BASEBALL: Academy founder, complex director partner to keep local baseball going

BY CHUCK VANDENBERG
PCC EDITOR

FORT MADISON – Little League softball and baseball may very well be a thing of the past in rural parts of America where numbers are limited.

But Fort Madison volunteers are still working to put programs in place for anyone that still wants to play.

Jeff Woodside, of the Baxter Sports Complex said numbers for the community baseball program have been dropping for the past years, despite efforts to reduce the hurdles to kids playing.

“Years ago, the city gave the programs to the YMCA and we took over the programming a couple years ago,” Woodside said. “The numbers have been steadily dropping throughout those years.”

Woodside said he though removing barriers such as fees would have brought the dwindling program back up to sustainable numbers.

“There’s really nothing else we could from a generating interest standpoint. My hope was to make it free and there would 200 kids that wanted to play and we could bring Little League itself back to Fort Madison, but it’s gone the opposite direction,

Central Lee says school will go on

DM public schools cancel for 17 days starting Monday

The following is a letter from Central Lee School District Dr. Andy Crozier regarding planning for the district following spring break.

Central Lee Family,

As we near our Spring Break, I wanted to take a moment to update you on the coronavirus impact on the Central Lee Community School District.

At the conclusion of our school day on Thursday, our students will be dismissed for our regularly scheduled Spring Break, which lasts until Monday, March 23. I know many parents are beginning to wonder if we will hold classes after Spring Break. As of right now, our plan is to continue with school on March 23.

CROZIER

Over the next several days, we will continue to be in contact with our local partners at the Department of Health, the police department, and our health care professionals. They are providing us with guidance on how we can best maintain a safe and healthy learning environment. Over Spring Break, we are taking extra precautions to prevent illness in our school community. This includes deep cleaning and increasing our use of disinfectants on “high-touch” surfaces like doorknobs and handles.

For now, there is no recommendation to close schools in our district by the Iowa Department of Public Health or the Department of Education. As always, we must balance our need to maintain good public health with our need to provide schools across the state, and not just with new money, but in programs and initiatives that support educators and prepare our students for a disruptive 21st century economy,” said Gov. Reynolds. “Tomorrow’s workforce is sitting in our classrooms right now and the students with the required number of instructional days. If we need to close schools, we will notify our families through a text alert, email, social media, and a press release sent to our local news media. We will use a variety of channels to ensure everyone is completely informed.

“Iowans can be proud of the commitment we’re making to our preK-12

We all have a role to play in preventing the spread of disease, including coronavirus. Here are some tips from the CDC:

* If children are sick, they should not be at school. Students should be fever-free for 24 hours before returning to class after any illness. Keeping children home when they are sick is critical to prevention.

* Wash your hands regularly, especially after using the restroom and before preparing or consuming food. Using soap and hot water, wash for about 20 seconds.

* Avoid coughing or sneezing into your hands or in the air. Always try to cough or sneeze into a tissue, and then throw the tissue away.

* As much as you can, avoid touching your eyes, mouth, and nose.

To be frank, we are in uncharted territory. We do not know all the answers regarding if we are forced to close schools. We have tentatively put together our crisis team and will be working with local nonprofits to help maintain essential services if we are forced to close.

Please be safe and stay healthy over the next several days. Thank you for your support.

Sincerely,
Dr. Andy Crozier, Superintendent

Academy aims to keep costs down for area families

unfortunately," he said.

Most kids are playing in USSSA, United States Specialty Sports Association, organizations.... or what's been generically called "travel ball".

Little League baseball and softball used to be the leagues of choice, but as the prestige and excitement of travel leagues has attracted players of all ages, the numbers left for Little League and community ball associations has waned.

But Kyle Doherty, founder of the Doherty Baseball Academy, said he has yet to turn away any player that wants to play, despite reactions from some in the community who say groups like his are to blame for the end of community baseball.

Doherty started the academy as a baseball clinic and said he averaged about 50 kids of all ages so he knew there was still interest. But he said most of the kids between the ages of 10-12. He said he wants to start a softball division in the academy in the near future.

"I want this to be a program where we don't turn away anyone that wants to play baseball," Doherty said.

"With the help of the Sports Complex we're going to be holding free clinics this summer and fall each week for those families who are still on the fence to come out and see they like it," Doherty said "Those are absolutely free and we want to make them family friendly with some activities for younger kids, food and things like that.

Doherty said the knock on travel ball is the expense and he doesn't deny there is some, but he said he doesn't want his organization to be about money.

Doherty has six USSSA teams two 10 and under, one 11-year-old team, one 12-year-old team and two 13-year-old teams.

He said the initial cost is $100 but he said the academy is working hard to raise funds to help offset some of the costs. Doherty said the $100 also covers the cost of the uniform, which is not the case with many other area travel clubs.

Woodside said those teams will play about 16 games at the sports complex in addition to the weekend travel games. Doherty said he also trying to find more tourneys that are single day or close enough for people to drive home.

Doherty said he realizes people associate travel ball with a dollar sign. When he and Chris Pennock started the academy last year they wanted to keep it affordable and efficient.

"I want people to think of our academy as affordable for one, and that they are going to get everything they need as a player to develop, starting with structure," Doherty said.

"I won't turn a kid down. This is how we've ended up with extra teams on the 10U and 13 division. We're not going to turn a kid away. We'll make a solution for them," Doherty said.

Woodside from the complex's perspective that works, because it brings people in like Doherty who now baseball skills and can develop it.

"If we have the clinics that don't cost anything and we get a kid who's on the fence and likes the clinic and has a good time, they can get in this significantly cheaper than other organizations. You're getting a better product for not as much money, but yeah, there's a cost tied to it."

Doherty said he prefers the one-day shootouts. A two-day tourney can run $150 to 200.

"I want to get away from the two-days or I want to bust my hump to make sure parents don't have to deal with that stress. As you get older you travel to the bigger cities like Cedar Rapids, Bettendorf, or Peoria, but we want to make sure we're doing all we can to take that financial pressure of parents," Doherty said.

He said the backlash he's hearing is people comparing 2020 to 1995 and that mold is broken.

"We're doing what we can to hold onto that route, but it's not feasible and we have to redirect," Doherty said.

"We hear some of the parents of kids from other communities that come to clinics that say they are going through the same numbers situation. But what I like about travel ball is it is what we make it."

He said the kids looking for intense play will find it, and the kids that are just looking for a weekly local league can find that as well.

"Not a lot of groups are like that because they like to play nine or ten tournaments, but I don't believe in that."

Doherty said anyone looking for additional information or having questions about getting signed up or involved with the league can reach out to him directly at 319-470-8556.
