City moves ahead with solar

APPROVED: Councilman questions effectiveness of solar panels in winter

BY CHUCK VANDENBERG
PCC EDITOR

FORT MADISON – City officials have decided to move forward with a plan to put solar panels on nine different city facilities after a lengthy discussion Tuesday night.

The move is part of an agreement with Red Lion out of Norwalk, Iowa and will not cost the city any upfront costs.

The city would enter into a 30-year agreement with the solar company, and would buy energy produced by the solar panels from Red Lion, while still buying any additional power needed from the city's current utility provider, Alliant Energy.

Councilwoman Rebecca Bowker cautioned the city on moving too fast into the agreement, saying that Alliant will sometimes increase rates for those who switch to solar energy.

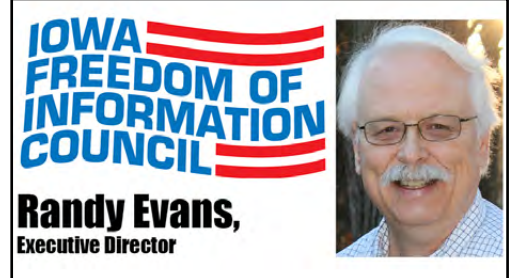

"I'm all about green energy, solar energy, wind energy, but I think we should take a close look at this before moving forward," she said.

Bowker said she has solar panels and pays a higher rate for electricity with Alliant, but wouldn't comment on what that rate was.

Terry Dvorak, CEO of Red Lion, was at the meeting

OPINION

Finkenauer claims were misguided

A common refrain from Democrats during Donald Trump's years in the presidency was that he was undermining public trust and confidence in our courts with his talk of judges being biased and having political motives when they ruled against him.

Trump's comments were a bunch of hooley — and it certainly was a bunch of hooley last week, too, when a prominent Iowa Democrat, U.S. Senate candidate Abby Finkenauer, sang from the Trump song sheet about judicial bias.

Finkenauer was embarrassed and angered by a decision from District Judge Scott Beattie that she failed to collect enough signatures on her nomination papers to meet the requirements of Iowa law for candidates for U.S. Senate. In the end, the Iowa Supreme Court overturned the decision Friday and unanimously decided she will appear on the ballot in the June Democratic primary election.

But the Supreme Court's decision did not erase the misguided claims Finkenauer made about supposed outrageous political gamesmanship and a partisan "Republican judge."

Here's a quick refresher on what she said: "In the dead of night, a Republican judge made a partisan decision to kick me off the ballot."

"Plain and simple, this decision lacks merit. It was a gift to Washington Republicans and makes a mockery of our democracy."

"This misguided, midnight ruling is an outrageous and partisan gift to the Washington Republicans who orchestrated this meritless legal action."

Finkenauer could have taken the high road after the judge's decision. She could have politely said she disagreed with his conclusion and would ask the Iowa Supreme Court to

JACKIE L. VANFLEET

The beloved husband, father, grandfather, great-grandfather, brother and friend, Jackie "Jack" Leon VanFleet, 76, of LaHarpe, Illinois, passed away on Monday, April 18, 2022 at OSF Saint Francis Medical Center in Peoria, Illinois.

VANFLEET

Jack was born March 8, 1946, at his parent's country home near Tennessee, Illinois, the third child of David and Katharyn (Carter) VanFleet. He graduated from Northwestern High School in 1964. As a child he worked on the farm taking care of the milk cows, hogs, and sheep. He also walked beans in the field, weeded the families' huge gardens, and helped on the sawing of wood for heat in their pot belly stove. In high school, he worked at Pete Dorothy's Standard Gas Station and for Russell Wagys construction company in Blandinsville.

Later he worked at Sylvania and G.E. in Burlington where he retired after 34 years in 2001. He continued working building and repairing homes for friends and family up until his time of death. Jack was a faithful member and elder of Grace Bible Church near Dallas City. He was very active as an elder, helping anyone who needed help. He especially offered help and comfort to those suffering from health difficulties. He helped construct the new friendship hall at the church. He was known by everyone as a devout servant to the Lord with an always positive outlook on life. On November 20, 1965, Jack married the love of his life, Pamela Carey. Of this union, of nearly 57 years, three sons were born, David (Barb) VanFleet, Michael (Teresa) VanFleet and Christopher (Amy) VanFleet.

Pam and Jack have 14 grandchildren and 6 great-grandchildren. Other surviving family members include 3 sisters, Nina (Bill) Fraise of Donnellson, IA, Pat (Bob) Boyer of Blandinsville and Marjorie (Leon) Solomon of Macomb and one bother, David (JoAnn) VanFleet, Jr. of Dallas City.

Jack enjoyed attending the activities of his children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren. He loved to hunt on his farm and watch John Wayne and other old western movies. Jack's greatest accomplishment may have been teaching his boys how to treat others, the value of hard work, the acceptance of responsibilities and to love the Lord.

Finkenauer cut signature counts too close in three counties intervene.

But she didn't.

She resorted to cheap, over-the-top political language that makes a mockery of Iowa's long-time merit system for choosing judges. She further divided Iowans who already see too many issues as us-versus-them.

What Finkenauer never mentioned in her statements is the fact that separate sections of Iowa law containing requirements for candidates' nomination papers are seemingly in conflict.

One law says each person signing a candidate's papers "shall add the signer's residence, with street and number, if any, and the date of signing."

But another section lays out reasons a signature line will not be counted. That includes the absence of an eligible voter's signature, the absence of the signer's residential address, with street and house number and city. The signature shall not be counted if the person supplies only a partial address, a post office box address, or if the signer's address is outside the district the candidate is running in.

Sharp-eyed readers will note that the grounds for disqualifying a signature do not include the failure to write a date — even though that is a piece of information the law requires.

It is the job of judges to decide how to resolve such legal conflicts. And when people in a dispute disagree on the judge's decision, they can ask the Iowa Supreme Court to review it.

The court did that 120 times last term. That shows capable lawyers representing various participants in legal disputes often do not agree on what the applicable Iowa laws mean.

What Abby Finkenauer should know — and what Donald Trump also should understand — is that it is not evidence of bias when a judge disagrees with your position in a dispute. It certainly is not political gamesmanship to file a lawsuit challenging an action or decision.

Judge Beattie explained in ruling that Finkenauer failed to submit enough valid signatures: "The court takes no joy in this conclusion. ... However, this court's job is to sit as a referee and apply the law without passion or prejudice. It is required to rule without consideration of the politics of the day. Here the court has attempted to fulfill that role."

That Finkenauer's candidacy came within a hair of ending last week is no one's fault but hers. It wasn't the Republicans' fault. Nor was it Judge Beattie's fault.

Four other candidates for the Senate — Democrats Michael Franken and Dr. Glenn Hurst, and Republicans Jim Carlin and Chuck Grassley — all cleared the nomination-paper signature hurdle without a hiccup.

But Finkenauer forgot that the Number 1 priority in any political campaign is not building a fancy website, writing issue papers, or seeking campaign donors. The top priority is getting on the ballot.

To do that, Iowa law requires U.S. Senate candidates to collect at least 3,500 signatures on nomination papers, with a minimum of 100 signatures coming from each of 19 counties.

Yes, Finkenauer collected 5,000 total signatures. But she only had 100 in Allamakee County and 101 in Cedar County. She met the 100-signature requirement in only 17 other counties.

Two Iowa Republican voters objected to her nomination petition, citing several deficiencies. Those included some people signing more than once, some giving only partial addresses, and some with improperly dated signatures.

In the end, it came down to one signer in Allamakee County and two in Cedar County who either failed to date their signatures or wrote an obviously incorrect date (6-6-27).

(Don't kid yourself and think for a minute Finkenauer would have let it pass without a challenge if Grassley had so little room for error on his nomination papers.)

What saved Finkenauer's candidacy, the Supreme Court said, was this: "We believe we must be guided by the Legislature's last word on the subject" — and that came last year, when lawmakers changed the election laws and explicitly laid out the grounds for not counting signature lines on nomination papers.

Absent from those grounds was a signer failing to date the signature.

While Finkenauer was criticizing Republicans for trying to subvert her campaign, it may turn out that her own fuming has done more to harm her candidacy.

virtually from his vehicle and said Alliant can't raise rates for those that have solar without going through the Iowa Utilities Board. He said any rate increases they impose would have to be imposed for everyone with solar at the same rate and he didn't anticipate that happening with the city.

"So you can guarantee us that Alliant won't be raising the rates for the electricity we purchase from them?" Bowker asked.

Dvorak said he couldn't guarantee anything, but he has many other customers and none have had their rates increased.

Bowker also asked if snow cover and winter climates would hinder the ability to generate power and Dvorak said it would, but then he wouldn't be selling any power to the city. He could only sell power that the cells produce.

Councilman Tom Schulz asked if City Manager David Varley had checked with any other potential vendors for the solar service. Varley said he had not and that Red Lion had approached the city several years ago about the possibility of entering into an agreement with the city.

The agreement could save the city close to $2 million over three decades if the city were to execute a purchase agreement at 15 years.

Red Lion would hire Mohrfeld Solar out of Fort Madison to install the solar cells at City Hall, at the Water Tower, Ortho Way Sewer Booster, Riverview Drive Sewer Booster, Avenue G Water Booster, Sheriff Station Water booster, the Fort Madison Airport Office, Fort Madison Public Library, and at Shopton Park.

City Councilman Rusty Andrews, serving as Mayor Pro Tem in Mayor Matt Mohrfeld's absence, said he worked for Michael Mohrfeld, who owns Mohrfeld Solar, but didn't abstain from the vote and voted in favor of the move.

Red Lion also has an agreement with Lee County for its solar panels. Schulz said he had data from the county and said those officials are very happy with the success of the program and the savings being realized.

Red Lion also takes advantage of solar tax credits for a period of six years in addition to the revenues generated off the solar energy generation of the cells.

Initial savings to the city would be about $20,000 per year. Dvorak said Red Lion's rates would go up about 2.5% per year, however Alliant is averaging closer to 4% per year, he said.

The measure passed 5-0.
