Animal Rescue Assistance Team Tennessee (ARATT)

ARATT has been working in Marshall County since 2010, before they became an official non-profit group. They help between 75 and 125 unwanted, neglected, abandoned, and/or abused dogs and cats each month. Prices have increased so dramatically that it costs over $120 to get most dog/cats ready to go into an adoptive group to find a home. Even with discounts, there are still struggles. ARATT does not receive any government funding and solely depends on a couple of small grants, donations, and fundraisers by the volunteers and the community.

ARATT is the group that takes in those animals that owners no longer wish to care for. Placement is found for the animals as the ARATT members and volunteers get them ready for adoption. ARATT is a No Kill foster based group. After placement is found, the animals are held in kennels and buildings on the property of one of the board members, until the animal(s) can be transported. ARATT's belief is that all animals deserve a safe, healthy, happy home.

Please help by participating in ARATT's fundraisers and donate when you can. Below are items that are needed at the holding buildings and for the fosters: Dog/Puppy/Cat Food - Dry or

Canned, Paper Towels, Bowls, Puppy Pads, Non Stuffed Bedding, Bath Towels (used or new); Disposable Gloves, Slip Leads, Martingale Collars and Harnesses, Cedar Chips, Flea/Tick Prevention, Panacur, Kitty Litter

Items can be dropped off at the Rink Emporium or Potter's Hand. Just let them know the items are for ARATT.

Financial donations can be sent to: ARATT, 2011 Verona Caney Rd, Lewisburg, TN 37091

Cash app $teamaratt; PayPal teamaratt@yahoo.com; the clinic ARATT uses is Meredith Warner Clinic, 931-359-3945-tell them it is for the ARATT account.

Emcee

Amanda Smith (now Mrs. Ben Putman) will be the Mistress of Ceremonies for this year's Miss Marshall County Pageant, which will be held poolside at the Lewisburg Recreation Center on the evening of July 4. Amanda was named Miss Marshall County in the same setting in July of 2009 and crowned by Morgan Carroll, who was the reigning Miss Marshall County and Amanda's co-worker at the Recreation Center that summer. She laughs when she recalls that she was one of the older contestants and entered the pageant because Morgan kept insisting. Amanda borrowed a dress, did her own hair and makeup, and got her best friend to be her dresser. She was most prepared, however, for a finalist question which she answered with confidence and knowledge of current events.

During her reign, Amanda was living at home and doing her student teaching. She graduated MTSU with a degree in elementary education soon after. While she was substitute teaching, she met and later married Ben Putman, who had moved from North Alabama to teach at Cornersville High School. After two years at Westhills School, Amanda took a position teaching the second grade at Cornersville Elementary, where she continues to teach and support the many extra curricula programs at the elementary school. She is a former high school cheer coach and continues to support the team by being a chaperone for the cheerleaders when they are on the road. With her husband, she coaches the CHS cross country team. Both Amanda and Ben completed their Master's degree in Administration and Supervision in 2022. In 2021 she was named Cornersville Elementary School Teacher of the Year.

The couple has two boys: Hudson, age 8, and Maddux, age 5. Following in their parents' athletic footsteps, the boys play basketball and baseball and can be seen on the travel ball circuit this summer. The family worships together at First Baptist Church Lewisburg.

A veteran emcee of the Miss Cornersville pageant, Amanda looks forward to working with the contestants and encouraging them to have fun. She believes that "the beauty in the heart will always shine through."

G.S.I. – Girl Scout Investigators

By Trina Hardrick

Girl Scouts of Marshall County held their day ('twilight') camp during the 3rd week of June. This year's camp theme was G.S.I. – Girl Scout Investigators. Campers spent the week learning about forensic science and crime scene investigation. On Monday, the campers began by discussing 'What is forensic science?' They discovered that forensic science is a science that is used by the courts of law to provide unbiased scientific evidence to solve a crime and to expose the real criminal. Next, they learned about the Seven S's of Crime Scene Investigation. After which, they built a crime scene out of Legos then sketched the scene (one of the seven S's.) The campers then took a brain break and did some special agent training on the obstacle course. Next on the agenda was importance of using gloves and other safety gear. By using makeup and gloves, they were able to see how transference could happen between touched objects and cause cross contamination of evidence. At the end of the evening, campers used their powers of observation to see how good of an eyewitness they would have been by noting what items had changed on a couple of the leaders throughout the evening. Tuesday was all about evidence and experiments.

Campers started off learning about chromatography, which is the separation of a mixture into its components, by making an ink chromatography butterfly using coffee filters and felt ink pens. Next, they learned about various impressions. Shoe print castings were made of each camper's footprint. They attempted to identify tire tracks from various toy cars and to match the tool to its imprint casting. Each camper made a bite mark impression in a Styrofoam plate and looked to see how their impression was different from their friends. At this point they stopped to work on some scouting skills with compasses and maps; however, they related this work back to how these skills might help investigators when using search patterns. On Wednesday, the camp had a wonderful guest speaker stop by to talk to the campers. "Sissy" Taylor, a former detective and current Girl Scout leader from the Spring Hill area, explained to the campers all about fingerprints. She also discussed cross contamination, what it was like as a female detective working with male detectives, and regaled us with a few stories of different crimes she had investigated. The campers then investigated their own fingerprints and attempted to lift fingerprints using cocoa powder and cornstarch. They ended the day learning about blood spatter and attempting to create different spatters with fake blood. Campers started Thursday off by doing a little archery. They then headed off to experiment with extracting DNA from strawberries. Next on Thursday's agenda was practicing some scouting skills. Campers worked on various knots, such as square knots and lark's head knot. When working on knife skills, campers used candles and wax paper to make fire starters. The last day of camp began with a wood fire and S'mores. Campers then used their new detective skills to solve an outdoor 'escape room' to find the lost Girl Scout jewels. They then worked on their fire building skills which include safety, how to light a match, and what types of wood to gather. The evening concluded with a family and friend's potluck and camper awards. Much fun was had by all! We would like to thank all of our Volunteer Unit Leaders, our older girl Unit & Game helpers, Henry Horton for making sure we had a pavilion to use and getting us the archery range to use, and Bakin' Cakes for providing our theme cake for awards night. Girl Scouts of Marshall County is a part of Girl Scouts of Middle Tennessee. BUMPER TO BUMPER! WE ARE YOUR FULL SERVICE AUTO REPAIR SHOP!

Is your food ultra-processed enough?

When I was a young adult living under my parents' roof, my late father always made sure I had Beanie Weenees, Vienna sausage, potted meat and other such snacks to take to my graveyard-shift factory job at Faber-Castell. I appreciated the display of paternal love; but Chris van Tulleken, author of "Ultra-Processed People," would probably be aghast. Granted, van Tulleken is not alone in sounding alarm bells about today's ultra-processed foods -- groceries characterized by arm-long lists of additives, kaleidoscopic clashes of dyes ("Mambo Number 5 is a color, right?") and whole grains replaced with the assurance that "We allowed the shadow of a stalk of barley to fall across the vat." I suppose one turning point was when bags of crushed ice started containing more ingredients than all the letters in the extended version of LGBTQ+. Remember when Mom would insist that her secret culinary ingredient was love? Today's assembly lines double down on emotions and throw in envy, gluttony, avarice, lust, pride, sloth and wrath for good measure. According to van Tulleken, the chemical modifications necessary to pacify our addiction to salt, sugar and fat can amplify risk of cancer, cardiovascular disease, Type 2 diabetes, hypertension, depression and dementia. No, we're not far from the touchscreens in convenience markets asking us, "Are you paying with credit, debit or funeral insurance?" With the normalization of artificiality, Costco will have to be more vigilant about passing out free samples. ("No, wait -- that's not the onion dip! That's the scan gun! What? Oh, I'm glad you like the crunchiness.") I'll wager there's a food-industry chemist somewhere in America telling a buddy, "Hypertension? That's kid stuff. Here, hold my beer. I'm three processes away from this microwaveable entrée causing spontaneous combustion in left-handed Midwesterners! As for the San Andreas Fault..." I know -- I'm being too hard on the R&D people. I salute the amount of trial and error required to guarantee our packaged foods target all the taste sensations: salty, sour, sweet, bitter, umami (savory), Chernobyl-icious, etc. I realize consumers can be infuriatingly demanding about getting the preferred texture, flavor and appearance; but it took Goldilocks only three tries to get everything "just right." Read a storybook, guys! Sure, preservatives are needed to ensure reasonable shelf life, but some products have an existence longer than that of the continental shelf! Look for boxes to be stamped with messages such as "Best if used by... someone who is on Death Row, anyway." To his credit, van Tulleken isn't all about guilt-tripping or crusading for massive governmental intervention in the food industry. He is more interested in tweaks and nudges to produce a healthier culture, rather than one where "Hi, friend" is heard less often than "high fructose." Maybe new product names will make us think twice about our unchecked caloric intake. I Can't Believe It's Not Marginally Better Than a Poke in the Eye with A Sharp Stick has a vibe you can sink your teeth into. Perhaps a soccer mom will brainstorm a way to balance the convenience of Cheetos and Beanie Weenees with the sort of edibles Grandma used to slave over. ("Relax. We can still make it to soccer practice, the dance recital and the karate lessons; but first, we need to swing by the South 40 to harvest a wholesome snack. Oops. I'm sorry the scythe punctured your soccer ball, Amber.") ©2023 Danny Tyree. Danny is the author of "Why Pro Life," available in paperback and Kindle from Amazon.

Christ in the Rainbow

"I set My rainbow in the cloud, and it shall be for the sign of the covenant between Me and the earth. It shall be, when I bring a cloud over the earth, that the rainbow shall be seen in the cloud; and I will remember My covenant which is between Me and you and every living creature of all flesh; the waters shall never again become a flood to destroy all flesh. The rainbow shall be in the cloud, and I will look on it to remember the everlasting covenant between God and every living creature of all flesh that is on the earth." - Genesis 9:13-16

A rainbow, with its rich colors highlighting the sky after a rainstorm, is the sun's light rays refracted through the misty water molecules in the air failing at different angles and so produce different prismatic colors. This is beautiful for everyone to see. However, we live in an era where the symbol of the rainbow has been distorted and hijacked by one group of people for political purposes. Nevertheless, God gave the rainbow as a symbol of peace and hope for us all.

We read that the rainbow is a sign of the covenant that God made with Noah, and all living creatures after the worldwide floodwaters subsided. It is God's promise to never destroy the earth again by a global flood.

Beyond the visual magnificent of a rainbow in the sky, the rainbow is a beautiful illustration of the person and work of Jesus Christ. We read where God set His rainbow in the "cloud" (Genesis 9:13,16). So it is that Christ, the Son of Man, is pictured as set upon a "cloud" having a golden crown (Revelation 14:14). Just like the rainbow is sent by God preaching to us the everlasting covenant of peace from a watery destruction. So it is that Christ was sent by God to preach peace through the blood of the everlasting covenant from a fiery destruction (John 20:21; Hebrews 13:20; Romans 5:1). Just like the rainbow is set in the cloud, over us all, with its rich beautiful colors. So it is that Christ the Lord is over all, rich unto all that call upon Him (Romans 10:12). As the rainbow pictures love coming down from heaven to earth. So it is with Christ, He has come down in love from heaven to earth

(John 3:13,16,17; John 6:38). As the rainbow is beautifully colored with the glory of all the colors of the spectrum. So it is that Christ's redeemed people from all nations, kindred, and tongues beautifully colors heaven as they are around His throne with the voice of praise and glory to God for their salvation (Revelation 7:10,12). We read where God's glory is like "the appearance of the bow" in the cloud (Ezekiel 1:28). Likewise, we have the striking vision of a rainbow round about the throne of Christ (Revelation 4:3).

So the next time you see a rainbow, may you think of Christ in all His glory!

Cook to command Cornersville football

By WILL CARTER
wcarter@marshalltribune.com

CORNERSVILLE — The Cornersville Bulldogs didn't have to look very far for a new head coach when the position opened up at the end of the 2022 season.

In fact, it was a short search down the sideline as defensive coordinator, Eliot Cook, has been named head coach of the Cornersville football program.

"This is a huge honor," Cook said.

"All the people that I looked up to in my life to this point were coaches, so I'm honored to be in this position. The kids know what to expect out of me. I've had a relationship with them, people in the community, and the administration here, so it was an easy transition. We've had some success since I've been here, so hopefully we can get back to that."

Cook, a Marshall County native, has been with the Bulldogs since joining former coach Gerard Randolph's staff as defensive coordinator for the 2017 season.

The Bulldogs went 13-2 that year with their season ending in a 42-21 loss to Greenback in the 1-A state championship game.

In the following season, the Bulldogs returned the majority of their team, and found themselves with a perfect, 13-0 record heading into the 1-A State Championship, but fell one point short to Whitwell in a 7-6 loss.

Before arriving at Cornersville in 2017, Cook spent time coaching at many Marshall County area schools including Forrest Middle School, Marshall County High School, and Lewisburg Middle School.

Having coached with Randolph at Marshall County, Cook was an easy choice to join the staff and help the program after his time at

Eliot Cook has been named head coach of the Cornersville Bulldogs football program.

Lewisburg Middle came to an end, but it took some time and persuasion from Randolph to get him there.

"I thought I would be at Lewisburg forever, but then I ended up here at Cornersville," Cook said.

"Coach Randolph kept trying to persuade me to come over here to coach Cornersville with him because we had coached at MCHS together. I was hesitant, but I ended up going to watch spring practice, and I was in after that."

At the top of Cook's list of priorities when he was hired was having the team's support, and it was evident he had that when the administration shared the news with the Bulldogs.

"The day they announced me to the boys, I hid in a closet next to coach Crabtree's room and coach Adcock told the boys that they were about to introduce the new coach to them," Cook said.

"I came out of that side room, and all the boys got up and cheered. Things don't always go great and people talk, but having the support of the kids is the biggest thing for me."

A lot of times when a new head coach is hired, there's an adjustment period for the team and staff to get used to new ideas, principles, and schemes.

For Cook, there weren't many changes to be made as he wants to replicate what the 2017 and 2018 teams did.

"There aren't a lot of adjustments that we had to make when I came in. We had a little bump in the road last year, but we're going to get back to the way we were doing things," Cook said.

"Being able to coach under coach Randolph helps me to not have to change a whole lot. He had us going in the right direction, and he and I were really aligned defensively and how we think a program should be run. Out in the weight room it says D.A.W.G.S, and we have an acronym that goes with that. Discipline, Aggression, We not me, Grit, and Swagger. We kind of made that work because it's everywhere here, but I believe in those words. That's a big deal here in Cornersville."

Former Arkansas quarterback dies in drowning

DESTIN, Fla. (AP) — Former Arkansas quarterback Ryan Mallett, who also played for New England, Houston and Baltimore during five seasons in the NFL, has died. He was 35.

Mallett died in an apparent drowning, according to the Okaloosa County Sheriff's Office. Mallett was a football coach at White Hall High School in his native Arkansas, and the school district also confirmed his death in a post on its website on Tuesday.

Arkansas athletic director Hunter Yurachek said the university "lost an incredibly special person."

"Our thoughts and prayers are with the family, friends and teammates of Ryan Mallett," Yurachek posted on Twitter.

Mallett played for the University of Michigan for one season before finishing his college career at Arkansas. He passed for 7,493 yards and 62 touchdowns in two seasons with the Razorbacks.

Mallett was selected by New England in the third round of the 2011 NFL draft. He appeared in four games with the Patriots during the 2012 season, completing 1 of 4 passes for 17 yards.

New England coach Bill Belichick said he was "extremely saddened by Ryan's tragic passing."

"My thoughts and prayers are with his family and the many people whose lives he touched," Belichick said in a statement posted by the team on Twitter.

Mallett made six starts in nine games with the Texans and two starts in eight appearances with the Ravens. He completed 190 of his 345 attempts in the NFL for 1,835 yards and nine touchdowns with 10 interceptions.

"Ryan was a part of us," Ravens coach John Harbaugh said in a Twitter post by the team. "I will always remember the love he had for his teammates and for making the most of, and enjoying every football day while here."

In his first start on Nov. 16, 2014, Mallett directed Houston to a 23-7 victory at Cleveland. His first career TD pass was a 2-yarder to defensive end J.J. Watt.

"Horrible news to read about Ryan Mallett," Watt posted on Twitter. "Gone way too soon. Rest in Peace brother."

Henry Horton State Park trail signs upgraded

Tribune Staff Report

Last week, members of the Tennessee Trails Association visited Henry Horton State Park for a hike along the Adeline Wilhoite River Trail where the park highlighted its recent upgrades to the trail signs.

Thanks to the Evan Means Grant awarded during the 2022 grant cycle, Henry Horton State Park was able to use $1,000 to enhance the trails by adding more than 50 newly routed trail signs which will help visitors navigate the trail system.

The signs were created by the park's CNC machine and were installed by volunteers and park staff.

In 1999, the Evan Means Grants Program was created to honor the memory of Evan Means who was a co-founder of the Tennessee Trails Association in 1968.

The program provides funding for volunteer-based nonprofit groups whose requests aren't large enough for a more formal grant-making organization.

Rookie tight ends don't always make a major impact right away

By STEVE MEGARGEE
AP Sports Writer

GREEN BAY, Wis. — This rookie class of tight ends already made quite an impact on the draft.

They'll have to buck history if they're going to leave the same type of impression on the field this year. Tight end arguably is the toughest position for rookies to make huge contributions.

Detroit Lions coach Matt Campbell, who played tight end in the NFL from 1999-2008, understands why.

"I always make this argument: Besides the quarterback, the tight ends have to know more than anybody else offensively," said Campbell, who played for the New York Giants, Dallas Cowboys and Lions. "You've got to know it all."

Campbell has high hopes for Sam LaPorta, the tight end Detroit drafted out of Iowa in the second round. LaPorta was one of nine tight ends selected in the first three rounds of the recent draft, the highest total since the common draft era began in 1967.

The others are Buffalo's Dalton Kincaid (formerly at Utah), Las Vegas' Michael Mayer (Notre Dame), Green Bay's Luke Musgrave (Oregon State) and Tucker Kraft (South Dakota State), Dallas' Luke Schoonmaker (Michigan), Jacksonville's Brenton Strange (Penn State), Pittsburgh's Darnell Washington (Georgia) and San Francisco's Cameron Latu (Alabama).

Kincaid, the 25th overall pick, was the lone first-round selection. Mayer, Musgrave, Schoonmaker and Strange joined LaPorta as second-round picks. Kraft, Washington and Latu went in the third round.

The question is whether there's anyone who could approach the rookie production Atlanta's Kyle Pitts had a couple of years ago.

Pitts caught 68 passes for 1,026 yards in 2021 after the former Florida star was selected fourth overall, the earliest a tight end had ever been drafted. But he's an exception.

Only five rookie tight ends in NFL history have caught as many as 60 passes. Four have caught more than seven touchdown passes in their debut seasons. Pitts had one. Just two accumulated 1,000 yards receiving.

Pitts was the first rookie tight end to reach the 1,000-yard mark since Chicago's Mike Ditka had 12 touchdown catches and 1,076 yards receiving — both rookie records — in 1961. The record for catches by a rookie tight end is owned by Keith Jackson, who had 81 receptions for the Philadelphia Eagles in 1988.

Green Bay Packers coach Matt LaFleur agrees tight ends face a bigger learning curve than most because of all that's expected of them. Some tight ends who might have put up big receiving numbers in college discover pass-catching skills aren't enough to succeed in the NFL.

"There's just so much that you have to, so much knowledge that you have to acquire in terms of you're responsible in the running game and the passing game and you might have some protection responsibility," LaFleur said.

LaFleur's rookie tight ends already have discovered that.

"I think in college as tight ends you're really not asked to do the extent that you are in the pros," Kraft said.

Buffalo's Dawson Knox puts it in more descriptive terms.

A 2019 third-round pick from Mississippi, Knox has caught 15 touchdown passes over the last two seasons. As he helps Kincaid adapt to the NFL, Knox remembers his own challenges as a rookie.

"It's like trying to drink from a firehose," he said.

Knox said the biggest adjustment is learning the playbook.

"It's almost like a foreign language sometimes because it could be a 15-word play call and you're trying to figure out which words are talking to you, what words mean something to the other guys and then all these different alerts and stuff," he said.

This class of tight ends may have a chance to catch on quicker than most.

The group is headed by Kincaid, an exceptional receiver who had one of the most remarkable single-game performances of the 2022 college season when he caught 16 passes for 234 yards in a victory over then-unbeaten Southern California.

"I love his approach," Bills offensive coordinator Ken Dorsey said. "Right now it's been great. (He's) just coming in eager to learn, eager to just build a foundation more so than anything, and I think that's important."

Mayer and LaPorta come from college programs known for producing NFL tight ends, which could help them make a fast adjustment. Mayer might have the best combination of receiving and blocking ability in this class.

"Michael really is what we thought he was - a really hard worker, great teammate, tries to get better every single day, very attentive in the meetings, works at his technique very hard, wants to know how he can get better as being a pro," Raiders coach Josh McDaniels said.

The other rookie tight ends are trying to take a similar approach. They believe consistency will help them adapt to the NFL faster than past first-year tight ends.

"That's the biggest struggle for any athlete, any rookie, transitioning in the NFL — being consistently better, getting better at one thing every single day," Kraft said.

Here's How It Works:
 Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Athletes who sign NLI won't face penalty with coaching changes

By The Associated Press

The governing body for the National Letter of Intent Program on Tuesday announced new policies allowing athletes to back out of NLI agreements without penalty under certain circumstances.

The signing of letters of intent has been part of the recruiting process in NCAA divisions I and II since 1964. It is intended to be a binding agreement between an athlete and school. The athlete promises to attend the school for one academic year in exchange for a full or partial athletic scholarship for one academic year.

An athlete who does not fulfill his or her NLI agreement traditionally must sit out one season of competition at the next school they attend.

Following a committee review of NLI policy, the Collegiate Commissioners Association will not penalize an athlete who requests a release due to a head coaching change. Neither will an athlete be penalized for leaving their original school after one quarter or one semester as long as a release is requested.

The policy change takes effect with the 2023-24 signing periods for 2024-25 enrollees.

The CCA also will expand the program to provide an athlete transferring from one four-year school to another an opportunity to sign an NLI as long as he or she has entered the NCAA transfer portal.

Big Sky Conference Commissioner Tom Wistrick, chair of the NLI Policy and Review Committee, said the changes are meant to modernize the NLI program so it more accurately reflects the recruiting landscape.

Ledecky dazzles again with another dominant national performance

By PAUL NEWBERRY
AP National Writer

INDIANAPOLIS — Katie Ledecky joined an elite club Tuesday night, earning her sixth trip to the world championships with a dominating victory in the 800-meter freestyle at the U.S. nationals.

Ledecky was under her own world-record pace for much of the race before settling for the victory in 8 minutes, 7.07 seconds — her third-fastest time in the grueling event, which she has dominated over her long career with the 30 fastest times in history.

She was clearly pleased with the performance, flashing a thumbs-up and a defiant shake of the head when she turned and spotted the time.

Ledecky will head to Fukuoka, Japan, next month as only the sixth U.S. swimmer to make the world championships for the sixth time, joining Michael Phelps, Ryan Lochte, Natalie Coughlin, Elizabeth Beisel and Nathan Adrian.

No one else was even close to Ledecky. When she touched the wall, the closest swimmer was more than a half-lap behind.

Seventeen-year-old Jillian Cox claimed the second spot on the worlds team in a major surprise. She finished in 8:20.28 — more than 13 seconds behind the winner.

Ledecky didn't seem the least bit surprised by the performance, which was her fastest showing since the world record of 8:04.79 she set at the 2016 Rio de Janeiro Games.

Next month in Fukuoka, Ledecky will attempt to become the first swimmer ever to win the same event at six world championships. She's already the first to claim five consecutive titles, having started her streak of 800 triumphs a decade ago at the worlds in Barcelona.

"I've been feeling good," Ledecky said. "I thought I would be pretty good tonight. I didn't expect a world record or anything. But felt I could be at least what I was last summer at worlds (when she won her fifth straight 800 title in 8:08.04). I'm really pleased with that. And really pleased with how it felt, as well."

At age 26, Ledecky shows no sign of slowing down — even though she's been on top of the world in distance freestyle swimming since her surprising gold medal at the 2012 London Olympics.

Next summer in Paris, she'll be expected to add to an already impressive haul of seven gold medals and three silvers at the last three Olympics. Her medal record at worlds is downright staggering: 19 gold medals and three silvers.

Ledecky seems rejuvenated by her move to Florida after the Tokyo Olympics to join a training group led by coach Anthony Nesty.

"Training's been great. Just every day, chipping away and putting in really good work," she said. "Of course, there are ups and downs and days that makes you a little worried. But Coach Nesty always knows how to calm me down."

In other finals on the first night of nationals:

— Defending Olympic champion Bobby Finke broke a nearly 15-year-old U.S. Open record with a winning time of 14:42.81 in the men's 1,500 free. Charlie Clark claimed the second spot for Fukuoka in 14:50.84.

— Regan Smith cruised to victory in the women's 200 butterfly at 2:05.79, with Sun Devil Swimming teammate Lindsay Looney also earning a trip to worlds at 2:07.35.

— Carson Foster claimed the men's 200 fly title in 1:54.32, while 16-year-old Thomas Heilman established himself as a rising star in an event Michael Phelps long dominated by rallying to take the second spot in 1:54.54.

— Olympic medalists Kate Douglass and Abbey Weitzeil went 1-2 in the women's 100 free to punch their tickets for Fukuoka. Douglass won with a time of 52.57, followed by Weitzeil at 53.11.

— After defending Olympic champion Caeleb Dressel flopped in the men's 100 free prelims, the finals were wide open. Jack Alexy took the title in 47.93, while Chris Guiliano surprisingly claimed the second worlds spot from lane one in 47.98.

Former Blue Jays All-Star rocked in minor league

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Toronto Blue Jays starter Alek Manoah was hit hard in his first game after returning to the minors, allowing 11 runs over 2 2/3 innings in a rookie-level Florida Complex League game on Tuesday.

Before the Blue Jays hosted the San Francisco Giants in Toronto on Tuesday night, manager John Schneider played down Manoah's rough outing.

"Obviously saw the line score, but heard that the things we were talking about, in terms of strike throwing, delivery, tempo, velocity, were all positive," Schneider said. "The rest of the stuff, you can take it with a grain of salt."

The Blue Jays sent the struggling right-hander down on June 6 after the 2022 All-Star and AL Cy Young finalist couldn't get out of the first inning against the Houston Astros.

Pitching for the FCL Blue Jays against the Yankees at New York's minor league complex, the 25-year-old gave up 10 hits, including two homers, and two walks against a lineup composed mostly of teenagers 17 to 19 years old.

After Manoah allowed an RBI single to Hans Montero in the first, Roderick Arias hit a second-inning three-run homer that cleared the approximately 30-foot center-field batter's eye. The 18-year old Arias received a $4 million signing bonus in 2022 from the Yankees.

The 6-foot-6 righty needed 26 pitches, including 15 strikes, in the second.

Manoah was chased after giving up six more runs in a third inning that featured an opposite-field, two-run homer to right by Keiner Delgado.

"We're not expecting him to go throw a perfect game just because it's the minor leagues," said Schneider, who wasn't sure when Manoah would pitch next.

"Hopefully, in the next one, he can build a little bit of momentum."

Manoah was booed by Toronto fans after allowing six runs and seven hits in one-third of an inning on June 5 in his seventh straight losing decision. He was 1-7 with a 6.36 ERA in 13 starts after going 16-7 with a 2.24 ERA in 31 starts last season.

Manoah has allowed 45 runs in 58 innings. He allowed 55 in 196 2/3 innings in 2022. He went 9-2 with a 3.22 ERA in 20 starts as a rookie in 2021.

Ryder Cup could be loaded, and some stars could be left out for U.S.

By DOUG FERGUSON
AP Golf Writer

Ryder Cup captain Zach Johnson still has time on his side, just not as much. He also keeps getting more candidates for his U.S. team, which isn't making the job any easier.

And it's no longer about Brooks Koepka or anyone else from LIV Golf.

"There's still a lot of golf between now and then," Johnson said that Sunday morning in May at the PGA Championship, a few hours before Brooks Koepka showed off his major swagger at Oak Hill with a victory that did more than restore his reputation as Big Game Brooks.

It moved him to No. 2 in the Ryder Cup standings. Given that Koepka appears to be back at full strength, that's not such a bad thing.

Now consider the last two weeks.

Wyndham Clark showed plenty of moxie when he outplayed Rory McIlroy on the back nine of Los Angeles Country Club and won the U.S. Open. Coupled with his victory in an elevated event at the Wells Fargo Championship, Clark moved past Koepka to No. 2 and is all but assured of his Ryder Cup debut in Rome.

And then Keegan Bradley battled the internal pressure of playing before a home crowd in New England and won the Travelers Championship for his second victory of the year. That big yell he let loose on the 18th green brought back images of his Ryder Cup debut in 2012.

He moved to No. 7 in the standings.

Bradley hasn't played in a Ryder Cup since 2014, an unhappy memory in Scotland from Captain Tom Watson benching him in three of the five sessions and Europe celebrating on home soil.

The thought of playing in another Ryder Cup meant every bit as much as the $3.6 million he won.

"It is the first thing I said to my wife walking up to sign my card," Bradley said Sunday. "This is a pretty big step towards doing that. I'm 37 years old. I hope to play in multiple more. I don't know how many more with everybody so good and the young kids, just the team is incredible."

"I would love to go to Rome and be a part of that team."

Right when it looks as though the American team has a core of Ryder Cup stars who finally can swing the pendulum in its favor, someone new — or something new — comes along.

From that '21 team that gave Europe its worst loss ever in the Ryder Cup, three players defected to something new (LIV Golf). Among the potential newcomers to the big stage are Max Homa and Cameron Young, Clark and Sam Burns, the latter narrowly left off the last Ryder Cup team.

The core from Whistling Straits included Justin Thomas, Jordan Spieth and Collin Morikawa, all of them multiple major champions, none with a victory over the last 12 months.

The matches start Sept. 29 in Rome.

The leading six players through the BMW Championship automatically qualify, and then Johnson says he will lean on those six players and his assistant captains to determine the six wild-card picks to give the team a sense of ownership.

Time on his side? Eight weeks remain before qualifying ends. That includes a major (British Open) and a pair of $20 million events from the FedEx Cup playoffs. Most of the top players won't be playing more than four of those eight weeks.

The leading six in the Ryder Cup standings going into the Rocket Mortgage Classic are Scottie Scheffler, Clark, Koepka, Xander Schauffele, Patrick Cantlay and Homa.

Next in line are Bradley, Spieth, Young, Burns, Thomas and Morikawa.

Still to be determined? Plenty.

The resurgent Rickie Fowler and Tony Finau, who has played on the last four U.S. teams and has two wins this season, are part of the conversation.

Dustin Johnson is probably too far back that even a claret jug won't allow him to qualify, but he will be hard to ignore if he were to win the final major of the year. The last (healthy) American to win a major and get left off the Ryder Cup team was Todd Hamilton in 2004.

Turnover is nothing new for the Americans. When they manhandled Europe at Hazeltine in 2016 to end a three-match losing streak, only six of them were on the charter flight to France two years later (another loss).

Five players from the dominant Ryder Cup team at Whistling Straits didn't make it to the next U.S. team 12 months later in the Presidents Cup — three because of injury (Harris English, Daniel Berger).

But the way golf has gone over the last few months must make Zach Johnson wonder how the next two months will play out. Six players qualify. Twelve players go to Rome. Someone always gets squeezed out, and that will be the case again. Johnson knew that when he accepted the job.

Now it's a matter of waiting for the music to stop to find out who doesn't have a seat.

Jimmie Johnson's in-laws found shot to death

MUSKOGEE, Okla. (AP) — Police in Muskogee, Oklahoma, confirmed Tuesday they are investigating the shooting deaths of three relatives of seven-time NASCAR champion Jimmie Johnson.

The bodies of Jack Janway, 69; his wife Terry Janway, 68; and their grandson Dalton Janway, 11, were discovered Monday at a home in Muskogee, located about 50 miles (80 kilometers) southeast of Tulsa, Muskogee police spokesperson Lynn Hamlin said. Hamlin said investigators believe Terry Janway shot and killed her husband and grandson before shooting herself.

Police responded to the home after a woman called 911 to report a disturbance with a gun before hanging up, Hamlin said.

When police arrived on the scene, they found one person near the front door of the home and then heard a gunshot from further inside, where officers later found two other people dead, Hamlin said. Hamlin confirmed the three are the parents and nephew of Johnson's wife, Chandra Janway. Johnson's race team, Jimmie Johnson's in-laws were found shot dead in Oklahoma, according to officials.

Legacy Motor Club, announced on Twitter it was withdrawing his No. 84 Carvana Chevrolet from this weekend's NASCAR Cup Series event in Chicago. The team added: "The Johnson family has asked for privacy at this time and no further statements will be made." "We are saddened by the tragic deaths of members of Chandra

Johnson's family," NASCAR said in a statement. "The entire NASCAR family extends its deepest support and condolences during this difficult time to Chandra, Jimmie and the entire Johnson & Janway families."

PGA Tour board reminds players they'll have vote on final deal with Saudis

DETROIT (AP) — The PGA Tour sought to assure players Tuesday that they will have a say in the tour's new partnership with the Saudi funders of LIV Golf, with its policy board issuing a statement that noted players would have to approve any final agreement between the once-rival tours.

The statement was released after a meeting of the board, which includes five players: Patrick Cantlay, Rory McIlroy, Charley Hoffman, Peter Malnati and Webb Simpson.

On Monday night, media outlets including The Associated Press obtained the tour's framework agreement with the Saudis, which said the PGA Tour and European tour would work with their new partners to decide how defectors to LIV Golf can return and what kind of punishment they should face.

Players have been frustrated by the lack of details in the framework agreement, which was negotiated in secret by Commissioner Jay Monahan, two independent board members and Yasir Al-Rumayyan, the governor of Saudi Arabia's Public Investment Fund. As part of the deal, the tour and the Saudis agreed to dismiss all pending lawsuits.

"Entering the framework agreement put an end to costly litigation. Management, with input from our player directors, has now begun a new phase of negotiations to determine if the tour can reach a definitive agreement that is in the best interests of our players, fans, sponsors, partners, and the game overall," the statement said.

"If future negotiations lead to a proposed agreement, it would need approval by the tour's policy board, which includes player directors. In the meantime, we are all committed to the safeguards in the framework agreement that ensure the PGA Tour would lead and maintain control of this potential new commercial entity," the statement continued.

The board met Tuesday ahead of the Rocket Mortgage Classic, which many top players are skipping after a busy stretch that included the U.S. Open and last week's Travelers Championship, one of the new designated events on the tour schedule with a $20 million purse. McIlroy and Cantlay are not in the field at Detroit Golf Club.

The framework agreement calls for the tour and the Saudis to form a new commercial entity, known for now only as "NewCo." It includes assurances that the tour would keep a controlling interest in that entity.

The deal has attracted the attention of Congress, with the Senate Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations set to hold a hearing on July 11. Monahan has been invited to testify, but his availability is in question because he is on leave while dealing with a "medical situation."

Carl Edwards became the first NASCAR driver to be inducted into the Legends Plaza at Nashville's Superspeedway.

Carl Edwards 1st inductee into Nashville's new Legends Plaza

By TERESA M. WALKER
AP Sports Writer

LEBANON — Carl Edwards, a six-time winner at the Nashville Superspeedway, is the first driver inducted into the track's new Legends Plaza.

Edwards was inducted Sunday before the Ally 400, the third Cup race at the 1.33-mile, D-shaped oval concrete track. He was named one of NASCAR's top 75 drivers earlier this year despite retiring in 2016 at the age of 36 with 28 career Cup Series' victories. He called this more than an honor.

"To be able to come back here and reflect on that is just a really powerful thing and a humbling thing for me to be able to share it with my family and my friends," Edwards said. "This is your day to feel all the love is just over the top."

Matt Greci, the superspeedway's president, announced Edwards as the first inductee. Edwards not only won six races on the largest concrete oval in NASCAR, he finished in the top 10 in 12 of his 13 Xfinity Series races here. The superspeedway didn't host its first Cup Series race until 2021.

The plaza currently is being designed and will be open year-round for fans once open. Drivers will be commemorated in bronze in the shape of a guitar pick, following in the track's tradition of awarding winners a Gibson guitar. The superspeedway's current logo is the head of a guitar.

Edwards said he never saw the track filled with so many fans and so much energy. The 30,000-seat grandstand was sold out for Sunday night's Ally 400 Cup race, with campers and fans all around the track with concerts filling the weekend schedule.

He also noticed Kyle Busch spun out by himself during practice. Edwards said that's because this track is such a challenge. His wife told him on the way in Sunday that he loved the track.

"I was like, 'No!' As a driver, this is like hard," Edwards said. "This is a tough place. And so I was always very proud of the wins. And I thought it was a testament to my team because as a race car driver, this is a place that your car has to be perfect."

Under the lights

The Ally 400 finished under the lights a year ago due to weather delays. On Sunday night, drivers started in prime time thanks to a scheduling move with a 7 p.m. EDT start that should make fans more comfortable with the temperature feeling like 98 degrees just before the green flag.

Chase Elliott called the prime-time start for both Nashville and Atlanta on July 9 smart decisions, if only to keep fans from roasting at tracks with lights. He won here last year in a race that lasted nearly seven hours because of weather issues.

"I just don't see any reason why we shouldn't have more night races during these months where it's so hot for the spectators," Elliott said.

Hello guys

Joe Gibbs' new minority partners in his NASCAR team showed up for their first Cup Series race only days after the announcement he had sold a piece to prominent members of the group awaiting approval to take over ownership of the NFL's Washington Commanders.

Josh Harris, David Blitzer, and the entire HBSE & Arctos group joined Joe Gibbs Racing at the Nashville Superspeedway on Sunday.

"We look forward to many (checkered flag emoji)'s together! (And we're looking forward to W's with the @sixers & @NJDevils as well!)," JGR wrote on social media.

NFL owners are set to meet July 20 in Minneapolis to consider and potentially vote to approve the sale of the Washington Commanders, a person told The Associated Press on Friday on the condition of anonymity because the league meeting was not announced.

Three-quarters — 24 of the league's 32 owners — approval is needed to finalize the deal between Dan Snyder and his family and a group led by Harris, owner of the NBA's Philadelphia 76ers and NHL's New Jersey Devils. Basketball Hall of Famer Magic Johnson is also among those involved in the incoming ownership group.

Must go faster

Comedian Nate Bargatze is a Nashville native who remembers the thrill of Interstate 40 being built and even attended a race at this track a couple years ago. On Sunday night, he was the honorary pace car driver for his first time on a NASCAR track.

At least officially. About 20 years ago, Bargatze and a couple friends snuck through an open gate at Richmond and onto the track.

"We just drove our car on it, and then someone came and shut the gate pretty fast," said Bargatze, who has a new special on Netflix.

"I don't think we were supposed to do that. So that's the only time. We drove like my friend's grandmother's car, you know, Ford Focus, like just putted around and then we got kicked out. So never anything professional or on the record of driving."
