THIS WEEKEND Art in Central Park set for Sunday in FM

BY BRIAN RIGGS Fort Madison Area Arts Director

FORT MADISON - Fort Madison Area Arts Association will conduct another episode of Art-in-Central Park with some modifications this year due to Covid-19.

"FMAAA Board Members were concerned with the number of cases in early September. We met with LCHD staff in the middle of the month and then the Board voted to go ahead with our plans for the 27th after a decrease in active cases in Lee County," reports FMAAA director Brian Riggs.

"We have eliminated the popular Kid's Fun ArtZone this year due to the crowding concerns. The traditional BBQ picnic meal is out and we are spacing the visual artists much further apart to utilize all the space in Central Park. The open environment creates a safer event environment and most folks take their tour of the cultural options at differing times. Of course FMAAA recommends mask wearing in public." Nearly 20 visual artists are on tap for the event in mediums of painting, stained glass, copper art, pastel, garden sculpture, photography, poetry, pen&ink, wooden inspection business, Tri State Home Inspections for the past four years.

Taylor said he had no plans on running for a third term, but said since the Republicans dismantled collective bargaining, among other things, he's seeking another term.

"I just saw so much destruction done in the past years. I had originally planned on not running for another term," he said.

"There's just so much damage that the Republican controlled House, Senate, and Governor's office has done to the state I just couldn't leave it like that"

Taylor said collective bargaining was the biggest issue for him and he wants to push that agenda even though he knows the governor will never sign a return to the table for the unions.

Collective bargaining was founded in the state back in the 70s and Taylor said it allowed one voice to speak for 20,000 employees. He hopes the senate can flip back to Democrat control so inroads can be made to put collective bargaining back in two years if a Democrat is elected Governor.

Six Republicans are retiring from their seats in the Senate at the year's end and Taylor thinks the Democrats have a good chance, not only in those but other contested races, to regain control of the Senate.

"I think we've got a good chance of taking 8 to 10 seats if Iowa is paying attention to what the Republicans are doing to them," he said. "The only group I know that can be happy with what's going on is the very big businesses. Even small business shouldn't be happy with what's going on right now." Taylor said he also wants to continue to advocate for Iowa's public schools. He said the national average for the percentage of state's budgets allocated to public school funding is about 20.5%, but Iowa's is only 16.9%.

"That amounts to just over $1,100 per student. If Fort Madison or Keokuk had another $1,100 per student they would be able to pay teachers properly, which the state hasn't done for years," he said.

The other problem there, Taylor adds, is that teachers in Iowa are dedicated and are putting up with the underfunding, but how long will that last.

"Older teachers will retire and younger teachers will go to other states where the pay is better," Taylor said.

Reichman said education is talking point for Democrats.

"It's a partisan talking point. When they had the majority, they funded it and then pulled millions and millions back out of it," Reichman said.

"The state has spent more money on schools and it wasn't just additional money per child. The state realized that rural schools have additional costs related to busing and directly funded additional transportation costs," Reichman said.

Reichman said is passion for bringing jobs and rebuilding the economy as an ambassador for southeast Iowa is what sets him apart from Taylor.

"I want to go to the senate to represent southeast Iowa. Manufacturing is our backbone and if you look at my agenda, it's the economy – rebuilding the economy and bringing more higher paying

Bloodhounds take 3-1 mark to Bracewell Friday

BY CHUCK VANDENBERG PCC EDITOR

FORT MADISON - Fort Madison's Head Coach Derek Doherty is a self proclaimed history nerd.

He just acquired an old FMHS alum Jim Youel NFL football card and some 1960s Bloodhound team photos and wants to hang them at the school.

His philosophy this year, despite all the teams in the state making the playoffs, has been to still earn it so the Bloodhounds can stand tall with past teams that have made to the playoffs.

"We don't call it a playoff year, unless we go a game or two in and then we'll think about it," he said.

The next step along the way is a stop at Bracewell Stadium Friday night to take on the 1-2 Burlington Grayhounds.

BHS (1-2) has had a rough start to the year, but got their first win last week against Fairfield. The Grayhounds started the year with a cancelled game with Ottumwa due to coronavirus concerns, but with everyone making the playoffs, the impact of the lost game was minimized.

CALIFF

Burlington has lost tough games to Davenport North 40-7 and Keokuk two weeks ago 20-3. Junior quarterback Kanyae Baker had 75 yards on 18 carries in the game with Chiefs and has 204 yards on the year and a score. But the Grayhounds only attempted six passes in the game and have just 24 yards throwing all season.

SETTLES

Doherty said the Bloodhound secondary won't be on idle.

"We're high on our secondary, but our guys have fallen asleep a few times. Keokuk had some receivers open down field and just missed," Doherty said. "We cannot afford to fall asleep on this team. They have some skilled kids."

WILLIAMS

He said the Grayhounds run a tricky offense that's tough to plan for.

"We know what's coming and our coaches went right to work and schemed up something that we feel can put our kids in the best position possible for Friday," Doherty said.

Fort Madison (3-1) again took advantage of created opportunities in the 21-14 win over Keokuk Friday. With an offense that ranks towards the bottom of Class 3A District 5 play, the special teams and defense are critical to the Hounds success.

Last week, senior Brock Califf blocked an extra point and then took the ensuing kick off, after bobbling the kick, back for a touchdown.

Fort Madison running back Calem Maclearn (24) finds a temporary seam last week in the Hounds' 21-14 win over the Keokuk Chiefs. The Bloodhounds go to Burlington Friday to try to move to 4-1 on the year.

"Brock's a dog. He's a competitor he's a guy that wants the ball in his hands and is always asking for the ball," Doherty said.

Offensive coordinator Justin Menke slipped junior Landes Williams in at quarterback to start against Keokuk and moved senior Will Larson to a slot receiver, and the Hounds started moving the ball in the second half.

Fort Madison had 111 yards rushing on the night with Williams and senior Calem Maclearn handling the carries. The two combined for 101 and a touchdown. Tate Johnson also caught his third touchdown pass of the year from 20 yards out after Williams dumped a lineman on a cut back to his right.

Doherty said he was afraid of what he called a "hangover", but has seen a focused squad this week in practice.

"In college they call it the hangover game and we've been reminding them that we still have some work to do. And they've bounced back pretty well."

A pleasant surprise for the Hounds has been sophomore Tanner Settles at defensive end. Tanner is third in District 5 in tackles with 26. Sixteen of those are solo and four were for losses.

In the third quarter Friday Settles tracked down a speedy Equilius Lee from other side of the line on an end around, and the Hounds will be looking for his production on the defense side again Friday.

"He's the definition of Effort, Attitude, and Toughness. Even when his stats aren't going up, other people's are because of the work he's doing."

Doherty said Settles is still learning as an underclassman, but when he makes a mistake, "it's at 100 mph."

Fort Madison has amassed 370 yards on the ground with five different ball carriers having more than 10 carries. In an extremely balanced ratio of run to pass, Larson and Williams have thrown from 376 yards and three touchdowns, all to Johnson. The duo's 44 completions are tops in the district.

The Hounds lead the district in multiple defensive categories including interceptions with nine, pick sixes with two, fumble recoveries with six, and defensive touchdowns with three. Their eight sacks are second in District 5.

The two have split the last two games with Burlington winning at home in 2018, while Fort Madison got the win at Jim Youel Field last year.

Game time is 7 p.m. at Bracewell Stadium in Burlington. The game is voucher attendance due to coronavirus concerns.

Taylor touts education, while Reichman talks jobs

jobs to this part of the state."

Reichman said another difference is just the party agenda.

"With us, you see a party with lower taxes, less government, looking for people to be self-supporting and not dependent on the government for a livelihood," he said.

"One of my favorite quotes is, 'Government large enough to provide everything you need, is government large enough to take away everything you have."

He said building curriculum in schools that allows students to explore vocational training will help redevelop a skilled workforce and help fill jobs locally.

Both candidates agreed that the state's budget is in good shape considering the impact of the COVID pandemic. Taylor said budget analysts are projecting a 6% revenue growth this year in spite of the pandemic.

"For a Democrat I'm very conservative. I don't buy things I don't need and I want the state to do that, too," Taylor said.

"Pay for the police, the fire, garbage pickup. Pay for what we should be paying. But I don't need a Cadillac, I just want a good Chevy. That's how I am personally. So when they call us Tax and Spend Democrats, that's just not true."

Taylor said military careers like he and Reichman have don't prepare you for dealing with people on a personal level.

"That will be a big difference compared to Jeff's military career. He doesn't understand the people of southeast Iowa like he needs to. I was in the National Guard for seven and a half years and the military didn't teach me people skills. It taught me other things, but not how to reach people," he said.

Taylor said the pandemic kept him from being able to go door-to-door as much as he has in the past and he said his misses that interaction and getting to hear from constituents about their problems over a kitchen table.

"Campaign people would get upset with me because I would spend an hour or so at one house. But that's what I like to do," he said. "Find out deep down what problems they have and what can I do to help at the state level."

Reichman said he's been able to get out and do some of the door-to-door work getting to know people up in Henry County and other areas of the district.

"COVID is still lingering around and still an issue, but the good news is, we've been able to get out and knock on doors. I've knocked on 1,000s of doors myself," he said.

"Luckily, we got through the primary without knowing a lot of people in Henry County, but we're building on those relationships and meeting people and there's great excitement to see their candidate on the door steps."

Taylor said other issues that need to be address at the legislature are water quality, fully funding the judiciary, free pre-school, classifying ambulance service as essential in the state, and redemption issues.

"I think the ambulance service thing will be huge his year. I think the virus has taught us we have to something here and I think it's taught us we have to do something with redemption centers," Taylor said.

He said the state has to move to make that more profitable and favorable to business operators, or the cans will end up damaging the environment.

"It all kind of goes together. If you're not recycling, your stuff usually ends up in your water."

Reichman said redemption plans in the state do need revamped. He said those are 40-year-old regulations and they need to updated to make the process simpler and reimbursements quicker for operators.

Reichman said his transitioning back to southeast Iowa has made him realize how important it is to have representation in Des Moines that reflects the needs of southeast Iowa.

"My family is here and this is where I'm from," he said. "But I feel my greatest fulfillment is helping and serving a greater cause, and the driving factor in that was my transition back to southeast Iowa."

Reichman said he could have built a better professional life in other areas, but he wanted to come back to his family and roots.

"I remember my grandfather passing away when I was a young man and as close as we were, you always want more time," he said. "I just didn't want to pass up on anymore missed time."
