SOUTH LEE COUNTY: Historical artifact could be part of Estes Park in Keokuk

Group wants dam turbine in park

BY CHUCK VANDENBERG
PCC EDITOR

LEE COUNTY – Representatives from the Keokuk-Hamilton Dam museum are asking the county to allow them to put an original dam powerhouse turbine on display in Estes Park in Keokuk.

At Monday's regular meeting of the Lee County Board of Supervisors, the group said they were looking for support from the board to move forward with the project.

It was the first time all supervisors were present in the board room in more than a year due to the pandemic.

The turbine, being acquired from Ameren, is about 14 wide by 9 feet high and would sit on a concrete foundation.

Dam board member Brian Carroll said the turbine is the first original turbine from the Keokuk-Hamilton Dam and is more than 108 years old.

Supervisor Chairman Matt Pflug asked if the committee had approached the county's maintenance department. He said he heard there may be some sink-holes in the area Carroll said the committee had already planned to do some soil borings to make sure a spread foundation to hold the turbine would work.

"It won't just be setting on the ground. There will be concrete there," Carroll said.

"If the soil isn't good enough to put the spread footing on, we'd drill some piers and then the foundation would sit on those piers."

Carroll said there would be no cost to the county. Ameren would provide relocation of the turbine to the park and the dam museum would absorb the other costs, which would include some decorative fencing around the turbine to prevent people from climbing on the artifact.

The park is located at 5th and Main.

Supervisor Garry Seyb Jr. asked if there were any concerns with traffic visibility with the new turbine.

"I guess I'd like to go down to the site

More at stake than new Iowa Welcome signs

Tucked away among hundreds of bills being considered this year by the Iowa Legislature is one people might have quickly embraced in a different era.

But times have changed. It has been 38 years since Robert Ray left the governor's office. State government today is far messier than it was back then.

Compounding the reaction to Senate File 404 has been the social and political upheaval in Iowa in recent years — enough to bring out pundits with their potshots.

The seemingly innocuous piece of legislation appropriates $350,000 for the Iowa Department of Transportation to replace the 68 "Welcome" signs along Iowa's borders. The bill also contains a requirement that the new signs incorporate what it calls a "different and distinct" design and message for travelers.

The current signs say, "The People of Iowa Welcome You," with the secondary message, "Iowa, Field of Opportunities."

The bill's sponsor, Sen. Carrie Koelker of Dyersville, told the Cedar Rapids Gazette, "This is something that I think is important, that we make sure as a state that we upgrade our image."

The "Field of Opportunities" slogan was adopted in 1999 when Tom Vilsack was governor. Iowa's current marketing slogan — "This is Iowa" — seems more like something intended for lost motorists.

The bill opened the spigot to a stream of creative juices at Raygun, the Des Moines company that sells smarty-pants T-shirts with a Midwest political and cultural flavor. Owner Mike Draper's Facebook post produced a flood of suggestions for slogans for those new "Welcome" signs.

Among them:

"Iowa. To the right of Nebraska. Far

ONE YEAR WITH CORONAVIRUS

Iowa reaches one year since first COVID case reported

DES MOINES - March 8, marks the one-year anniversary of the state's first case of COVID-19. This week the Iowa Department of Public Health (IDPH) and Department of Human Services (DHS) will mark the event by expressing appreciation to the teams at both agencies as well as our community partners and other state agencies who have worked in a sustained emergency response for more than a year.

"This has been a year of grief. We've lost so much in our everyday life, including so many little things we used to take for granted. And for many Iowans, that loss may also include a loved one. This is a moment to pause and reflect on what we've endured together, and to focus on our resiliency. I am continually grateful to our teams at IDPH and DHS, as well as our partners throughout the state," said Director Kelly Garcia.

This week, Iowans are encouraged to take a picture and share on social media what this year has meant to them using the hashtag and sign (click on the hashtag for a printable sign): #IowaStrong. The teams at IDPH and DHS are encouraged to share their stories with the following hashtags and holding the following signs (click the hashtags for links to printable versions of the signs): #IAMIDPH and #IAMDHS.

Over 800,000 Iowans have received their first dose of the COVID-19 vaccine at this time. We anticipate vaccine production increasing, by the end of May, there should be enough vaccine available for anyone who wants one. Still, it remains important for Iowans to continue practicing the mitigation measures that can slow the spread of the COVID-19 virus.

Pilot Grove awarded county's bond business

and see what that looks like," Seyb said. "I'm curious to the height and wonder what that will do to traffic. It will be close to the intersection and I'm just trying to visualize that."

Pflug said he would like to see a conceptual drawing of the addition to the park. Carroll said that was next on the committee's list of things to do on the project.

Carroll said the turbine will actually sit on its side so visitors can get a profile view of the turbine, so it won't be 14 feet high, but nine feet high when on display.

Committee member Kirk Brandenberger said the committee was looking for a nod of approval from supervisors.

Pflug said he didn't have a problem with project conceptually.

"I don't have a problem with it, but I can't speak for the full board. I think they want to see, and again we talked about a drawing, but if we can get something like that. I just don't know we can give you an exact answer," he said.

Brandenberger said originally plans were to put the turbine on the riverfront, but he said the group changed it to the park to make it more visible.

In other action, supervisors:

- approved a motion to sell general obligation bonds to Pilot Grove Savings Bank to consolidate previous debt with current, maintenance projects and communication upgrades for a total of $6.2 million at 1.15% interest.

- approved the hiring of an assistant for the County Engineer and an Engineer Technician Supervisor.

- approved an overlay project on W55 from Hwy. 16 to Henry County Line.

Legislative proposals could paint a bad picture

"Iowa. It's a work in progress. Just not too much progress."

"Iowa. It used to be a place to grow."

"Iowa. It's not too late to turn around."

And my snarky favorite: "Iowa. Be thankful we don't wear our pants the way a lot of us wear our masks."

Joking aside, the suggestions from Raygun's fans reflect a serious aspect of the Senate bill and the actions lawmakers have taken in recent years.

Yes, legislative leaders are concerned about the image the highway signs present to motorists. But those same leaders fail to recognize there is a connection between Iowa's national reputation and some of the corrosive legislative proposals under consideration.

Those proposals send a troubling signal about the kind of a state Iowa is becoming.

Whether we like that signal or not, a clear message is being received by many young people looking for a place to settle. The signal is being received by top quality teachers, by business executives looking for places for new plants and offices, and by doctors, surgeons and nurses whose skills are always in demand across the United States.

What some in the Legislature see as simply enacting laws many of their constituents want, or what they see as bills that stick it to "libs," many of the professionals that communities are eager to recruit or retain view these legislative proposals, at best, as narrow minded, intolerant and divisive.

Those proposals are wide ranging — from requiring the state universities to report the political affiliation of each faculty member, to requiring which bathrooms in public schools transgender people can use, to ending tenure for state university professors.

There are more.

Other proposals would reduce unemployment benefits for Iowans, cut the amount of time for voting, restrict what teachers can teach about slavery and the role of blacks in our nation. The proposals would make it more difficult for third parties to get their candidates on ballots and allow businesses to deny services based on customers' sexual orientation or gender identity.

Legislative leaders refuse to consider proposals to prohibit the use of racial profiling by police officers. Leaders also refuse to consider ways to ease the runoff of manure and fertilizer into Iowa rivers and lakes or to further limit where large livestock feeding facilities can be built.

Rural Iowa has long suffered from what is called a "brain drain" — the loss of some of the best and brightest young people to larger cities where jobs are more plentiful.

These proposals gaining traction in the Legislature have many people worried that more Iowans will seek their futures in other states.

That's not a trend state officials will want to brag about on "Welcome to Iowa" signs.
