Missing Person

Tribune Staff Report

The Marshall County Sheriff's Office and Bedford County Sheriff's Office are asking for your help in locating a missing person.

Stephen El-singer, 83, of Richmond Road in Petersburg was last seen by his wife, Glenda, at their residence around 2 p.m. on Monday, July 10.

He is described as 5-foot-8 tall and weighing 161 pounds, and was wearing blue jeans, a blue shirt with black suspenders, slip on shoes, and has gray hair.

When Mr. El-singer went missing on Monday, he was on his way to his "man cave" - which is beside the residence - for a nap.

According to his wife, it is a normal routine for them both to take a nap around 2 p.m. and wake up around 5 p.m., but when Mrs. El-singer went to check on him at approximately 5:20 p.m. he wasn't there.

Mr. El-singer does not have a phone and is traveling by foot.

He suffers from dementia and takes daily heart medication.

Various emergency services including K9 units and a Tennessee Highway Patrol helicopter searched and have been searching for Mr. El-singer since his disappearance, and a missing person's report was submitted to the Tennessee Bureau of Investigation.

If you know of him or his whereabouts or should you happen to see him, please call 911 or the Marshall County Sheriff's Office at 931-359-6122.

HANNAH JONES: July 2023 Artist Exhibit is now on display in the front west gallery at MCAG

Hannah is a self-taught artist that aspires to be a lifelong creator. She has had a passion for creating as long as she can remember. Born and raised locally, her only formal education in the arts was choosing to take every art class she could in high school. While her favorite mediums are acrylic paints and watercolors, she also loves dabbling in jewelry making, collage creating, hand lettering, and scrap-booking. While pursuing her undergraduate degree in psychology, Hannah served as a counselor and art teacher at Wesley House Community Center in Knoxville, Tennessee. Her love for authentic connection, traveling, yoga, and creativity are the main muses that inspire her artwork. She loves to incorporate mindful art practices into her daily life and hopes to someday become a licensed art therapist. All proceeds collected from purchases made from this exhibit will go towards furthering her education in the arts. @happyhippie-heart_ on Instagram Happy Hippie Heart on Facebook

How's that honeymoon working for you?

"Have you seen everything you want to see?"
"Yeah. You?"
"Me too. Let's go back home."

Danny Tyree
Tyrades

That's a paraphrased version of my parents' conversation midway through their Florida honeymoon in 1958. Unimpressed by the hype of an out-of-state adventure, they chose to hightail it back to the real world.

(The real world of 1958 and the real world of 2023 are strikingly different. Today's "reality" is that your new father-in-law offers to chest-feed any future babies.)

How many of the people who giddily tied the knot in June have already settled for the humdrum?

Folks who were all lovey-dovey during the courtship phase are suddenly saying things like "You could write wedding vows in the form of an Elizabethan sonnet, but you can't write 'milk' on the shopping list?"

The partner who was with them on Cloud 9 is suddenly, sadistically emitting thunderous noises.

People who were on their best behavior are now letting it all hang out. ("You did a good job of faking things. Well, I've been faking having a work ethic!")

A few ultra-realistic couples may have scrubbed "Just Married" off their car and replaced it with "Just Waiting for the Sweet Embrace of Death."

Like Johnny and June Carter Cash, many of these people got married in a fever. It's only once the hoopla dies down that they realize, "Your lousy health insurance policy treats fever as a preexisting condition!"

Most couples grudgingly admit that the honeymoon is over once they've returned to work and the million-and-one responsibilities of daily living rear their ugly heads. ("There's one rearing its ugly head now. No, wait – that's just your great-aunt Agatha.")

Communication is a big problem for many newlywed couples, although some do remarkably well reading smoke signals. ("Hey! You've got the credit cards smoking!")

Some people experience a smooth transition from romantic love to mature love, but others are blindsided because they were so busy Being in Love with Being in Love. They never got around to discussing whether to have children, which family to spend the holidays with, which relatives to co-sign a loan for, the division of chores, etcetera. ("Hey, I never noticed you have a conjoined twin with a swastika birthmark on their forehead...")

I encountered an online article listing ways to keep the romance alive in a marriage. One pearl of wisdom was "Spend at least 10 minutes a day facing one another with concentrated eye contact." There's quite a bit of incentive there, because the first one to blink has to fill out all the "thank you" cards for wedding gifts!

Even newlyweds who cohabitated for years before finally making it official know that the status quo will change, however subtly. They know that their delightful eccentricities and quirks will become fodder for Dear Abby. You can recognize these men and women at social events because they're the one who always introduces themselves with greetings such as "Hi! I'm Frank (not his real name)."

But you'll occasionally meet seniors who have been wed to their soulmate for 50 or 75 years and swear they're still in their honeymoon phase. I never know how seriously to take these sweethearts.

"We HAVE to stick together, because we've been holding Elvis, Bigfoot, Amelia Earhart and Jimmy Hoffa hostage in the basement. Did you say you're a Tyree? Ah, the Tyrees – the ones who got away..."

The forgotten saga of Tennessee's only French and Indian War fort

By Bill Carey

Editor's note: This column is the fifth in a series of topics slated to be deleted from the eighth-grade Tennessee social studies standards.

The sad story of Fort Loudoun goes back to a time before the state of Tennessee and the United States of America existed. It goes back to an era when present-day Tennessee was at the far reaches of the British empire.

During the French and Indian War, South Carolina's colonial government built a fort in present-day Monroe County called Fort Loudoun. The fort, in the heart of Cherokee territory, was meant to ensure that the Cherokee nation fought against the French rather than the British during the war.

Cherokee chiefs were receptive to the idea of Fort Loudoun because they thought it would give them access to European-made goods for which they could trade. When soldiers arrived in 1756 and began building the fort, they traded guns, powder, tools, iron cookware, clothes and other things with the Cherokee in exchange for deerskins that Cherokee hunters would bring.

Soldiers built the fort as a large, wooden, enclosed palisade with barracks, a blacksmith shop and various storehouses. For the first couple of years after it was completed, things were cordial between the colonial soldiers and the neighboring Cherokee. Trade between them occurred on almost a daily basis. Some of the soldiers' wives came to live at the fort, and a few even had children. These are believed to be the first English children born west of the Appalachian Mountains.

But in 1758 and 1759 relations broke down between the colonists and the Cherokee on many fronts, mostly because of incidents that took place far away from Fort Loudoun. There were several acts of violence between Cherokee and colonials in Virginia and South Carolina, often started by misunderstandings and driven by the desire to retaliate for other events.

When the general in charge of British forces in America ordered his men to stop trading arms and gunpowder with the Cherokee people, the Cherokee retaliated by refusing to trade with the soldiers. Soon the fort was surrounded by hostile Cherokee warriors.

The British government sent an army to relieve Fort Loudoun, but that army was attacked and never made it through the mountains. For much of 1760 the people inside the fort held out on the verge of starvation. Finally, in August, Captain Paul Demere of the British army surrendered the fort. The 230 men, women and children were told that they would be allowed safe passage east across the mountains if they laid down their arms and turned over the fort's 12 guns.

On August 9, the British garrison spent the night about 15 miles east, next to a small body of water called Cane Creek. The next morning Cherokee warriors attacked and killed about 30 people, including Captain Demere. The rest of the soldiers and other people who had lived at Fort Loudoun were taken prisoner. Some died during the next few months, some were later exchanged back to the colonists, and some chose to live out the rest of their lives with the Cherokee.

History books refer to this attack on the English soldiers as the Fort Loudoun Massacre or the Cane Creek Massacre. The Cherokee, however, believed this attack was justified revenge for the execution of Cherokee hostages at Fort Prince George, another colonial fort located in present-day western South Carolina.

The original Fort Loudoun was later burned to the ground. In the 1970s, when the Tennessee Valley Authority dammed up the Little Tennessee River, the site of Fort Loudoun was nearly immersed forever under the waters of Tellico Lake. Historians and archaeologists asked TVA not to flood the Fort Loudoun site, and so TVA agreed to a compromise. First, archaeologists were sent in to dig up and study the former site of the fort, to help us learn more about it. Then, TVA brought in huge amounts of dirt to elevate the former site of Fort Loudoun by 17 feet.

Since that time, a wonderful replica of the fort has been built. Today you can visit the rebuilt site. It is physically accurate in as many ways as possible. But when you get there you will have to imagine for yourself the sad story of what happened to the people who once lived there.

Sunset Park cemetery added digital mapping software to their operations to make it more accessible and user-friendly for current and future plot owners.

Sunset Park cemetery implements digital mapping

By WILL CARTER
Staff Writer mteditor@marshalltribune.com

LEWISBURG — If you were in the area of Yell Road in Lewisburg last week, you may have seen drones flying over Sunset Park cemetery, but there is no need to worry as the drones were surveying the grounds for the new digital mapping software that the cemetery will be utilizing moving forward.

Sunset Park is the first cemetery in Tennessee to implement the software designed by PlotBox, a global leader in deathcare management software solutions based in Northern Ireland with teams across the United States and Australia.

PlotBox works in partnership with cemeteries, crematories, and funeral homes to provide a deathcare management solution that best fits the needs of the cemetery.

“PlotBox is a single digital platform that centralizes all of a cemetery’s essential functions - including all of their operational and sales data, deceased records, teams and tasks - all of which is backed up securely and accessible from anywhere at any time,” Plotbox Senior Project and Process Improvement Manager Katie Stanley said.

With the new software, current and future plot owners will be able to locate and navigate their way to plots with ease using the Everafter website and app which operates similar to the Global Positioning System (GPS).

“Everafter allows us for a more streamlined experience when attending cemeteries in person - locating the graves of loved ones isn’t always easy - this allows them to either look up the location of their loved one before visiting, or when on site, be guided by staff using Everafter’s ‘walk to grave’ app via a tablet device,” Stanley said.

Stanley added that the software can be used as a genealogical research tool for anyone seeking to trace the history of the area or historical figures as well as for families to trace the branches of their family tree.

To do so, anyone can use the Everafter website (discovereverafter.com) search engine to locate plots with a surname, deceased date, or estimated age at time of death among many other filters.

“Those interested in tracing the area’s history can search for persons of interest who are buried within the cemeteries, and similarly, those wanting to trace their own family tree can do the same,” Stanley said.

The software upgrade will eventually eliminate the need for paper mapping and records at Sunset Park once the process is finished, and comes to the cemetery as an initiative by Anthem Partners – the company that quietly oversees operations at the cemetery – to provide a more accessible and user-friendly experience when navigating the grounds.

Anthem Partners oversees the operations of three other cemeteries across the state of Tennessee and will be utilizing PlotBox at those locations in the future as well.

Kevin Krizak, Vice President of Sales for Anthem

Partners, was at the forefront of having PlotBox implemented at the various locations, and is excited for families to be able to use the software.

“I’m excited for the software and PlotBox to be implemented at Sunset Park because it really does make everything easier for the cemetery operations, but for the families that have plots located there as well,” Krizak said.

PlotBox is set to be finished with their portion of the process in mid-August, but the project won’t be fully finished for another year or two as Anthem Partners will be reaching out over time to plot owners to go over and confirm records as accuracy of those is important.

Belfast church becomes set for christian music video

"Quiet on the set - lights - camera - action!" These words rang throughout the sanctuary and surrounding area of Belfast Baptist Church in Belfast, TN, on Saturday, July 8, 2023, as the small country church became the setting for the filming of a new music video by Christian music artist Melanie Walker of Lebanon, TN. Walker is a popular musical host and Bible teacher on the worldwide TCT Christian Television Network. Through the years, her songs have risen to the upper echelons of the various Christian music charts. The video will showcase her latest radio single, "In Jesus' Name We Pray, Amen! Amen!" The day-long video shoot was filmed inside the church's sanctuary and the church's fellowship house which is located behind the church. The church sits in the heart of the unincorporated town which is four miles South of Lewisburg, TN, on Highway 431 South. "We were blessed by the Lord to have Melanie choose our church as the setting for her new video," said Daniel Johnson, who is pastor of the church. "She is a great artist who has a real heart for the things of the Lord. She always seeks to be excellent in everything she does, because she is doing it - not for her glory - but, for the glory of the Lord."

Walker said that she chose the church - which was built to be a general store in the early 1900's to serve the once thriving town and community - because it reminded her of the church she grew up attending in Southern Illinois. "I attended Antioch Methodist Church with my grandmother as a child. The people there were loving and poured into my life. It's where I first met Jesus," Walker said. "Being at Belfast Baptist transported me back to that time in my life." In addition to Walker's performance, the video will feature her back-up band cast members - Wood Newton; Carl Ray; Lynn Fox; and Johnson. Fox - who is known in the Nashville music industry as the leader of the popular Christian Country band, The Fox Brothers, served as director of the video. Newton, Ray, and Johnson teamed up in August, 2022, in Newton's office in the famous RCA Building on Music Row in Nashville to write the up tempo, Bluegrass song which was released to radio stations throughout the world on July 7th. Newton, who is a legendary Nashville artist and songwriter, has written numerous No. 1 Country hits, including "Bobbie Sue" for the Oak Ridge Boys and Kenny Rogers' "Twenty Years Ago." Ray is a popular Christian Country artist who has had several No. 1 and Top 5 charted Christian Country songs. Johnson, who became pastor of the church in 2017, has worked in the Nashville music industry in various capacities since arriving in Music City in 1989 and has written six No. 1 Christian Country songs. "I am grateful to have had the opportunity to record such a great song," Walker said of "In Jesus' Name We Pray, Amen! Amen!." "It feels good and has such a meaningful message. It's one of those songs that gets in your head and then lives in your heart." The video - which was filmed by Carson VanBuskirk - who is a PR staff member of Southern Illinois University, will feature two families - the Barber Family and the Granato Family, both of Lebanon. Both families attend the same church that Walker attends in Lebanon - The Mending Fences Cowboy Church. The video will also feature a sanctuary filled with people who volunteered their Saturday afternoon to be a part of the video shoot. "Between Melanie's church and our church and others who came, I counted 59 people in the sanctuary," Johnson said. "It's the most we've had in the sanctuary since I became pastor here." He said that the church averages about 20 people each Sunday in attendance. "I was grateful that our church had this ministry opportunity," Johnson said. "I know it was just a video shoot - but, we sang and prayed and God's Word was proclaimed in a unique way. Most importantly, we all felt the presence of the Lord in our sanctuary; so, we had church!"

Former Lady 'Dawg headed to Chattanooga State

By Chris Siers
sports@t-g.com

Cornersville graduate Alicia Polk had a love for softball for most of her life.

It wasn't until she played in a summer league last year that she fell in love with basketball.

That summer love translated into Polk's best season of her career, and in turn, she helped lead the Lady 'Dawgs to their best season in 15 years.

That effort on the court helped Polk land on the college recruitment radar and in turn, she signed her letter of intent to continue her basketball career at Chattanooga State.

"It was very exciting. Playing your last high school game, it's scary because you don't know if it's going to be your last. Knowing you're going to college gives something to look forward to and work for," she said.

While Lady 'Dawg coach Hayden McMahon did plenty of work promoting the former Lady 'Dawg floor general, it was Chattanooga State who initially reached out to Polk and the rest was history.

"They reached out to me originally in just a phone call. Hayden McMahon did a great job of broadcasting my name and putting me out there for schools to see because originally I was softball, but going into my senior year, I was like, oh wait, I like basketball," she said.

After graduating, Polk has been all basketball every day, from early morning conditioning, to keeping up with a workout app designed to prepare her for her freshman season.

"My day is all basketball. I wake up at 5 and run a mile and a half. She has an online phone app with workouts we do. We stay busy. She pushes to know you get what you work for," she said.

During her high school years, and in particular, her senior season in which she was named the District 9-A MVP, Polk filled multiple roles for Cornersville, from handling the ball, to being a pull-up shooter, to attacking the rim off the block and she hopes that versatility transitions to the college level.

"Talking to the coach, she kind of told me she liked my jump shot and liked me inside. It really just depends whatever the team needs is what I'll be," Polk said.

While she's had a focus on softball for several years, Polk has plenty of years playing on the hardcourt, going back to Jr. Pro leagues.

"The basic Saturday leagues, I did that. I never played AAU, I did travel softball—that's what I did. I did a summer league last year in Franklin and that's when I really fell in love with basketball," she said.

That summer league work helped mold Polk into a standout leader for Cornersville, who in turn, had the best season in years, which included upsets of two perennial area powers.

"We had a chemistry. Our five or six main players had a connection and knew what role we needed to do. Hayden brought the fun back to the game," she said.

"My favorite memory, I'll have to say beating Huntland and Moore County, not to beat them for 15 years or whatever it was, that was pretty cool."

While her senior year was a springboard to get Polk on a college floor, she's hoping the work she puts in over the next two years can lead to even bigger basketball dreams beyond Chattanooga State.

"I want to continue and play farther on," she said.

Polk plans on pursuing a degree in engineering.

We need your submissions!

One thing I've always loved about the Bedford and Marshall County communities is just how much the folks here love their local sports.

For one, it's given us a steady source of material to report on, but it's also been a great pool for us to generate excellent news sections.

In being able to report locally, we often would bridge the gaps between sections with relevant state and local news stories.

While we will still do this from time to time, one thing we want to get back to is getting user submissions.

This is your newspaper and we want to include your happenings in print.

Have a championship travel ball team?

Catch a big bass over the weekend?

Tell us about it!

Knock down a big buck in deer season?

We want to see it!

During the school year, it's fairly easy to know what we've got coming up because we just follow the scholastic sports schedule to the next event.

That schedule runs for roughly nine to 10 months until the doldrums of summer set in.

Over the years, we've seen summer leagues become far and few between here locally with AAU teams and travel ball teams.

Here's where we need the community's help.

We're looking for feature story ideas, as well as user submissions, for us to report on.

Send us your ideas, photos and story leads to sports@t-g.com.

Braves, Ohtani and De La Cruz highlight MLB's 1st half

By Chris Siers
sports@t-g.com

As of Sunday afternoon, it's officially the half-way point of the 2023 MLB season. There's been plenty of highs and lows along the way. Here's a look at the highlights from the first half of the 2023 season:

MLB's Best - Atlanta

There's not been a team as consistently dominant as the Atlanta Braves through the first half of the season.

As of Sunday afternoon, the Braves are the first and only MLB team to reach 60 wins and they've looked every bit as a World Series favorite as any club in the game.

With a balanced roster, complete with threats 1-9 in the battery and a stellar rotation led by Spencer Strider, the Braves have decimated the opposition on the road to the All-Star Break.

Ronald Acuna has been consistently excellent at the plate, slugging his way to a .331 batting average and mashing 21 home runs to go along with 55 RBIs.

Matt Olsen has been the top run producer for Atlanta, driving in 72 runs on just 87 hits. He also has a club-leading 29 home runs.

Balancing out the potency of Atlanta is the three-headed monster in the pitching rotation.

Bryce Elder has a club best 2.97 ERA in 18 games started, with 106 innings pitched.

Strider and Charlie Morton have a 3.44 and 3.45 ERA, respectively, but it's been Strider who has dazzled on the bump.

AP Photo/David J. Phillip

Cincinnati rookie phenom Elly De La Cruz (44) has been arguably the most electric baseball player in all of the MLB since being called up in June and has firmly planted himself in the Rookie of the Year conversation.

He's struck out 166 batters, while Morton isn't far off the mark with 111.

While questions certainly exist concerning the quality of the NL East, Atlanta got a big indicator of how good the Braves are in 2023 with a series win over Atlanta leading up to the break.

Atlanta sits with an 8.5 lead over Miami and barring a massive onset of injuries or complete collapse, in no way looks willing to give up the division lead.

The path to the NL East runs through Atlanta.

MLB's worst - Oakland

There's no bigger mess in professional baseball than the Oakland Athletics. With fans actively boycotting the ownership and rumors of the club relocating to Las Vegas, there's not much going for the A's through the first half.

In fact, fans organized a "reverse boycott" in which a protest of ownership saw A's diehards packed the stadium against the Tampa Bay Rays on the same day the Nevada Senate passed a measure to proceed with the new baseball project.

But just how bad have the A's been?

They're a MLB worst 27.5 games behind AL West-leading Texas and are a -248 run differential.

Oakland has just a 25-67 record, and there's not a whole lot to suggest much will change through the next three months.

Esteury Ruiz has a team-best .257 batting average and Brent Rooker has a club-best 16 home

SADDLE CREEK HONORS BEECH

ABOVE: Saddle Creek Golf Club recently held a celebration honoring Bobby Beech's remarkable accomplishment of hitting his third hole-in-one on Hole 5.

RIGHT: On June 25, a celebration party was held in his honor, revisiting stories of Beech's involvement with the club, dating back to 1994.

His most recently hit hole-in-one came on September 23 of last year.

MLB

accumulated a 3.88 ERA with 93 strike outs and just 43 earned run.

Being 27.5 games off the division lead, the rest of this season might be a mail in for the front office and it might be time to not just consider cleaning house, from coaching staffs to the front office, but the ownership selling as well.

Biggest surprise - Cincinnati

Just a year ago, the sky was falling in Cincinnati with a paltry effort that landed the Reds a 100-loss season.

The front office had moved virtually all the talent to other teams and simply wouldn't invest in the club.

After clearing out many big names, aside from 19-year veteran Joey Votto, and losing 100 games, there wasn't much faith in this club being a competitive player in the NL Central, let alone making a run at the division lead.

But as of Sunday, the Reds have a one-game lead over the Milwaukee Brewers and have won an astounding 50 games.

Since mid-May, the front office has steadily called up young talent and the youth movement in Cincinnati has been highlighted by the electric Rookie of the Year candidate Elly de la Cruz.

Just two weeks after being called up, De la Cruz hit for the cycle and firmly established himself as arguably the most electric rookie in Reds' history.

At virtually every turn, he's making history, including being the first Red in over 100 years to steal every base in an inning.

He's got a club best .325 ERA and has been nothing short of electric on the base paths.

But it's not just been De La Cruz that's led the Reds to their first division lead by the All-Star Break in over a decade.

The steady leadership of 19-year veteran Joey Votto, who has been big for the Reds in key moments, coupled with the youthful influx of talent from Spencer Steer, Jake Fraley and Matt McLain has been excellent for the Reds.

Virtually every win has had a different player step to the plate at key moments.

At one point this season, Cincinnati won 12-straight games—a feat not even the great "Big Red Machine" club from the 1970s was able to accomplish.

One area of concern has been an inconsistent pitching staff, marred by lingering injuries to three different Reds starters.

Still, the Reds have been the comeback kids and have 32 comeback wins this season.

This club will be one to watch and if they can get healthy on the mound and stabilize what's been a lackluster ERA from the pitching staff, Cincinnati could be a National League contender in October.

Biggest bust - Mets

For the past few years, Mets owner Steve Cohen hasn't been shy about his willingness to spend money in the hopes of fielding a competitive roster to male a run at the NL East division and dethrone the Braves.

What he's got in 2023 is the highest payroll in baseball and a club struggling to even find its way to the .500 mark, let alone the division lead.

The Mets have plenty of star power, but for whatever reason, the wins just haven't come.

From names like Francisco Lindor, Pete Alonso and Starling Marte, the Mets should be contenders off the potential alone.

But the big three in the Mets' battery are batting a collective .235 and haven't really been much of a threat at any point this season.

Like the batting order, Cohen has poured a ton of money into the pitching staff and with names like Max Scherzer, Justin Verlander and Carlos Carrasco, the pitching just hasn't delivered this season.

Scherzer has just a 7-8 overall record and a 4.31 ERA with 87.2 innings pitched; Verlander, though battling injury at points, has a 3.60 ERA in 70 innings, while Carrasco is limping by with a 5.16 ERA.

By Sunday, the Mets are 18.5 games out of first place and are six games under .500.

While not mathematically eliminated, it's a long road for the Mets to find their way to the playoffs in a division with the Braves, Phillies and Marlins.

CY Young candidates

With still an entire half of the season to play, there are a handful of pitchers who have firmly put themselves in the Cy Young conversation for the NL and AL.

For the NL, Zac Gallen has been consistent across the board in virtually every stat kept for the Diamondbacks.

He's got an 11-3 record and sits with a 3.04 ERA in 118.1 innings pitched.

He also has 125 strikeouts.

Spencer Strider has also been right in the mix at the top of the NL leaderboards with nearly identical numbers.

Strider has an 11-2 record with 104.2 innings pitched, but has struck out a staggering 166 batters to go along with a 3.44 ERA.

These two will continue to battle for the mantle of the NL's top pitching honor.

On the American League side, Shane Bieber has led Tampa Bay, who leads the AL East, with an 11-1 record and a 2.53 ERA in 96 innings pitched.

Nathan Eovaldi has been a key component for the Texas Rangers' resurgence and has a 2.83 ERA with a 10-3 record.

No matter how the second half shakes out, all four of these pitchers will have a say in the Cy Young voting.

MVP candidates

By the 2023 All-Star Break, it really seems clear-cut who the AL and NL MVP front runners are.

Since his MLB debut in 2018, there's not really been a comparable player to Shohei Ohtani—the man can literally do it all.

As virtually the MLB's only two-way player, Ohtani has been at the top of the AL stats, both at the plate and on the mound.

On the mound, Ohtani is 7-4 with a 3.32 ERA and has 132 punch outs. While those are respectable in their own right, he's been just as effective at the plate.

he's batting a respectable .302 and has 32 home runs with 71 RBIs to his credit.

If there's a challenger to Ohtani's 2023 MVP, he's not made himself known, yet.

On the NL side, it's been the hottest player on the hottest team that's firmly the front runner for MVP.

With the Braves being the MLB's first team to 60 wins, it's been the consistency from Acuna, who is batting .331 with 21 home runs and 55 RBIs that has led an excellent Braves roster.

Acuna has consistently been a hot commodity for the Braves' roster, but his 2023 campaign is by far his best of his career so far.

He's already got 79 runs scored and 41 stolen bases, four-better than his 37 swiped bags in all of the 2019 season.

As long as these two frontrunners avoid injury, the MVP awards are theirs for the taking.

Rookie of the Year

Corbin Carroll has been the hottest name in the Rookie of the Year conversation—that is until Elly De La Cruz was called up by Cincinnati.

Carroll has been stellar for the first-place Diamondbacks with 18 home runs, 48 RBIs and a .289 batting average.

But like Carroll, De La Cruz has planted himself in the Rookie of the Year conversation and his club is in first place of its division—it's really no coincidence.

While Carroll does have a bigger sample size, having played in 86 games, De La Cruz has been arguably more dynamic.

De La Cruz has appeared in just 30 games, but in his second week in the MLB, he hit for the cycle in just six innings against Atlanta, has a .325 batting average with nine doubles, two triples, four home runs and 16 RBIs.

He's also stolen 16 bases as well, including becoming the first Cincinnati player in over 100 years to steal all four bases in one inning.

It's no secret De La Cruz has been a key piece of the Cincinnati turnaround, who sits with a one-game lead for control of the NL Central over the Brewers.

The thing about picking Rookies of the Year is trying to gauge the effectiveness over a bigger sample size.

While Carroll certainly has a more experience, it's clear De La Cruz was the top prospect in all of baseball for a reason and should help not only give the Rookie of the Year race an exciting finish, but also impact the NL Central and shakeout of the NL playoffs come October.
