideas and I think they'll help move the game forward. And we'll see where it goes."

Open door policy

Tampa Bay Buccaneers coach Bruce Arians won't be shutting the door on seven-time Super Bowl champion Tom Brady anytime soon.

Exactly one month after Brady announced his retirement, Arians acknowledged Brady's replacement already may be on the roster. Tampa Bay drafted Kyle Trask in the second round last year.

But if Brady changed his mind, well, the Bucs would welcome him back.

"That door is never closed. Whenever Tom wants back, he's back," Arians said.

Would the Bucs be as accommodating if Brady wanted to play for another team?

"Nope," Arians said. "Bad business."

Trading places

Jacksonville Jaguars general manager Trent Baalke holds the No. 1 overall pick for the second straight year.

He doesn't need another quarterback after selecting Trevor Lawrence last season and even though this year's college quarterback class is light on star power, it's created speculation about a possible trade.

"You are always open for business," Baalke said. "To say we won't shop it is probably not 100% correct. To say we will, is probably not either. We'll see if something comes our way that makes sense to us."

But it might not be the same kind of seller's market Colts general manager Chris Ballard found in 2018 when the shipped the No. 3 overall selection to the New York Jets.

Lady Rockets' road ends in region semifinals

NASHVILLE — The last game of the year is always a difficult game for basketball teams, except the one team that is able to hoist the gold trophy and claim the state championship.

While Forrest has made significant strides in the first season under head coach Hal Murrell, the Lady Rockets ran into a buzzsaw against East Nashville in a 62-28 season-ending loss on Monday in the Region 4-AA semifinals.

"There's only one AA girls team that's going to win their last game and unfortunately it's not going to be us. This one loss doesn't define who we are and how far we've come since this summer. It's night and day the difference in the two teams. We did pick a bad night not to play well, but you have to give them (East Nashville) a lot of the credit. They forced us into some bad decisions, some very poor passes. They feed off turnovers," Murrell said.

The East Nashville game plan was rather simple—speed the game up, utilize traps and create possessions off turnovers.

The up-tempo style of the game immediately impacted the Lady Rockets and Forrest simply struggled to adjust to the speed East was pushing.

The Lady Eagles jumped out to a 10-2 lead in the first quarter and it took until sophomore Cadence Chapman hit a shot of the block off an assist by senior Addison Bunty that Forrest connected on a field goal.

After seeing East score seemingly at will for the majority of the first quarter, Forrest closed the opening frame on a 6-0 run to cut the Lady Eagles lead to four points.

That four-point differential was the closest Forrest came to taking the lead in Monday's semifinal matchup.

East answered the late first-quarter run with a 19-4 run in the second quarter to take a 31-12 lead at the half.

East was able to force the Lady Rockets into high-pressure situations that allowed the Lady Eagles to push the ball in transition after turnovers.

"We were just unable to handle the ball in crucial situations. I don't think their half court offense generated that many points for them—it came off turnovers and second chance opportunities," Murrell said.

East went on to outscore Forrest 31-16 in the second half to preserve the 24-point win.

Seven different Lady Eagles scored, with Emani Wottord and Jaslyn Walter scoring 13 apiece to lead East.

Chapman and senior Ryann Lewis led Forrest with eight and seven points, respectively.

While the Lady Rockets ran into one of the top teams in the state in an elimination round of the postseason, Murrell couldn't be more proud of his team and the growth shown in the last eight months.

After winning back-to-back games to open the season, Forrest went on a skid where the Lady Rockets dropped eight of nine games leading up to the Christmas break.

But after months of playing together and buying into the coaching staff's philosophy, it began to click for the Lady Rockets and they were able to ride a wave of momentum that saw Forrest win nine of its last 15 games.

Murrell was quick to credit the leadership of seniors Ryann Lewis and Addison Bunty for their efforts in guiding the Lady Rockets during the 2021-2022 season.

"I'm the third coach they've had in three years. That's hard on them. But they really bought in. They could have packed it in at Christmas when we still weren't where we wanted to be. They came to work every day, had a great attitude and a great work ethic. They did great things for us to get our program headed where we want to go," Murrell said.

While the Lady Rocket senior class features just the two, their impact can't be understated and their impressions left on the underclassmen are evidenced by the successful run Forrest enjoyed through January and into the postseason.

"The tools are there. The pieces are there. We just have to get back to work after a little time off and try to take it a step further," Murrell said.
