FESTIVAL MOVING: No indication that event will return to Fort Madison

FORT MADISON – A pair of progress has come to Fort Madison, at least for this summer.

RiverFest 2022 organizer Charles Craft announced Friday morning that the annual music festival along Fort Madison's scenic riverfront will move to Quincy this summer.

Craft released a statement indicating the festival would be tough financially to put on with all the construction progress taking place in the city.

The release in its entirety reads as follows:

"After careful consideration and contemplation, we must share the following news with you regarding RiverFest 2022. First, we want to thank all of the fans, our fantastic sponsors, our committee, our staff, our volunteers, and the City of Fort Madison for their steadfast and continued support.

Without this support, RiverFest Fort Madison would not have enjoyed the success we've seen for the past six years.

While we have been carefully monitoring the construc-

FORT MADISON – Fort Madison police are close to making an arrest as a result of an incident Saturday where an official at a local basketball tournament was knocked out by a parent.

According to Fort Madison Police Capt. Jamie Carle, police were called to the Fort Madison Middle School Saturday afternoon just after 3 p.m. where they found Patrick Weber, an official at the Fort Madison 3-on-3 basketball tournament, had been assaulted.

Carle said officers on scene reported Weber was being treated by Fort Madison

HIGH SCHOOL

FMHS trades team best in state

BY CHUCK VANDENBERG
PCC EDITOR

FORT MADISON – The Fort Madison High School trades teams continue to showcase as one of the top programs, if not the top program, in the state.

This year the Carpentry team again made that case.

The team of Landes Williams, Andrew Schaefer, Hayden Wolfe and Emmett Kruse competed Friday at the SkillUSA State Competition in Ankeny.

The event titled "Team Works," had elements of carpentry, plumbing, and electrical on a combined 6-hour build project that took place on the Des Moines Area Community College campus in Ankeny. This year's event was held outside.

FMHS construction team to compete in Atlanta

“The weather that day was in the 30s with sustained winds of 20 mph, and it snowed on the competitors as they were starting the contest,” said FMHS trades instructor Clint Kobelt.

The event was a national qualifying event with the best teams in the nation facing off in Atlanta in June. At the national level, masonry is added to the list of required skills. The national competition is a 3-day build due to the complexity of the event.

Fort Madison finished in the top half at that national event last held in Louisville. Kruse’s brother Owen was on that team.

In Ankeny, students were given the prints Thursday afternoon and we required to make a presentation Friday morning that outlined safety and risk assessments, an overview of how each team member would contribute, and what challenges they anticipated based on the prints and information at hand.

Each student had to prepare a resume, give the presentation to the judges, work as a team, problem solve, and put out a quality product, all while working under a deadline.

“The contests represents everything that every employer is looking for and these four young men proved what I’ve always known, which is that they are ready for whatever comes next in their lives,”

Kobelt said.

Williams is headed to college in the fall with plans to run his own construction business after college. Schaefer is taking an entrance exam for the electrical union, and Wolfe will be starting his career with Mohrfeld Electric after graduation. Kruse still has another year of high school

“These guys are destined for great things. Honestly it has very little to do with the Trades Program at FMHS. Call it what you want, employability skills, soft skills, critical thinking skills, I call it the intangibles,” Kobelt said. “The things that some think shouldn’t be graded in school because they aren’t “academic skills” but are by far the most important skills to have to be ready for the challenges that life will throw at them, and they all have it.

“Even Emmett Kruse as a junior has demonstrated such an understanding of how to handle adversity with a positive attitude and a willingness to work. And he’s got another year of school. He’ll return next year and show the next crew what it takes to be successful not just at competition but in life.”

Kobelt said he’s been blessed to have such solid groups of students over the years.

“I couldn’t be more proud of these guys and to make it to nationals back-to-back is a testament to the programs focus on getting students ready for life, whatever that looks like.”

firefighters and the assailant had left the building.

Carle has since taken a statement from Weber, who's also a teacher in the Keokuk school system.

Weber told police the parent became vocal at some calls made during the game and, after a warning, the suspect was eventually ejected from the facility. Between games the man then reappeared and confronted Weber who was working on the next game's bracket at the scorer's table asking how long he was ejected for, and that's when the assault occurred.

"(Weber) doesn't remember being punched but only remembers firefighters standing over him when he came to," Carle said.

"We know who it is and he was supposed to come in and talk to us, but he hasn't done that. If he doesn't show, we have a warrant for his arrest and there are charges pending against him."

Carle declined to release the suspect's name.

The event was a fundraiser organized by Fort Madison High School girls' basketball coach Tony Sargent.

Mayor says city park will be suited for another festival

tion project at Riverview Park, several concerns came to light. The loss of 60% of our parking, unsuitable ground conditions at our festival site stemming from the Marina project, and the road construction on Avenue H, among other factors have led us to the conclusion that we simply cannot sustain the highest quality event and experience that our loyal fans and sponsors deserve. We have looked at mitigation efforts to keep RiverFest in its original location and nothing we came up with was determined to be a suitable plan. While these things mean that the riverfront is not suitable for our needs this year, RiverFest enthusiastically supports the Marina project and the Avenue H road project as they both mean progress for Fort Madison.

The unfortunate reality is that when given the choice to present a sub-par event or explore other options, we chose to maintain the level of quality entertainment in a different location.

We found a community that met all our criteria and had a suitable site on the Mississippi River for RiverFest. We met with key leaders in the community and decided that Quincy, Illinois was a great fit for RiverFest. The dates and the artists will remain the same.

MOHRFELD

Anyone who has already purchased a ticket for RiverFest 2022 will be given the option of keeping that ticket for RiverFest 2022 in Quincy, Illinois or receive a refund.

We will continue to work hard to bring you the events you love. And while it's true that RiverFest will no longer take place where we began, we are committed to continuing to provide a quality festival experience for our attendees.

Tickets for RiverFest 2022 in Quincy, Illinois are on sale now at etix.com. Watch our social media pages and our website for more details as they become available.

Fort Madison Mayor Matt Mohrfeld said he met with Craft and the organization group a month ago about the construction and its impact on the festival, but said he was a bit surprised with the news when Craft called him Thursday.

"Am I disappointed, yes. Everyone who knows me knows I love festivals and I think festivals are very Fort Madison and very southeast Iowa. But I wish him well. They have to do what's right for them, and I would say the same thing about Fort Madison and entertainment," Mohrfeld said.

"I'm not going to apologize for this statement. We're going to go out and look for another festival. We want to create an environment for another festival."

Mohrfeld said he'd like to use the same group of volunteers because of their dedication and success. He said an Oktoberfest or 4th of July festival or something around Memorial Day in future years.

He said RiverFest was a specific genre and targeted a specific group of visitors and fans.

"Moving forward maybe there are things in that park that would be more compatible because of the development of the marina. Maybe a theme could emerge," he said.

Mohrfeld said anyone who's been thinking about a festival or had an idea should reach out to city officials.

Hickey takes over Central Lee program

LADY HAWKS: Jay Baldwin to stay on as assistant coach for the time being

BY JOHN BOHNENKAMP
PCC SPORTS

DONNELSON – The succession plan was simple when Jay Baldwin became Central Lee’s girls basketball coach two seasons ago, with Taylor Hickey as his assistant.

Baldwin, a long-time coach in southeast Iowa, would do the job until Hickey, then in her first year of coaching, would be ready to be the head coach.

Hickey is ready now.

Central Lee announced on Monday that Hickey would be taking over as head coach, with Baldwin remaining with the program as an assistant.

Honestly, it’s still so surreal for me,” Hickey said. “It’s definitely a dream come true. Being able to be around Jay, he’s helped me with the different aspects of it, the strategic end, to being a coach. And now I’m looking forward to being a head coach.”

“She feels confident now,” Baldwin said. “And I could see that during the season that she was getting her confidence. She’s got a lot of energy.

“She’s a perfect fit. She’s enthusiastic. And when she said she was ready, I was all for it. I’m proud of her for what she’s done, and how capable she is as a coach.”

Hickey is a graduate of Notre Dame High School in Burlington, and played college basketball at Quincy University. She feels at home at Central Lee.

“It’s been very welcoming, very positive,” Hickey said. “Just being here, knowing people, getting to know the community, it’s really made a positive impact on me.”

Central Lee has had back-to-back 13-9 seasons. The Hawks finished tied for second in the SEI Superconference South Division this season.

“I had the privilege of being very hands-on my first two years as an assistant next to Jay,” Hickey said. “This last season, he really let me jump in and really learn more about the head coaching aspect.”

It’s been a coaching relationship that has grown over the last two seasons.

“My first year, I really didn’t know what to expect,” Hickey said. “I didn’t know what he expected from an assistant coach, I didn’t know where he stood as a head coach. The second year, we really built a great relationship.

“He sat me down and said, ‘Yes, I’m the head coach. But I’m really open to any ideas you have. If you want to jump in, jump in.’ He let me voice my opinions on things, and it really turned out well for us.”

“She’s got a high basketball IQ, which I think is rare anymore,” Baldwin said. “Her enthusiasm for the kids is so impressive. When I started in coaching, I couldn’t wait to get to the gym for a game. That’s the way she is.”

Baldwin said he likes the direction of the program.

“We’re getting more players,” he said. “And with the quantity will come quality. It’s an exciting time.”

Hickey said she appreciates having Baldwin staying on the staff.

“Just because you’re a head coach doesn’t mean you stop learning,” she said. “I’ve learned a lot from Jay. I think this last year gave me more confidence, and made me more comfortable, from a coaching aspect of being around the game.”

Baldwin said he has appreciated the support of the Central Lee community in the two seasons. The change, he said, is going to work.

“With Taylor and Central Lee, it’s a match made in heaven,” he said.

Fort Madison boys fend off Washington at home

BY JOHN BOHNENKAMP

The Bloodhounds deserve one.

Monday’s 2-1 win over Washington was the Bloodhounds’ sixth match in eight days. And with nagging injuries piling up, coach Kevin Wellman told the team that all Tuesday’s practice would be a breakdown of video from the last four matches.

“The problem with a lot of these injuries, the shin splints and the slightly pulled muscles, is the only way to fix it is to do nothing,” Wellman said. “Sit on the couch and do nothing. But we can’t do that. We have to practice, get more in shape, stay conditioned.”

The Bloodhounds had only 15 players available for Monday’s match, which meant they had three position players and a backup goalkeeper to use as substitutes.

“We scraped it through today with not a lot of options available,” Wellman said.

The Bloodhounds (3-3 overall, 2-0 Southeast Conference) fought off early charges by the Demons (2-1, 1-1), who came into the match ranked 16th in Class 2A. Most of the early portion of the game was spent around the Fort Madison goal, but the Bloodhounds kept Washington off the scoreboard.

“I thought we started the game a little slow,” Wellman said. “Washington got off the bus ready to go. So we had a slow start, which has been a problem for us so far. But after that first 10-12 minutes we started getting into a rhythm.”

Fort Madison’s first goal came from Mitchell Pothitakis with 8:18 left in the first half. The Bloodhounds pushed the lead to 2-0 with a goal from Leif Boeding with 4:56 left in the second half, then Washington made the match a little more tense on Angel Mata’s sliding goal with 1:38 to play.

The Bloodhounds survived to stay on top of the conference they won last season.

SCC’s Ebbing named head of marketing council

ALBUQUERQUE — Jeff Ebbing, director of marketing and communications at Southeastern Community College (SCC) in Iowa, was installed as president of the National Council for Marketing & Public Relations (NCMPR) at the organization’s national conference last month in Denver.

Ebbing has been with SCC since 2005, and he’s tackled a number of big projects and initiatives over the years. He led three separate website redesigns and launched the college’s first social media presence in 2008. He coorminated communications for a variety of giving campaigns, including

Building the Dream, SCC’s 100th anniversary celebrations; virtual fundraising; and college awareness events. He developed a series of small business digital marketing classes; presented on marketing topics at state, regional, and national conferences; and regularly contributes articles and blog posts to NCMPR about higher ed marketing.

He has been active in NCMPR since 2006 and credits the organization with much of his professional development and skills acquisition.

“I’ve learned so much over the years from countless colleagues and friends from across the country,” Ebbing says. “Now, I’m looking forward to stepping into a leadership role and serving as a mentor to this next generation of community college communicators.”

He has served as chairperson for the Iowa Community Colleges Marketing Directors Workalike group to address higher ed communications and marketing projects since 2015, and he was vice president of marketing for Burlington Steamboat Days for three years. Ebbing has an MBA from the University of Iowa.
