Dear Santa,
 Thank you for the letter I am glad to be on the nice list. I would like a watch, butter slim, fuzzy socks and shoes, Christmas earrings, cook books for kids, and boots size 1. I can't wait to see you.
Love Maddie Bennett

Dear Santa,
 Thank you for the letter I am glad to be on the nice list. I will keep working hard and I will keep being nice to my sister and brother too. Some of the things that I want, butter slime, cake books, fuzzy socks, Christmas earrings, boots size 4. I can't wait to see you!
Love Allie Bennett

Dear Santa,
 Thank you for the letter I am glad to be on the nice list. I will keep working hard. Some of the things I want are: a door basketball hoop, clothes, shoes, pjs, spiderman coloring book, and transformers. I can't wait for you to visit.
Love Bryson Bennett

Dear Santa,
 I would like for Christmas a blanket, a bug science kit, bad guy Grinch books, fact trackers, amazing animals, Earth Science kit, dribble up soccer, soccer goal, Hover board, Magic tree house, an I spy book with me, Freya, and Addie or Beau, Bella, and Gabbana. And can you get the dogs balls and bones. And get the cat catnip, little toys and maybe get her a little blanket for her.
Love Avery Mongler
 P.S. Daddy wants pickle flavored socks. P.S.S. Haley would like scrunchies and legos

Dear Santa,
 Reagan Xmas 1-leggo set, 2-barbie house, 3-barbies, 4-barbie clothes, 5-mini brands, 6-butter slime and a dog.

Dear Santa,
 How are you? We have been very good this year. I would love if you could bring a hair straightener, a stanly cup, a mini mirror, and some freezed dried skittles. My mom and dad don't want a dog but me and my siblings want a dog. If it could be a smaller dog that would be the best. Mom is allergic to animals fur. Even if we don't get a dog, I thought I would ask. Thank you so much! Merry Christmas!

Santa Claus Cleared to Spread Christmas Cheer

Director of Agriculture Chris Chinn and Missouri State Veterinarian Dr. Steve Strubberg have approved livestock movement papers for nine special reindeer. Mr. Santa Claus from The North Pole applied for the permit this week, providing proof of the healthy herd through a Certificate of Veterinary Inspection signed by licensed veterinarian Dr. Hermey Elf.

Team leader, Rudolph, underwent additional testing to prove he's the most famous reindeer of all.

"We love to see Santa recognize so many on his nice list throughout Missouri this year," said Director of Agriculture Chris Chinn. "Santa's elves have been working hard to provide toys for all children. We're excited that our team gets to ensure all of Santa's reindeer are ready for flight and gifts get delivered across the Show-Me State this Christmas."

The permit approves Mr. Claus, his sleigh and nine reindeer for flight starting the night before Christmas, with a few exceptions for early deliveries.

"Our veterinary staff works to allow timely movement of healthy animals across Missouri and the U.S.," said Dr. Steve Strubberg. "Our team also recommends the reindeer consume healthy rations of Missouri grass hay. We encourage Missourians to make hay available for Santa's reindeer, in addition to milk and cookies for Santa."

Reindeer approved for flight:

- Dasher
- Dancer
- Prancer
- Vixen
- Comet
- Cupid
- Donner
- Blitzen
- Rudolph

Renewable energy, property owners battle over turf

County hosts a discussion about property rights

By DENNIS SHARKEY
Editor

County officials from Audrain and Callaway Counties held a public meeting at the courthouse in Mexico earlier this month to let some local farmers and property owners vent their frustrations over the Tiger Connector and other solar and wind projects trying to come into the county.

The meeting took place on Monday, Dec. 10, with all three commissioners from Audrain County in attendance. Callaway County Presiding Commissioner Gary Jungermann and Associate Commissioner Roger Fischer were also in attendance.

Some property owners affected by the Tiger Connector spoke and asked why the project was even needed and why Missourians have to give up land for a project to benefit others. The Tiger Connector Project has taken some property in Audrain County and surrounding counties to construct a 300-watt power transmission line. Wendy Beard is one of the property owners affected by the transmission line.

"What are we going to do when they cut back our electricity to heat the big cities?" Beard asked commissioners. "Are we going to be in the dark and cold while people in the city are warm? Why are we willing to give up our reliable cheap energy to sustain other states?"

"We're on record as being opposed to Tiger Connector and GBE (a wind project in northeast Missouri)," Winders responded. "We did what we could to oppose it and that's where we're at."

Local officials have realized they can't stop some of these projects from happening but can limit and push back to some degree through the legislative process. Both Meyer and Jungermann are on legislative committees that are currently talking through these issues.

"State law change is what we're lobbying for," Meyer said. "We are advocating through the legislative process to make those changes. As a commission, a lot of these projects are beyond our control."

Some of the things they're pushing for include limiting the percentage of farmland that can be used for green projects, setting up taxing structures, and ensuring most if not all materials used are American-made. Jungermann said the American-made issue is big beyond obvious reasons. It's also a matter of principle.

"The American made things we're pushing for that," Jungermann said. "We're pushing all of Audrain County Presiding Commissioner Alan Winders, standing, led a discussion about the Tiger Connector Project at the Audrain County Courthouse on Monday, Dec. 10.

it. The American-made thing just makes sense because as commissioners we have to follow some of those rules just to build a bridge."

One property owner asked the commissioners if a moratorium of some sort could be put in place. Winders said that's a legal question.

"I don't believe we can just say, 'Ah we're just going to stop them.' We have to stop them for some reason for some specific time."

Meyer said the best way to battle a wind or solar farm from coming to a community is to band together and talk with neighbors. Meyer said she knows from recent experience.

"I think right now your best weapon as a citizen is to talk to your neighbors," Meyer said. "We've got one trying to go on the east side and our whole neighborhood had a network of talking. I really think it's just talking with each other."

Winders said the other important factor is letting your elected leaders know when someone comes to your neighborhood. At that point, the county can get involved to make sure property owners and taxpayers are both protected. However, he also questioned how much power those agreements have.

"We need to be at that

The Angels' Song

<sup>8</sup> And there were in the same country shepherds abiding in the field, keeping watch over their flock by night. <sup>9</sup> And, lo, the angel of the Lord came upon them, and the glory of the Lord shone round about them: and they were sore afraid. <sup>10</sup> And the angel said unto them, Fear not: for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people.

<sup>11</sup> For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord. <sup>12</sup> And this shall be a sign unto you; Ye shall find the babe wrapped in swaddling clothes, lying in a manger. <sup>13</sup> And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God, and saying, <sup>14</sup> Glory to God in the highest, And on earth peace, good will toward men.

table,” Winders said. “Once the leases are done, we’re not involved. We don’t have any footing. At this point we haven’t talked to anybody unwilling to provide those, but how good are they?”

Audrain County Western District Commissioner Tracy Graham said the problem starts with lawmakers.

“Some place to start would be making sure your elected representative understands that we don’t need all this subsidy stuff to be going into the private sector,” Graham said. “I’m going to guess just about all of these projects are private companies doing it.”

Winders said there is no Tiger Connector, wind farms, or solar projects without federal tax dollars.

“It really irks me that this winds up at our feet,” Winders said. “What can you guys do to stop it?” Not only did we not start it but the federal government is slightly bigger than Audrain County.”

Consolidated Electric Cooperative CEO Lynn Thompson was at the meeting and confirmed his organization is required to let the Tiger Connector hook to their system to transmit power. Thompson said the cooperative wasn’t in favor of the project and is simply complying with the law.

“We’re not really happy about that but we have to let them do it,” Thompson told property owners. “The only way we can tell them no is if they jeopardize our reliability.”

A representative from Cordelio Renewable Energy, Mark Williams, was also at the meeting and invited anyone to tour the project with him and said his company has no plans to sell their wind farm to Ameren or any other publically regulated utility. Thompson also said his company has no plans to purchase energy.

Schuyler County ladies warn of dangers of windmills

Two property owners from Schuyler County in Northeast Missouri are warning property owners in Audrain County about the pitfalls of having a wind farm next to one’s property.

Nakila Blessing and Carrie March both made the drive down from Lancaster in Schuyler County to Mexico on Dec. 13, to join a joint meeting between Audrain and Callaway County Commissioners to discuss property rights. Both ladies live next to wind farms and said the turbines have drastically reduced the quality of life for their families.

Both live in the footprint of the High Prairie Wind Project which is 400 megawatts and consist of 175 wind turbines.

“This is not doable,”

Blessing told the small crowd while playing an audio clip that demonstrated the noise level from the turbines. Blessing said the recordings were taken from her front porch. “There is no quality of life left. There is no point in sitting outside. There is nothing left for us.”

Blessing said at first she was skeptical about the rumors surrounding windmills, particularly the rumors about health issues. After several months of dealing with a turbine about 2,000 feet from her house, she’s now a believer. She said her children and husband are often sick.

“We are all now sleeping in the basement,” Blessing said.

Blessing said they are now trying to sell their home but she doesn’t expect they’ll have a line of people waiting to buy.

“I don’t know if we can sell our home, it’s not something you can hide,” Blessing said. “You can physically feel the pulses.”

“It’s like there’s a pulse in the air, it’s like the air is heavy,” March added.

Some officials think planning and zoning are the future

By DENNIS SHARKEY

County officials from Audrain and Callaway County Many property owners in Northeast Missouri are concerned about private power companies encroaching in their space and the answer may not be something they want to hear.

Audrain County commissioners held a somewhat impromptu meeting with Callaway County commissioners at the Audrain County Courthouse on Dec. 10, mainly to hear grievances from property owners concerning the Tiger Connector project along with some other concerns about wind and solar projects.

Some officials believe planning and zoning may be the answer for rural counties, which is a non-starter for most. Callaway County Presiding Commissioner Gary Jungermann said it’s a question people are going to have to revisit.

“The question we’re all going to have to ask ourselves at some point is ‘Are we ready for planning and zoning?’ Because that’s where all of this potentially comes into play,” Jungermann said. “You can have certain restrictions then. Right now if you don’t have it the landowners can do as they wish with their property whether it’s windmills or junkyards.”

Audrain County Eastern District Commissioner Leslie Meyer told the Ledger after the meeting the county put the question up to a countywide vote 20 years ago and it failed in a landslide. Audrain County Presiding Commissioner Alan Winders said during the meeting while addressing a question that he’s skeptical planning and zoning will be something people have an appetite for.

“We are a property rights county in a property rights state,” Winders added. “Because we do not have planning and zoning if it’s legal for you to do on your property then that’s the answer. It’s legal or it’s not legal. We are an agra-ready county, so we’re not going to make rules that make it more difficult for agriculture than the state. That’s where we are with all of this. If you own your property and want to cover it with solar panels, so be it. There are a lot of implications that we see that are not positive, but that does not give me the right. If we collectively say we want planning and zoning then the animal is altogether different.”

Jungermann said he understands not wanting planning and zoning but also thinks it’s inevitable.

“I firmly feel that some of what’s going on right now it’s going to push the envelope and we’re all going to have planning and zoning at some point,” Jungermann said. “It doesn’t do away with it all but it will help county commissions into the future control to some degree how much there is.”
