James Salisbury celebrates his win over Richar Abel for stuffing jumbo marshmallows into their mouths as a tiebreaker of sorts for the Crazytown elementary class president. The show "Crazytown" opens Friday.

CURTAIN UP FRIDAY: Hilarity on tap for next two weekends at Old Fort Players

BY CHUCK VANDENBERG
PCC EDITOR

FORT MADISON – You'll get just a bit of everything with the Old Fort Players spring production of Crazytown.

A cast of six jumps around from newscasters at the town's K-OMG broadcast center to elementary students to women watching sports and that's just the start.

Most of the cast have some deep roots with Fort Madison's theater company including veteran Ty Clute who serves a co-director and picks up some cast spots in the variety comedy.

Richar Abel again patrols the stage in a variety of roles including an overzealous detective who has some crazy ideas about a suspect charged with being Mr. Nice Guy.

She also shows some comedy chops as an elementary student running for school president, and a peddler of a new fangled "Play Purifier", a new product available for those who would rather seen cleaned up versions of such famous plays as Glengarry Glen Ross, and Frankie and Johnny.

The craziness of Crazytown is throughout the play filtered through the zany anchors at the KOMG radio station who

Fort Madison slogan, flag contest extended to September

BY CHUCK VANDENBERG
PCC EDITOR

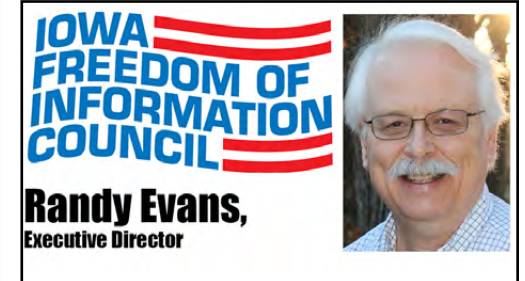

FORT MADISON – An effort to replace the city's flag and create a new slogan has been extended by city officials.

City Councilman Donna Amandus, who originally proposed the contest, said she wants to extend the contest to Sept. 16 to allow for additional submissions. Amandus proposed the contest to help reflect on the city's new focus on growth.

Amandus unveiled the contest two months ago at a regular Council meeting. To spur interest, Amandus said the winning flag will receive a $500 cash prize. She also

Iowa Legal Aid suit needs some sunlight

The legendary U.S. Supreme Court justice Louis Brandeis once observed, "Sunlight is said to be the best of disinfectants."

Brandeis was not talking about everyday cleaning around the home. He was concerned about the importance of transparency in rooting out or preventing corruption or abuses in the workings of a program, an organization or an entity of government.

He was especially bothered by what he called "the wickedness of people shielding wrongdoers and passing them off (or at least allowing them to pass themselves off) as honest men."

Were he alive today, the learned justice from a century ago might prescribe a healthy dose of sunshine for a legal dispute that my friend, the investigative journalist Clark Kauffman, brought to light last week at the Iowa Capital Dispatch news website.

The Iowa Judicial Branch entered into a contract in 2010 with a national law firm from Austin, Texas, called Linebarger Googan Blair & Sampson LLP. The firm was hired to collect unpaid fines and fees for the state court system.

The contract provided that the state would get 75 percent of the money collected, and the law firm would receive 25 percent of the amounts it collected.

In 2020, Iowa Legal Aid, a nonprofit law firm that represents low-income Iowans in certain types of legal disputes, sued the Linebarger firm. The lawsuit shined the spotlight on Linebarger's debt-collection tactics, including allegations the firm used threats of contempt-

State fee collection suit has too many secrets

of-court actions and possible revocation of people's driver licenses if they did not pay their court fines and court fees.

The lawsuit also alleged that when Linebarger mailed collection notices to Iowans, it inflated their debt — what the firm called their court-ordered obligation — by 25 percent. That had the effect of boosting the law firm's Iowa revenue, because its share of each collection was calculated from a larger base amount.

Before Linebarger's contract ended in January 2021, the law firm collected $58.6 million for Iowa government in court fines and fees. The firm's compensation for its work was $12 million, Kauffman reported.

A dose of Justice Brandeis' sunshine is needed in this matter because Linebarger and Iowa Legal Aid agreed to settle the lawsuit last September with one important, but very troubling catch: They agreed to keep the terms of their settlement agreement secret.

Confidentiality was imposed by the agreement, even though it was ordinary Iowans and Iowa businesses that were subjected to Linebarger collection tactics that Iowa Legal Aid said were illegal, and even though Linebarger had access to these Iowans because of its contract with an arm of state government, the Iowa Judicial Branch.

The Iowa court system was not a party in the lawsuit. Otherwise, an Iowa law that prohibits secret settlements by state or local governments would have thrown open Justice Brandeis' window and let the public see what the parties were agreeing to.

Linebarger and Iowa Legal Aid are still squabbling in federal court over the legal fees Iowa Legal Aid wants reimbursed for the lawsuit. That issue could end up in the lap of the federal judge if the two parties do not work that out themselves.

Linebarger claims the lawsuit has no merit. The firm asserts that its work on behalf of the Iowa Judicial Branch was not covered by the state and federal debt-collection laws because the firm believes court fines and fees are not legally considered to be debt.

Alexander Vincent Kornya, litigation director for Iowa Legal Aid, told Kauffman the lawsuit is about accountability and whether private law firms that collect debts for government are beyond the reach of the debt-collection laws.

"We believed they were accountable when we filed the case, that they violated the law, and we still believe that," he told Kauffman.

Kornya said the issues in the lawsuit are broader than just unpaid fines and focus on indigent-defense fees, too.

Poor people who cannot afford private attorneys when charged with a crime must rely on court-appointed lawyers or public defenders to represent them. In Iowa, Kornya said, a person is billed for their indigent defense even if they are found not guilty.

Poor people face significant consequences if they do not pay these fees for court-appointed attorneys. They can be denied expungement of their case from their criminal record, or they may have their tax refunds taken and applied against the debt.

Kornya said Iowa Legal Aid serves thousands of Iowans each year, without charge, on civil legal issues. The lawsuit was aimed at reducing "the number of people in crisis walking through our doors who can't cover life's necessities because they are presented with unwarranted and legally baseless threats of jail, license revocations and other penalties."

And that is why there needs to be full sunshine falling on this settlement agreement.

Councilwoman wants new slogan, flag to show city's progress

said the city needs a new slogan.

A committee was formed that includes City Councilman Kevin Rink, LCEDG Administrative Assistant Carmen Salazar, Pen City Current, and the Daily Democrat.

The new flags would need to have a design that works both horizontally and vertically so they can be flown or hung on the new poles that are lining the new Hwy. 61 work through Fort Madison.

The city's current slogan is Always Moving, but Amandus said people are taking liberties with it on social media and adding words to the hashtag that are detrimental to the city's forward motion.

She said the new slogan should also reflect the city's new efforts at growth. "This new design should capture what makes our city unique as a community and will serve as an illustration, or trademark if you will, of what our city represents," Amandus said.

She said people who live or go to school within the city of Fort Madison will be able to submit their individual designs. A contest form will go up on the city website at <https://www.fortmadison-ia.com/> in the next few days and will be shared with the school systems.

The new deadline for submissions will be Friday, Sept. 16 at 5 p.m. and they can be entered online, mailed, or dropped off at City Hall at 811 Avenue E.

The entries will be logged anonymously and then all the admissions will be judged by the five-person committee and be cut down to the top five submissions. Those five submissions will then be listed in a poll at www.pencitycurrent.com and www.dailydem.com for a public vote. The top three vote getters will then be forwarded to the City Council to select the winner on May 17.

USDA accepting more than 2 million acres in CRP offers

DES MOINES, Iowa, May 3, 2022 – Agriculture Secretary Tom Vilsack announced the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) is accepting more than 2 million acres in offers from agricultural producers and landowners through the Conservation Reserve Program (CRP) General signup, which included more than 12,600 acres in Iowa. This is the first of the program’s multiple signups occurring in 2022. With about 3.4 million acres expiring this year, Vilsack encourages producers and landowners to consider the Grassland and Continuous signups, both of which are currently open.

“Our conservation programs are voluntary, and at the end of the day, producers are making market-based decisions as the program was designed to allow and encourages,” Matt Russell, FSA State Executive Director in Iowa. “We recognize the Conservation Reserve Program is an important tool in helping mitigate climate change and conserve natural resources, and this announcement is just the first opportunity for producers to take advantage of the program. Producers are still looking at options under the working-lands Grassland Conservation Reserve Program, the more targeted buffer-type practices under Continuous CRP, and partnership opportunities through the Conservation Reserve Enhancement Program (CREP). For farmers who have decided to return all or a portion of their land into production agriculture, USDA will also be reaching out to ensure they understand and can take advantage of options to either prepare the land for production or transition it to beginning farmers.”

Producers submitted re-enrollment offers for just over half of expiring acres, similar to the rate in 2021. Offers for new land under General CRP were considerably lower compared to last year’s numbers, with fewer than 400,000 acres being offered this year versus over 700,000 acres offered last year.

It is important to note that submitting and accepting a CRP offer is the start of the process, and producers still need to develop a conservation plan before enrolling their land on October 1, 2022. Each year, during the window between offer acceptance and land enrollment, some producers change their mind and ultimately decide not to enroll some accepted acres without penalty.

The three other types of CRP—Grasslands, Continuous, and CREP—are still available for either working-lands or targeted, often smaller sub-field, offers. Producers have submitted offers on nearly 260,000 acres through the Continuous and CREP signup so far this year. The Grassland signup – which last year had its highest participation ever – closes May 13, 2022.

General CRP Signup

The General CRP Signup 58 ran from Jan. 31 to March 11, 2022.

Through CRP, producers and landowners establish long-term, resource-conserving plant species, such as approved grasses or trees, to control soil erosion, improve soil health and water quality, and enhance wildlife habitat on agricultural land. In addition to the other well-documented benefits, lands enrolled in CRP are playing a key role in climate change mitigation efforts across the country.

In 2021, FSA introduced improvements to the program, which included a new Climate-Smart Practice Incentive to increase carbon sequestration and reduce greenhouse gas emissions. This incentive provides a 3%, 5% or 10% incentive payment based on the predominant vegetation type for the practices enrolled – from grasses to trees to wetland restoration.

More Information

While the General Signup is closed, producers and landowners can still apply for the Continuous and Grassland signups by contacting their local USDA Service Center.

Signed into law in 1985, CRP is one of the largest voluntary private-lands conservation programs in the United States. It was originally intended to primarily control soil erosion and potentially stabilize commodity prices by taking marginal lands out of production. The program has evolved over the years, providing many conservation and economic benefits. Learn more at fsa.usda.gov/crp.

Nauvoo closes in on new community building

NEW OFFICES: FM's Schickedanz to build city's new community center

NAUVOO - The idea of consolidating various City offices into one location has been under consideration for a long time. It began in 2009 and was originally planned to build a new public library. After looking at possible locations, it was concluded that the block containing the old school building was the best option and the City purchased the property in 2017.

In 2019 the Nauvoo City Council formed the Nauvoo Community Center Capital Campaign Committee (NC5) and that Spring, the NC5 began an ambitious four-million-dollar fund-raising effort. The building would be funded with private donations and would house a conference center, a modern library/learning center, a visitors' welcome center, a food pantry, a police station, and municipal offices. It was to serve as a hub for community events and gatherings and a catalyst for promoting small group tourism and support for local businesses and startups. Construction would be at the site of the school, which meant that the school would be demolished.

That summer, members of the NC5 explained the proposal to build the new community center to the residents of Nauvoo and the surrounding area. The small groups met at the historic Hotel Nauvoo. After the presentations, NC5 members answered questions and provided various ways in which one could donate to the project.

As donations began trickling in, the NC5 hosted various fund-raising projects. One of the most successful fundraisers was an auction held on October 12, 2019. $34,000 was raised from donated items and Sullivan Auctioneers from Hamilton donated their services to assist. Other fundraisers included stuffing piggybanks and stuffing ourselves after purchasing cookies from cookie sales as well as bricks and pavers for the entrance plaza.

Then the dark night of COVID swept across the land. A puzzle and game night scheduled for March 21, 2020 was canceled. Public fundraisers were impossible, and donations slowed to a trickle. Things looked bleak for months.

Yet, the NC5 persisted, hosting a Valentine meal fundraiser in February 2021, followed by various "how to" classes in March. The ambitious project was scaled back to two million dollars, and no longer required the demolition of the old school. Alderman Larry Nicholl obtained an Illinois Library Construction Grant awarding $504,000 towards the project. By late March, the project was $500,000 short of its goal, and had only three more months to raise the money.

In April 2021 the project received a much-needed boost with the announcement of a $400,000 pledge. It seemed that everyone was getting on board. That and other generous donations provided sufficient funds to get the project going. In March of 2022 the City Council awarded the building contract to Schickedanz Construction of Fort Madison, Iowa.

On April 21st, an outline of the building was painted on the lawn in front of the old school building.

Final plans are being made for the building which will be the hub of our community. It is the committee's wish that this be a building of which our people can be proud. The committee is accepting donations which will cover parking, sidewalks, landscaping and upgrades with the hope of an additional $200,000 being raised. You can invest in Nauvoo's future by donating at City Hall, or at www.nauvoocc.org. The NC5 committee appreciates those who have supported this project and look forward to its projected completion sometime this Fall.

Iowa DOT to start southeast Iowa traffic counts

AMES - The Iowa Department of Transportation is working across the state this spring and summer to determine how many cars, trucks, and other vehicles are using the state, county, and city roadways. The information gathered allows transportation officials to better predict traffic volume and weight trends, allowing them to plan improvements that will give Iowans the most benefit for each dollar spent.

This year's efforts are concentrated in southeast

Iowa, but occasionally crews will work elsewhere in the state. Some employees will spend peak hours between 7 a.m. and 6 p.m. at a location counting the morning, noon, and evening traffic. They count and classify vehicles, record vehicle turning movements, and gather other data necessary to assist in planning the future of Iowa's roadway system.

Other employees will be placing and checking portable traffic recorders in the same general areas. When the recorders are set, they usually record data for one or two days and are checked periodically. Employees responsible for the recorders work various shifts, including hours outside of a traditional business day.

Additional statewide work scheduled for this summer includes the installation, upgrading, and maintenance of permanent traffic recorders and weigh-in-motion equipment at continuous count station locations. Other data collection includes taking inventory on railroad crossing characteristics such as the number of tracks, the types of warning devices including signs, lights, horns and control gates present which are then entered into a handheld field computer. This information is then used in rail crossing planning, engineering, and safety purposes.

People in the area can expect to see Iowa DOT employees and vehicles in their communities all hours of the day.
