Several groups joined on Friday, March 4, to mark Tennessee Arbor Day with the dedication of a new green space and park on Mooresville Highway.

The wedge of land between Old and New Mooresville Highways was cut off during the construction of the new highway and cooperation has brought life back to it.

Waste Management and the city of Lewisburg both own parts of the property and will share in maintenance and development.

Lewisburg Tree City Chair Barbara Woods characterized the area as “a project where we are working together and moving forward.”

The green space will serve many purposes, mirroring the several groups who brought the project to completion.

Dozens of flowering trees have been planted, beautifying one of the primary gateways into Lewisburg.

A mowed trail will be kept up for walking along the site and Waste Management will install a memorial bench for manager Eric Barlow who was

Buddy Williams bridge dedicated

Last Thursday morning in Mooresville, the family and friends of William W. “Buddy” Williams gathered for the official dedication of a bridge on Bear Creek Road in his memory and honor. The warm, clear day, with the sounds of the stream rippling as it passed under the bridge underlined why Williams loved country life in Mooresville, where he lived and farmed for many decades. Life in Mooresville is so ingrained in the family that two of Williams’ three sons still live on Bear Creek Road and now have another reminder of their father and the life he built everyday. Future generations will now have the same opportunity said Marshall County Mayor Mike Keny. “They will stop and ask who he was, what he meant to this community, and why we honored him,” said Keny. “He’d be very proud,” said Williams’ son Larry. “It’s a special day for us.”

Morrison named Conservation Farmer of the Year

Each year the Marshall County Soil & Water Conservation District recognizes an individual who has made significant contributions to the conservation of natural resources on their farm. The District is proud to announce that Lee Morrison has been named the Marshall County Conservation Farmer of the Year for 2021. This award is part of a state program sponsored by the Tennessee Association of Conservation Districts (TACD) with the cooperation of the Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS), and the Tennessee Department of Agriculture (TDA).

Morrison’s farm focuses on cattle, timber production, and wildlife. When they first purchased the property in 1971, they planted over 9,000 walnut trees! Over the years, they have worked with many partners, such as the Tennessee Department of Forestry, the Land Trust for Tennessee, the Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS), and the Marshall County Soil & Water Conservation District (MCSWCD) to maintain the integrity of the farm.

Morrison has worked with NRCS and the MCSWCD since 2010, where he has participated in the Conservation Stewardship Program (CSP). He has installed wildlife structures by creating snags and nesting boxes for birds, bats, and bees. Along with wildlife structures he has planted wildlife food plots for deer, turkey, and small game. Morrison has installed many practices and enhancements on his 244 acre farm which are mostly wildlife focused, but also benefit his livestock operation. He runs a stocker cattle operation where he only grazes his farm half of the year. This allows the land plenty of time for rest and regrowth. Morrison has managed his grazing system for over 12 years to improve wildlife habitat. The Morrison family wants to continue this legacy for years to come.

The Marshall County Soil & Water Conservation District would like to thank Lee Morrison for protecting the natural resources of our county through conservation practices. By implementing these practices and enhancements, he is not only protecting his land and water, but he is also setting a great example for others to follow.

Cornersville hires Brandon

By Scott Pearson

Cornersville is turning to a familiar face to serve as town administrator.

Aldermen voted to extend an offer to current interim administrator Taylor Brandon at Thursday’s monthly board meeting.

Brandon has been serving part-time as the town administrator since the retirement of Scotty Brock at the start of November and the search for a permanent replacement.

Brandon served for several years as the town administrator before leaving in 2015 to work full-time as an attorney.

While aldermen were complementary of the candidates applying for the position at last month’s meeting, they chose to solely interview Brandon once his interest in returning full-time was clear.

Brandon will close out his remaining cases and practice over the next few months.

The East Hill expansion projects were included on the agenda for discussion, although an engineer expected to attend and add detail for the board did not show.

Aldermen and Mayor John Luna expressed concern, believing that this was not the first time that an expected briefing had not been delivered.

Brandon touched on issues of erosion impacting neighboring roadways with mud and said that the town’s public works was doing the best they could to keep the roads clear but until construction was complete the issue would remain.

Aldermen approved moving forward with several suggestions from the Municipal Technical Advisory Service to assist the town with updating and reconciling town codes and ordinances, building and related codes, and an interlocal agreement with the county, dating from 2010.

Each of those topics needed updating, said MTAS rep Chuck Downham.

Aldermen approved retaining Town Attorney Billy Ostermann as the town’s delinquent tax attorney for another year.

DON'T FORGET TO SPRING FORWARD

The Marshall County Soil & Water Conservation District held its annual poster contest for grades K-12. This contest provides kindergarten through twelfth grade students an opportunity to convey their thoughts about soil, water, and related natural resource issues through art. It also highlights the educational outreach efforts of conservation districts and their state conservation associations, auxiliaries and agencies. The stewardship theme for this year was "Healthy Forests - Healthy Communities". The winning entrants were Cooper Porter from Chapel Hill Elementary (grades K-1), Maggie Morgan from Chapel Hill Elementary (grades 2-3), and Mary Kate Bradley from Cornersville Elementary (grades 4-6). Each winner received a certificate and a check for $25.00 from the District, and their posters will be entered in the Tennessee Association of Conservation Districts Poster Contest.

What would you love to tell your younger self?

By Danny Tyree

A handful of longtime readers may remember when I announced that “baby boy Tyree” was on his way.

Time flies. My only child Gideon recently celebrated his 18th birthday.

Ah, 18: an unrefrigerated caseroles of freedoms, responsibilities, hopes, fears and life-or-death decisions.

My wife and I have been dribbling out bits of school-of-hard-knocks advice for Gideon all along, so I don’t have any showstopping pronouncements to share with him this week; but I will seize upon Gideon’s milestone as a springboard for one of those corny “What advice would I give my younger self?” essays.

I haven’t accumulated as many regrets as some people (no arrest record, no significant sun damage, no hangovers, no burning bridges without first purchasing a carbon offset, etc.), but I suppose I could list a few thoughts for theoretical sharing with 18-year-old Danny Tyree.

Granted, I would be leery of actually carrying out such a mentorship, given all the paradoxes and potential harm to the space-time continuum.

But if I did do it, my first advice would be, “Don’t use all the paradoxes and potential harm to the space-time continuum as an ice-breaker, unless you enjoy Saturday nights with Lawrence Welk marathons and cold showers.”

Other sadder-but-wiser nuggets:

“Don’t initiate a life-long habit of carrying a quarter in case you need a pay phone. Do carry a quarter in case you need a thimbleful of gasoline.”

“Don’t sweat your scholastic Permanent Record. You can someday obtain a marital Permanent Record, as in ‘You snored just as loudly as you did that Friday in August of 2017.’”

“Abandon your dream of opening the first brick-and-mortar eight-track-tape store on Mars in 2007 and entertaining all the guys and gals. Wrong on so many levels, dude.”

“Don’t make fun of goofy-looking bald people. Never mind why.”

“Roller skating in a buffalo herd? Maybe. Roller skating in the summer of 1990? No way! We’re also running a special on ‘amusing little speed traps in your vicinity.’”

“Don’t remember all the fun in third-period French class. For pity’s sake, don’t remember all the fun in third-period French class!!”

“Embrace change – but not in the creepy way that would get Human Resources involved.”

“Forget sentence diagramming, Chaucer and footnotes. Major in pronouns.”

“Decide when mid-life is, or you’ll miss your mid-life crisis!”

“Venture outside your comfort zone occasionally. Oh, I forgot the Preparation H, dandruff shampoo and taped-up eyeglasses. FIND your comfort zone first and then venture outside of it.”

“Listen more to your sage elders. Then you’ll have a higher caliber of stories for younger generations to ignore.” (“Okay, Boomer-bearing-Greatest-Generation-stories.”)

“Dance with the one that brung you, unless they brung you to a disability interview. No dancing!”

“Pray without ceasing, that you fall off your platform shoes and meet a merciful death before having to encounter something called ‘skinny jeans.’”

“Dorothy, always make sure you...er, I mean, Danny, always make sure your proofread really well when you’re plagiarizing someone else’s essay.”

Would my self from 40something years ago really pay attention to any of these pearls of wisdom?

Maybe not. Mr. “All the Answers” would probably reason, “He COULD be giving advice to baby Hitler’s nurse, but instead he chooses to advise a geeky writer wannabe? Can you spell ‘loser’? No, seriously, another time traveler told me about Common Core, and I’m wondering, can you spell ‘loser’?”

Final Notice and Public Explanation of a Proposed Activity in a 100-Year Floodplain

To: All interested Agencies - Federal, State, and Local - Groups and Individuals

This is to give notice that the City of Lewisburg, Tennessee under CFR 24 Part 58 has conducted an evaluation as required by Executive Order 11988 and/or 11990, in accordance with HUD regulations at 24 CFR 55.20 Subpart C Procedures for Making Determinations on Floodplain Management, to determine the potential affect that its activity in the floodplain and wetland will have on the human environment for a Community Development Block Grant under B-20-Dc-47-0001. The proposed project(s) is located in the 2010 Census Blocks TN1179553001, TN1179553002, TN1179553003, and TN1179554002 in Lewisburg, Marshall, County, Tennessee.

The City of Lewisburg in cooperation with the Lewisburg Sewer System proposes to continue to rehabilitate the municipal sewer system in the 2010 Census Blocks: TN1179553001, TN1179553002, TN1179553003, and TN1179554002 in order to reduce inflow and infiltration. to rehabilitate approximately 4,250 linear feet of gravity sewer line by pipe bursting or open-cut. There will be approximately 29 sewer service connections/service laterals replaced and 14 manholes renovated. The sewer system overflows are in the vicinity of Big Rock Creek which is listed on the 303 (d) list of impaired streams in the Upper Duck River Watershed Basin. The project will take place within the City of Lewisburg on previously distributed ground. Less than two acres of floodplain will be disturbed.

The City of Lewisburg, Tennessee has considered the following alternatives and mitigation measures to be taken to minimize adverse impacts and to restore and preserve natural and beneficial values: Do nothing – The “do nothing” alternative would not solve the issue of infiltration and inflow within the sewer system. Do not work in areas located within the floodplain – This alternative would not address the priority issues of the full sewer system. By only addressing problem areas outside of the floodplain, the city would continue to experience excessive infiltration and inflow. As the project is only to correct problem areas, the work within the floodplain would have minimal impact. Only one acre of floodplain will be address at a time, reducing the disturbance in the floodplain. The project will be in compliance with state and local floodplain protection procedures.

The City of Lewisburg, Tennessee has reevaluated the alternatives to building in the floodplain and has determined that it has no practicable alternative. Environmental files that document compliance with steps 3 through 6 of Executive Order 11988 and/or 11990, are available for public inspection, review and copying upon request at the times and location delineated in the last paragraph of this notice for receipt of comments. This activity will have no significant impact on the environment for the following reasons: The floodplain will retain retention values. Work will be minimal in the floodplain. Work will be to an existing apparatus. Work will be at previously disturbed ground.

There are three primary purposes for this notice. First, people who may be affected by activities in floodplains and those who have an interest in the protection of the natural environment should be given an opportunity to express their concerns and provide information about these areas. Second, an adequate public notice program can be an important public educational tool. The dissemination of information about floodplains can facilitate and enhance Federal efforts to reduce the risks associated with the occupancy and modification of these special areas. Third, as a matter of fairness, when the Federal government determines it will participate in actions taking place in floodplains, it must inform those who may be put at greater or continued risk. Written comments must be received by the City of Lewisburg, Tennessee at the following address on or before March 17, 2022: City of Lewisburg, Tennessee

Comments may also be submitted or further information can be requested via email at jack.king@lewisburgtn.gov. A full description of the project may also be reviewed from 9 a.m. – 4 p.m. at the address above.

“And Jesus went about all Galilee, teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the Gospel of the Kingdom, and healing all manner of sickness and all manner of disease among the people.” – Matthew 4:23

There are three actions words that stick out. They are: teaching, preaching, and healing. These three actions are different and yet they purposely come together in the Kingdom ministry of Jesus Christ.

First, teaching. The Jewish synagogue was the central place for the community to worship God and to teach about God. The synagogue is where King Jesus showed up to teach about His Kingdom.

Next, King Jesus went about preaching the Gospel of the Kingdom outside of the synagogue. Preaching is different from teaching. Preaching is declaring abroad what has already been taught. Teaching passes on information about God, while preaching proclaims God with an impassioned cry out to the people declaring God’s truth - whether people want to believe it or not. Understand that King Jesus is the example that there is never preaching without teaching and there is never teaching without preaching. That’s why the churches who do both are usually fewer in number. Obviously, we can get large numbers of people in church buildings with games, give-aways, programs, pot-luck dinners, and music-laser shows. However, if you follow the simple example of Jesus and teach and preach the Gospel of the Kingdom sadly there is little interest.

Lastly, we read that King Jesus

The Gospel of the Kingdom came healing every kind of sickness and disease. Obviously He had compassion upon the people. However, the healings first of all confirmed that His message of the Gospel of the Kingdom has come down from heaven. The healings were signs proving that what He was teaching and preaching was true, and that He is the King of this Kingdom. Understand that miraculous healings are not everyday occurrences. That’s what makes it a miracle. Yet we have these self-proclaimed healers taking the name of God in vain. If they were authentic then why don’t they walk the halls of the nursing homes and the children’s cancer ward? Why don’t they go out into the community like Jesus did teaching, preaching, and healing? Only God heals, if He chooses to do so, but it is not in the quality and quantity as in the first century, and there is a reason. It is because those were signs for that day confirming the Gospel of the Kingdom.

Understand that teaching is true information about the Kingdom. Preaching is the true declaration about the Kingdom. Healings are the true evidence that the Kingdom has come (Matthew 12:28). King Jesus’ message was and is very simple. In His Kingdom, there is forgiveness of sin, salvation from hell, mercy for the guilty, grace for the needy, hope for the hopeless, and love for the unlovely, and that He takes the guilty, needy, hopeless, and unlovely sinner and makes them a beautiful child of the Majestic God (1 John 3:2). Yes, He makes the believer royalty (1 Peter 2:9).

Hard work lands Vaughn with Christian Brothers

By Chris Siers
sports@t-g.com

What began for Camden Vaughn years ago as a simple backyard t-ball game with his siblings became a life-long passion and love for the game.

When he got to Chapel Hill his sophomore season, Vaughn's work ethic and dedication to his dream of one day playing college baseball didn't go unnoticed to coach Andy Burkett.

That drive eventually led Vaughn to sign his letter of intent to continue his baseball career in college with Christian Brothers University, in Memphis.

"Cam is the type of guy that is the epitome of what we want from a Forrest Rockets baseball player. He's gritty, he's competitive and he's got a strong work ethic. Any time you're here at Forrest, if he's not studying or working out, then he's doing something baseball related, one way or another," Burkett said.

"That leadership kind of bleeds into our other guys. He's picking guys up and taking guys to get extra work in the cage and work on different things from a hitting perspective."

When everything aligned, Vaughn made it official and signed his letter of intent in front of a crowd of family and his Forrest Rocket baseball teammates.

"It's been a long journey. I've definitely put the work in. It's something I've been looking forward to since I was a little kid. It's definitely been a dream of mine. For it to all come together, it's a very emotional day for me," Vaughn said.

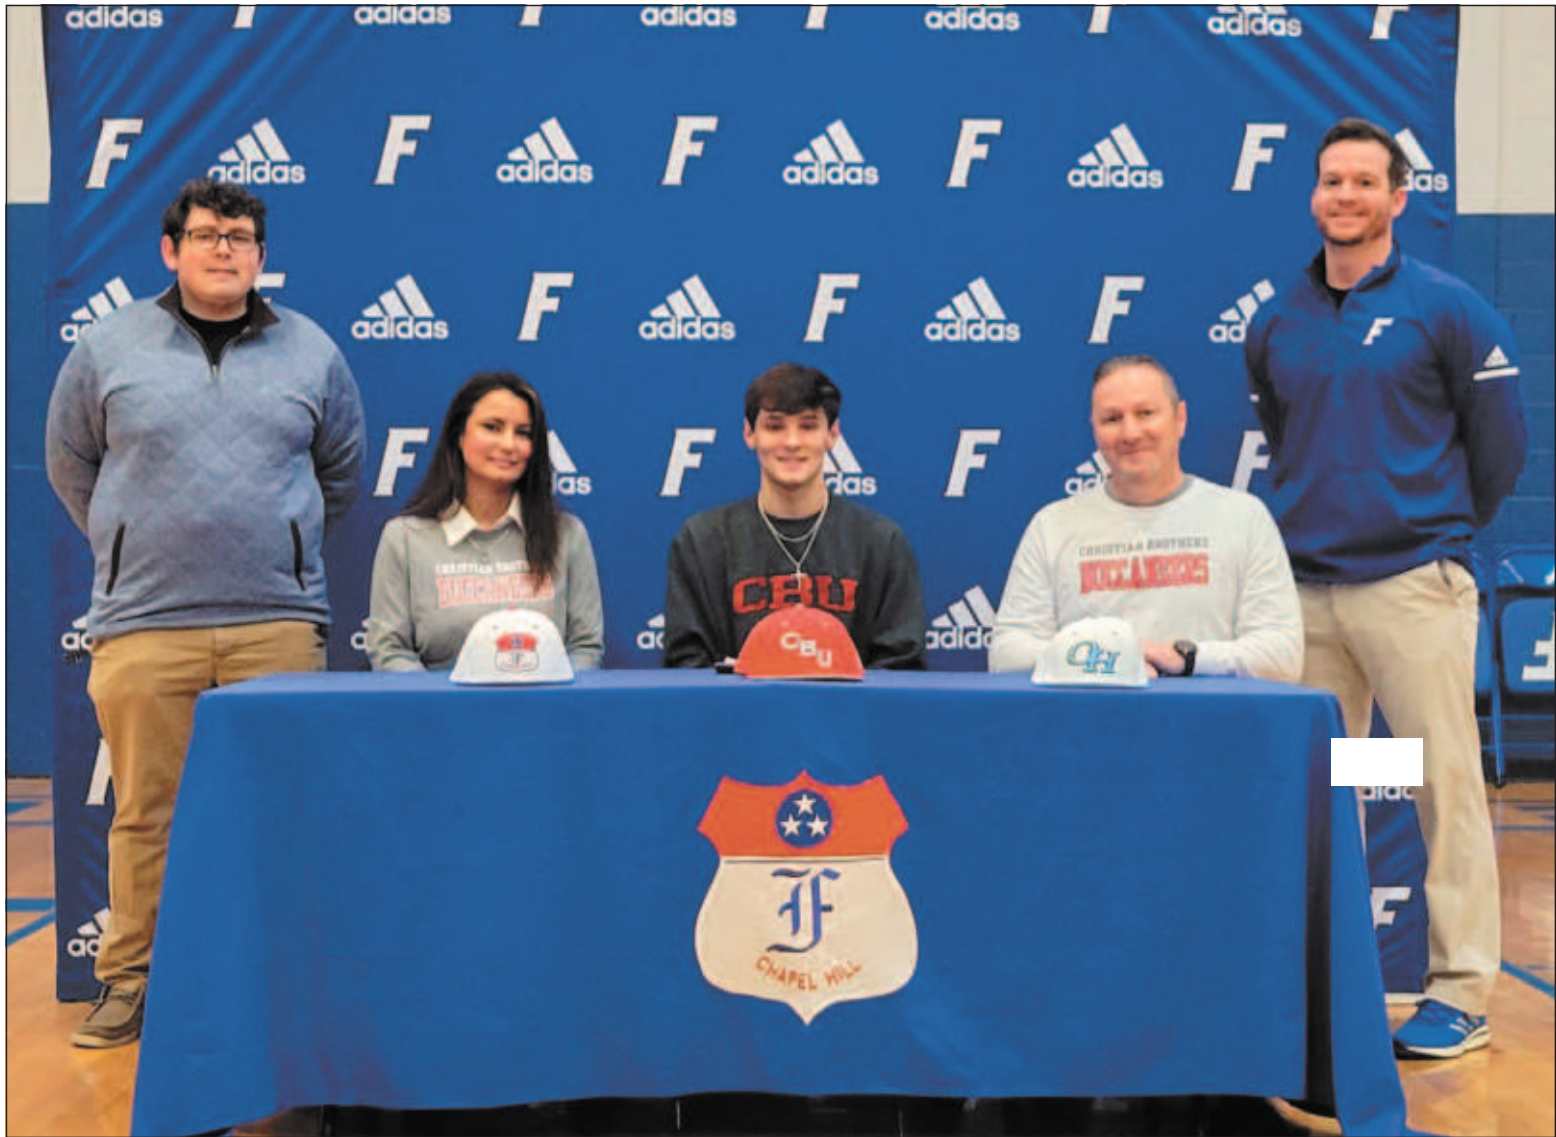

"Ever since he moved to Forrest when he was a sophomore, his mindset was to play college baseball. When you set the tone, you're vocal about what your goals are and you put the work in to accomplish those goals, you get to see him accomplish something like he did today and sign with Christian Brothers. It's awesome," Burkett said.

Vaughn's impact with the Rockets can't be undervalued.

He's established himself as the everyday backstop for the Rockets and last year, competing in a brutal District 12-AA schedule, Vaughn earned District Catcher of the Year honors, while building a stellar batting average and becoming of the best players in the state in his on base percentage.

"We were in a really tough district in 12-AA last year and he was the District Catcher of the Year. He had over a .380 batting average, his on base percentage was close to .500 and he was third in the state in on base percentage," Burkett said.

That ability to get on base was a spark plug for the Rocket offense.

"He's the type of guy when you have him at the top of the lineup, he's a table setter. Once he gets on base and we're able to drive guys around, he's the type of dude who gets our offense going. He's just the heartbeat of our team for the most part," Burkett added.

When it came to picking a school to spend his college career, Vaughn had a handful in the running, but ultimately, building a relationship with the Christian Brothers head coach helped make his decision.

"I had a few school schools, one in Ohio and one down in Texas, but Coach (Lee) Parks really stood out to me. He's a great coach and a great guy. He's got the background catching at Mississippi State. I just want to be around that program. It's a great program," he said.

While he didn't arrive in Chapel Hill until his sophomore season, it became a perfect marriage between the 2021 Catcher of the Year and the Rockets.

"When I moved here, meeting this group of guys, this is my favorite team. Every memory I have with them is definitely my favorite. Definitely the greatest team I've been around. I love the program and wouldn't want to be anywhere else," he said.

With the stresses of finding a college in the books, Vaughn says now the focus is having the best senior season before shipping off for his college baseball career.

Vaughn was a spark plug for the Rocket batting lineup, posting a batting average over .380 and posting the third-best on-base percentage in the state.

"I'm zoned in and want to have a good season with my senior friends. It's our last ride. I want to do something good for them, possibly bring the first state championship here for the baseball team. That's my goal for now," he said.

Vaughn plans to pursue a degree in biology and become an orthodontist.

Titans agree to extension with Harold Landry

By TERESA M. WALKER
AP Pro Football Writer

NASHVILLE — The Tennessee Titans finally have a strong pass rush they're going to keep together.

The Titans announced Tuesday night they had agreed to terms on an extension for Pro Bowl linebacker Harold Landry III hours after declining to use the franchise tag. Terms were not announced.

Landry reportedly agreed to a five-year extension worth $87.5 million with $52.5 million guaranteed.

The deal keeps him off the free-agent market after he posted a career-high 12 sacks to rank 10th in the NFL and earn his first Pro Bowl nod. He had a team-high 14 tackles for loss, was second with a career-high 49 quarterback pressures and tied for second with 75 tackles. He has 4 1/2 postseason sacks for his career.

The linebacker led the Titans in sacks three straight seasons, and his 31 sacks in his first four seasons lead the team. Only Jevon Kearse, who had 37, has had more sacks in his first four seasons with the team since individual sacks became an official NFL statistic in 1982.

Landry has started 52 straight games, the sixth-longest streak among NFL defensive players, and played in 64 consecutive games since sitting out the first game of his rookie season.

He joined Cameron Hayward of Pittsburgh as the only players in the NFL with at least 250 tackles, 30 sacks and two interceptions over the past four seasons. He joined Micah Parsons, Aaron Donald and Heyward as the only NFL players with at least 75 tackles and 10 sacks in 2021.

The Titans took Landry in the second round in 2018 at No. 41 overall out of Boston College.

Tennessee's defense ranked ninth with 43 sacks and was the NFL's only unit featuring three players with at least eight sacks in 2021. Denico Autry had nine sacks and Pro Bowl lineman Jeffery Simmons had a career-high 8 1/2.

The Titans had just 19 sacks in 2020 after trying Jadeveon Clowney and Vic Beasley as free agent help. Clowney finished that season on injured reserve, while Beasley was released with zero sacks combined between the pair.

The Titans signed Autry and linebacker Bud Dupree as free agents last March with Autry proving to be a steal matching his career-high in sacks. Autry is under contract through 2023, while Dupree has four more seasons remaining.

Titans general manager Jon Robinson said at the NFL combine last week it was fun to watch how the pass rush came together.

"But it is a balance of trying to keep that thing together, and working through Harold's contract and you know being mindful of players that we kind of have coming down the pike too that we want to try to keep there as well," Robinson said.

We want your scores!

With the calendar turning to March, spring marks one of the busiest times in the local sports community. Our aim is to provide the most comprehensive sports coverage at the local level we can, but we need your help to do it.

SEC loaded with quality teams hoping to bolster NCAA resumes

By FRED GOODALL
AP Sports Writer

TAMPA, Fla. — Auburn spent a good portion of this season ranked No. 1. Kentucky is an eight-time national champion with expectations of contending for another title, and Tennessee and Arkansas may be capable of making deep runs in the NCAA Tournament, too.

With those teams perched among the best in the nation, plus three or four others needing a victory or two in the Southeastern Conference Tournament bolster their resumes, the SEC arguably has never been stronger from top to bottom.

No. 4 Auburn (27-4), No. 5 Kentucky (25-6) and No. 9 Tennessee (23-7) are ranked in the top 10 after beating up on each other during the regular season. No. 15 Arkansas (24-7) has been as hot as anyone lately, winning 16 of its past 18 entering this week's tournament that tips off Wednesday at Amalie Arena.

"Our league is at an all-time high. It's just incredible the level of competitiveness, the home-court advantages, the facilities, the exposure," said Florida coach Mike White, whose Gators own a last-season upset of Auburn and need a good showing here to strengthen their case for a spot in the NCAA field.

"It's a big-time league, arguably the best league in the country. There's a bunch of pros in this league, a bunch of really good coaches, a bunch of proud fan bases," White added. "It is incredibly competitive, and I think that will be showcased in this tournament and again in the NCAA Tournament."

The action begins with 12th-seeded Missouri (11-20) facing 13th seed Mississippi (13-18) and No. 11 seed Vanderbilt (15-15) playing 14th seed Georgia (6-25).

The Missouri-Ole Miss winner advances to play fifth-seeded LSU (21-10) on Thursday, while the Vandy-Georgia survivor continues against sixth-seeded Alabama (19-12).

The second night of the five-day tourney also features matchups between eighth and ninth-seeded Texas A&M (20-11) and Florida (19-12), as well as seventh-seeded South Carolina (18-12) and 10th seed Mississippi State (17-14).

Auburn, Kentucky, Tennessee and Arkansas begin play in Friday's quarterfinals, needing three wins in three days to claim the league's automatic berth in the NCAA Tournament.

"There's not another 8-9 game in college basketball anywhere near the caliber the 8-9 game between A&M and Florida. Not even close," Auburn coach Bruce Pearl said.

"Both of these teams are probably a win or two away from being in the tournament, particularly a win against us. So, they'll both be playing with their hair on fire, whichever one gets there," Pearl added. "Both really well coached. We played very well at home against both teams and struggled at Florida. So regardless of who comes out of this one, it'll be a really challenging contest."

Auburn last won the league tourney in 2019, ending a four-year reign by Kentucky. Tennessee hasn't won the SEC Tournament since 1979, and Arkansas last did it in 2000.

"We're trying to win it, obviously, but we're also trying to make sure we know what we're doing to get ready for the NCAA Tournament," Kentucky guard Sahvir Wheeler said. "You know, playing for seeding, making sure we can be the highest seed that we can. Making sure we're starting to get better as a team."

Kentucky forward and SEC player of the year Oscar Tshiebwe said he is taking a nothing is going to be easy mentality into the tournament.

"If you think you're going to go there and just beat people like this, they're going to send us home," Tshiebwe said. "Whoever we play, we've got to be ready for them because they're coming to play too, they're not coming just because they're playing Kentucky."

NCAA worthy

Auburn coach Bruce Pearl believes more than half the 14-teams in the SEC will get strong consideration for an NCAA tourney bid.

"I think a lot is going to depend on how the tournament plays out, and then of course how many upsets there are around college basketball," the Auburn coach. "I think there are six locks and there are potential for seven or eight teams to be able to get in."

Key injury

Arkansas played without guard Au'Diese Toney during last weekend's regular season-ending loss at Tennessee. Coach Eric Musselman has said Toney likely won't play again until the NCAA Tournament.

Back in the sunshine state

The men's conference tournament is being played in Florida for only the third time. Orlando hosted the event in 1990 and Tampa was the site in 2009.

Four of the past six SEC Tournaments were played in Nashville, Tennessee, where it is scheduled to return for at least the next several years.

Amalie Arena is about two hours south of Florida's campus in Gainesville.

"Obviously it's in Florida so it's easier for us to get over there pretty quick and get ready. For these other teams, being out of state or maybe if they're in a colder state, coming to Florida is probably awesome for them," Gators forward Colin Castleton said. "It's definitely a great experience. ... At the end of the day you've got to enjoy it but also really lock in and focus on what the goal is, and that's to win the games."

Aaron Rodgers says he will remain with Packers next season

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) — Aaron Rodgers is planning to come back to the Green Bay Packers for an 18th season, a move that keeps the reigning MVP off the trade market and answers the question that had dominated NFL offseason discussions.

Rodgers sent out a tweet Tuesday afternoon confirming his return.

"YES, I will be playing with the Packers next year," Rodgers said. "However, reports about me signing a contract are inaccurate, as are the supposed terms of the contract 'I signed.' I'm very excited to be back."

NFL Network and Pat McAfee, the host of "The Pat McAfee Show" on SiriusXM and YouTube, had both reported earlier in the day that Rodgers was staying with the Packers. Rodgers makes a weekly appearance on McAfee's show during the season.

NFL Network reported that the 38-year-old Rodgers had agreed to a four-year, $200 million contract that includes $153 million in guaranteed money. McAfee disputed the terms and said the contract wasn't signed yet, and Rodgers' tweet backed up McAfee's account.

Rodgers' decision comes nearly a month after he won his second straight MVP award. The four-time MVP quarterback has spent his entire career in Green Bay.

He said he wanted to make an announcement about his future before the start of the free agency period that begins next week. The reports of his decision surfaced the same day the Packers placed the franchise tag on All-Pro receiver Davante Adams. Unless Adams signs a long-term deal before July 15, he will make just over $20 million in 2022.

Rodgers wanted to avoid a repeat of 2021, when his status was uncertain until the start of training camp after he skipped the Packers' mandatory minicamp.

The questions about his future stemmed from Rodgers' disagreements with team management at the time. Rodgers said on multiple occasions over the last few months that his relationship with team officials had improved significantly.

Rodgers' plans had been the subject of much speculation ever since the Packers traded up four spots to take Utah State quarterback Jordan Love with the 26th overall pick in the 2020 draft. After referring to his future as a "beautiful mystery" late in the 2020 season, Rodgers skipped the Packers' organized team activities and mandatory minicamp in a standoff with team management.

Rodgers reported for training camp on time but acknowledged his future with the organization was uncertain. At the time, he said he wanted to have a voice in the team's decision-making process.

Rodgers recently has frequently offered compliments about the moves general manager Brian Gutekunst made to improve the team. Those moves included acquiring wide receiver Randall Cobb at Rodgers' request. Rodgers said he got the sense there was better communication this season and that "I feel like my opinion mattered."

"I think he put together a really nice team, a team that could have won a Super Bowl, and he deserves a lot of credit for some of the moves that he made," Rodgers said after a January playoff loss to San Francisco. "I'm disappointed we couldn't put it together for him and the organization tonight, and I'm disappointed it's ending."

Gutekunst agreed their relationship was in a good place.

"I feel really good about where we sit right now," Gutekunst said before the NFL scouting combine.

Rodgers had a tumultuous 2021 season in a number of respects, particularly for comments he made about his vaccination status. When asked before the season whether he had been vaccinated against COVID-19, Rodgers replied, "Yeah, I'm immunized." But after testing positive during the season, Rodgers acknowledged he was unvaccinated and said he instead had sought alternative treatments.

Rodgers also dealt with a fractured left pinky toe for much of the year, but continued playing at an All-Pro level. He threw 20 touchdown passes with no interceptions over his final seven regular-season games. He led the Packers to a 13-4 record and a third straight NFC North championship.

But his season ended with a disappointing playoff performance. The Packers scored a touchdown on the game's opening series but never reached the end zone again in the home loss to the 49ers.

Packers coach Matt LaFleur, Gutekunst and president/CEO Mark Murphy said after the season they all wanted Rodgers back in 2022.

"I think we've got as good a shot as anybody to win a Super Bowl next year (with Rodgers)," Gutekunst said. "He's the MVP of the league. That's our goal. I think we have an opportunity to do it right now."

LaFleur made a move seemingly aimed at keeping Rodgers when he brought back Tom Clements as quarterbacks coach. Rodgers had praised the 68-year-old Clements, who previously worked for the Packers from 2006-16 in roles that included quarterbacks coach (2006-11), offensive coordinator (2012-14) and associate head coach/offense (2015-16). Rodgers lauded Clements on multiple occasions over the last year.

Wilson, Wagner exits sign of major change ahead for Seahawks

By TIM BOOTH
AP Sports Writer

SEATTLE — With two brush strokes over the span of about 10 hours, the Seattle Seahawks said goodbye to giant foundations of their Super Bowl history.

Gone is quarterback Russell Wilson, traded to Denver in a blockbuster move. Gone is Bobby Wagner, the defensive stalwart and likely future Hall of Famer, released as part of a salary cap squeeze.

So long history. Hello, rebuild.

That is the apparent direction the Seahawks are headed after a Tuesday that won't be forgotten by their fans. The team agreed to send Wilson to Denver early in the day, according to two people familiar with the negotiations who spoke to The Associated Press on the condition of anonymity because the trade can't be announced until after the start of the new league year next week.

Hours later, Wagner confirmed to the AP that the Seahawks had informed him he was being released, his $20 million salary cap hit for 2022 deemed too much for Seattle to absorb.

And with that, the final two starters still around from Seattle's Super Bowl winning team from 2013 — ones that seemed destined to be lifelong players for the team — were no longer Seahawks.

Their situations differed. Wilson had to waive a no-trade clause to accept the move to Denver. Wagner spoke at the end of the season of wanting to return but also knew the weight of his contract.

"I understand there is a business side to this, but there's a lot of optimism on my end that I'll be back," Wagner said in early January. "I'm not worried about it. Obviously, I can't control everything. I can only control my part."

No matter the reasons behind their departures, it's a massive change for the Seahawks.

For the majority of 10 seasons, the leaders on both sides of the ball for Seattle were never questioned. Taken in the same draft one round apart in 2012, Wagner and Wilson walked into Seattle's practice facility and almost immediately laid claim to spots they never relinquished other than for injury.

Wagner was a six-time first-team All-Pro selection, building a resume that no matter the next phase of his career is likely good enough for a gold jacket and induction to the Hall of Fame.

Wilson will forever be the starting quarterback of Seattle's first Super Bowl championship team, and for a decade gave the Seahawks a franchise QB and one of the most exciting players in the league.

Just days after coach Pete Carroll and general manager John Schneider indicated at the NFL combine that Seattle wasn't open for business regarding Wilson, the duo made arguably the most impactful trade in franchise history.

In some ways, they are staking their reputations to being able to find Seattle's next quarterback, and the additional move to release Wagner only added to the major questions about where the franchise goes next.

Is this the start of a full rebuild for the Seahawks with a head coach that will turn 71 in September?

Do the Seahawks believe quarterbacks Drew Lock — reportedly part of the trade — or Jacob Eason have the chance to be the starter this fall?

Did Seattle fall in love with one of the quarterbacks at the combine and is hoping to land another Wilson-like home run in the draft?

Or will the Seahawks use the capital obtained in the Wilson deal to try and find another veteran quarterback available either in free agency or via trade?

Those answers will come beginning with the start of the new league year. None may be able to satisfy Seattle's fans stinging from the trade.

NASCAR’s new Next Gen car delivers on race track

By JENNA FRYER
AP Auto Racing Writer

LAS VEGAS — NASCAR’s underdogs will have a fighting chance in the Next Gen car, according to the development plan for the ballyhooed new model, and the racing would be much better. New car configurations would force drivers to muscle the cars like never before.

Well, four races into the new season on four entirely different circuits, NASCAR seems to have actually delivered on the promise.

Sure, the top teams have still won all the races. First it was Team Penske with back-to-back wins in the exhibition Busch Clash and Daytona 500, and then Hendrick Motorsports made consecutive trips to victory lane in California and Las Vegas. “You’re never going to shut down the giant race teams, right?” Hendrick driver Alex Bowman said after his Sunday victory at Las Vegas.

Perhaps not. But the little guys sure are much improved:

— Ross Chastain led a total of 75 laps through the first 117 races of his career. At Las Vegas, Chastain led a race-high 83 laps and finished third. TrackHouse Racing teammate Daniel Suarez flirted with his first career Cup Series win a week earlier at California before finishing fourth.

— Erik Jones showed that Richard Petty’s old No. 43 can still be competitive by qualifying second at California, leading laps and finishing third. The rebranded Petty GMS Racing team has expanded to two cars this season and Ty Dillon has been mid-pack.

— Richard Childress Racing, the first team to embrace the Next Gen concept and help NASCAR create the first prototypes, has shown dramatic improvement. Tyler Reddick has contended everywhere and Austin Dillon has a pair of runner-up finishes in four races.

— Jack Roush’s rebranded RFK Racing team with Brad Keselowski part of the ownership group went back to victory lane for the first time since 2017 when Keselowski and Chris Buescher each won a Daytona 500 qualifying race.

— Aric Almirola is the only driver to notch three top-10 finishes through the first three points races, while 25 different drivers have led at least one lap this season. Christopher Bell won his first career pole at Las Vegas, and annual title contenders Kevin Harvick and Denny Hamlin have plummeted in the standings; Hamlin heads to Phoenix this weekend ranked 30th in points.

The Next Gen has so far raced on the smallest circuit possible — the quarter-mile track inside Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum for the exhibition Clash — and one of the the largest, the 2.5-mile superspeedway at Daytona International Speedway. The race at 2-mile Auto Club Speedway was the best at the California track in years, and same can be said for Sunday’s race at 1.5-mile Las Vegas circuit.

Las Vegas featured 23 lead changes among 15 drivers and an overtime finish in which Bowman raced teammate and reigning Cup champion Kyle Larson door-to-door for the win.

Hall of Fame driver Jeff Gordon, now the vice chairman at Hendrick Motorsports, called the opening month of racing “refreshing” as NASCAR produced a car that has so far lived up to its hype.

“I think we’ve seen great racing. I think we’ve seen cars coming from the back to the front, front to the back. We’ve seen where they can race hard,” Gordon said. “But the cars are on the edge. The drivers are definitely having to show their talent and ability. I think that was the intent, too, was to have a car that was on a more level playing field.”

An aerodynamic package that features lower downforce and higher horsepower has been a handful for drivers throughout the field, with Larson complaining after his runner-up finish in Las Vegas that his upper arms were the sorest they’d been in his entire driving career.

“I’m out there holding a death grip on the steering wheel for four hours, just trying to hang on,” Larson said. “The car is actually really fun to drive.”

The Next Gen still has plenty of kinks, starting with a parts shortage that has left teams scrambling for backup cars. Joe Gibbs Racing did not have a race-ready backup in Las Vegas and spent more than eight hours preparing a “parts car” for Kyle Busch after he crashed his primary in practice.

The car has had difficulty getting back to pit road with a flat tire and wreckers were on standby all over the track at Las Vegas to give a push when needed. Toyota worked out an overheating problem between California and Las Vegas, and teams, manufacturers and even the drivers are learning things each week.

Joey Logano, winner of the Clash, suggested NASCAR employ AAA-style service trucks that can rush out to a disabled racecar and do a quick tire change to speed up the process.

“There’s going to be learning curves,” Logano said. “There’s going to be issues we’re going to have to work through as an industry, because some of it just you don’t know what you don’t know until you get out there. There’s probably going to be more things that come up as we keep racing at different racetracks.”

Following his Sunday victory, Bowman noted how much development has been done on the Next Gen and the gains that have been made since the first test. And for the drivers themselves, each on-track outing has been a learning experience — some good and some bad.

Absolutely everything that I do as a race car driver has completely changed,” Bowman said. “Historically, I’ve loved loose race cars. Cried like a little girl when I’m tight. I now have to figure out how to drive a tight race car because I can’t make a loose race car work anymore. And it is hard.”

But it’s been worth it on the track.

Bowman edges Larson in OT in NASCAR Cup race at Las Vegas

By JENNA FRYER

LAS VEGAS — The racing rule is quite clear at Hendrick Motorsports, where the boss will let his drivers go door-to-door so long as they don’t tear up his cars.

After two of his stars tangled last week in California, Hendrick gave his team a rules refresher.

Message delivered.

Alex Bowman and Larson went wheel-to-wheel Sunday in a two-lap overtime shootout at Las Vegas Motor Speedway. The racing was clean from the restart to the checkered flag and Bowman bested the reigning NASCAR champion for his first win of the season.

The win made it two straight for Hendrick through three Cup races. The winningest owner in NASCAR now has 281 victories.

Bowman took pride in scoring a seventh career victory with a clean 1-2 finish for Hendrick following the meeting with the boss.

“The talk was a big wakeup call,” Bowman said. “When Mr. H calls a meeting like that, it gets your attention.”

Hendrick called the meeting after Larson and Chase Elliott collided racing for the lead at California. Larson said he didn’t see Elliott when he squeezed him into the wall and apologized. Elliott was furious, and Hendrick put the matter to rest.

Just a week later, though, the Hendrick cars again had to race one another for the win and make sure to do it without any bumping or banging. The Hendrick chance came when a spin by Erik Jones with three laps remaining brought out the 12th caution of the race and shifted the fight from a pair of Joe Gibbs Racing cars to the Hendrick cars.

Las Vegas native Kyle Busch and teammate Martin Truex Jr. had been in a lap-by-lap chess match for the win until Jones’ crash. Busch thought he’d inched ahead of Truex and had the win locked up until the caution.

“I don’t know what it was,”

Busch said. “But anyways, wasn’t meant to be. Not our day. See you next week.”

The Hendrick trio of Bowman, Larson and William Byron all changed just two tires to get off pit road first through third. Busch, who had gone to the pits as the leader, took four tires and came off pit road in fourth.

Larson, the defending Las Vegas winner and winner last week in California, chose the outside line for the restart with Bowman on his inside. The two were in a drag race over the final two laps and Bowman only got significant as he closed in on the checkered flag.

Bowman, who led three times for 16 laps, beat Larson to the finish line by 0.178 seconds.

“Kyle and I historically have always raced each other really clean and this was no different,” Bowman said.

Ross Chastain finished third for TrackHouse Racing and a podium sweep for Chevrolet. Chastain, who had led just 75 laps over 117 previous starts, led a race-high 83 laps.

Busch finished fourth in a backup Toyota after crashing in Saturday morning practice when his tire went flat. The wreck destroyed his car and because backups are in short supply at the start of NASCAR’s rollout of the Next Gen model, the only option JGR had was a “parts car” not meant for competition.

“True testament to everybody at Joe Gibbs Racing,” said Busch after the crews from all four teams helped prepare his car. “Everybody had a hand in being able to make us go.”

Byron was fifth to give Hendrick three drivers in the top five and Aric Almirola was sixth and the highest-finishing Ford. Almirola is the only driver to finish inside the top-10 through NASCAR’s first three races of the season.

Chasing Chastain

Chastain’s career was supposed to fast track following his breakthrough 2018 win at Las Vegas Motor Speedway in an Xfinity Series car owned by Chip Ganassi.

But a sponsorship collapse dealt him a major setback and it took Chastain three years to make it to the Cup Series. He got one season with Ganassi before Ganassi sold the organization to TrackHouse Racing, which retained Chastain.

Through three races, the new arrangement suits Chastain rather well.

“It’s a dream come true. This is what all the work is for,” Chastain said after finishing third. “This is why we train, done our whole lives and careers, once we realize we can race at this level is to have race cars like that. Couldn’t be more proud of TrackHouse.”

Support for Ukraine

Richard Childress Racing and Hendrick Motorsports both raised awareness for supporting Ukraine during its invasion by Russia.

Richard Childress responded to Ukrainian President Volodymyr Zelenskyy’s plea, “I don’t need a ride, I need more ammunition,” by donating one million rounds of ammunition to the country.

Childress is on the board of directors for AMMO, Inc., and worked with the company to secure the donation. He was working with a private company to arrange its delivery.

o help bring awareness to the growing humanitarian crisis and to encourage relief donations, team owner

Rick Hendrick and sponsor Hendrick Automotive Group pledged $200,000 to Samaritan’s Purse to support disaster assistance in Ukraine. Hendrick also promised an additional $2,000 for every lap led by one of his drivers and they combined for 51 laps, or an additional $102,000.

Up next

The Cup Series next goes to Phoenix Raceway, where Truex is the defending race winner. Larson won in November to win his first Cup title.

Apple, MLB announce ‘Friday Night Baseball’ package

CUPERTINO, Calif. (AP) — Apple will enter the live sports coverage arena with “Friday Night Baseball.”

Apple and Major League Baseball announced Tuesday that Apple TV+ will carry a weekly doubleheader on Friday nights in eight countries when the regular season begins. Games will initially be available without the need for an Apple TV+ subscription.

The games will be exclusively on Apple TV+ and will not be available on teams’ regional sports networks.

MLB has been under a work stoppage since owners locked out players at the end of the collective bargaining agreement. At 97 days, it is the second-longest work stoppage in baseball history.

The broadcasts on Apple TV+ will include pregame and postgame shows and will not be subject to local broadcast blackout restrictions. They will be produced by MLB Network.

Besides being shown in the United States, Canada and Mexico, games will also initially be available in Australia, Brazil, Japan, South Korea, and the United Kingdom.

The agreement also includes the “MLB Big Inning” weekday show for fans in the US as well as a livestream channel for those watching in the US and Canada.

MLB has been exploring selling a weeknight package of games with ESPN reducing its coverage of the regular season to 30 games, mostly on Sunday nights. Turner Sports will have games on Tuesday nights under a new rights deal that begins this season.

Apple and MLB have been closely aligned for years. MLB At Bat was one of the first apps to go live on the Apple app store in 2008.

The deal also comes as Apple is looking to expand to other leagues. The company has been pursuing streaming of NFL games when the league’s “Sunday Ticket” expires at the end of the upcoming season.
