Alliant looks to bump state rates

BY CHUCK VANDENBERG
PCC EDITOR

FORT MADISON - Lee County residents could be seeing a 10-12 percent increase in their Alliant Energy bill in the next two years and a six to eight percent increase in the next month.

According to Joel Schmidt, vice president of regulatory affairs, Alliant will be applying to the Iowa Utilities Board for a rate increase on April 3. The energy company has not submitted a request for a rate increase since 2010.

The rate increase will be in the range of 10 to 12% in base utility rates for customers and would eventually result in a $12 to $14 monthly increase on an average $100 monthly bill. The utility will ask for an interim increase while and the interim would go into effect about 10 days following the application with the board. If approved, the rate increase would be phased in over a two year period and Schmidt said Alliant is hoping to utilize some credits to help reduce the amount of the rate increase.

a residence on the north side of Denmark.

The Lee County Sheriff's department has released the name of the victim as Mark Richers, 58, of Denmark.

Richers was shot twice Saturday morning, and according to the report, his 13-year-old son Wyatt, has been arrested and is being charged with the crime and is being held at the Southeast Iowa Detention Center

A hearing was scheduled for today, but staff at the North Lee County Courthouse indicated the hearings would be closed due to the age of the suspect.

The juvenile is charged with willful injury causing bodily injury to another, and going armed with intent, both class D felonies under Iowa law that are punishable by up to five years incarceration and $7,500 in fines.

FORT MADISON - Outfitted in a beautiful blue gown and an eggshell-colored cowgirl hat, the newest member of the 2017 Rodeo Court wasn't quite finished getting dressed.

So her uncle, and long time rodeo pageant supporter, Bob Britton, came up and adorned 12-year-old Kami Eaves-Fedler with her crown as the newest Miss Junior Rodeo Iowa to complete the ensemble.

Eaves-Fedler's coronation celebration was held at the BPOE Elks Lodge #374 Sunday afternoon in front of about 50 family and friends. She is the daughter of David and Trish Fedler of Fort

In 2011 Miss Jr. Rodeo Iowa was established to allow younger girls to learn the ropes of representing the rodeos.

Eaves-Fedler is engaged in a lot of work, including school, that is representative of a rodeo queen including a membership in the local saddle club, gymnastics and dance, she helps with local Relay for Life events that benefit cancer research, attends vacation bible school and helps with the Fort Madison theater group, Old Fort Players.

She also tends to three cats, three dogs and a horse Maggie.

She said her future may hold becoming a physician and working for Justin Sports Medicine, an offshoot of the Justin Boots Company.

Running for the title of Little Miss Rodeo was a learning experience as Eaves-Fedler overcame

Schmidt: Alliant rate increase to pay for investment in service

ings would be in May or June and hopefully we would have a final decision from the IUB in October," Schmidt said. He said if the IUB determines that the request is too high, there could be potential refunds with interest on the interim increase.

Alliant said the increase would be statewide and is substantiated by investments made in an effort to maximize service to Iowa customers, such as the $700 million Marshalltown Power Plant currently under construction. But he said it's also to help offset costs associated with providing some of the highest quality utility service in the country. The Marshalltown project was approved by the IUB several years ago and will come in on time, under budget and produce enough energy to power 500,000 Iowa homes.

Schmidt pointed to a recent report that didn't rate the U.S. energy infrastructure very well.

"The American Society of Civil Engineers recently gave energy infrastructure in the US a D-, which is very bad," Schmidt said. "However a recent article in the US News and World Report said Iowa has the number one power grid in the country. We've got great power here. We can harness wind and we can continue with that but we have to invest in it and that can be expensive. Our reliability is very good by national standards."

"We want to continue to fund operations and provide excellent customer service and continue to provide the cleaner energy they expect," Schmidt said. A PRNews-wire report published Feb. 23, fair and we won't ask for a penny more than what we need," he said. "We do care about our customers and encourage them to contact us if they need help with their bills. We understand there could be some tension here, but we need that revenue to cover our expenses."

Schmidt credited the IUB with having good regulations structure and said they are very familiar with the board.

"Most of the time utility boards give slightly less than what you're filing for, but since we haven't been in in six years and there are three new board members, we believe it's a very appropriate request. The IUB takes this very seriously and it will be vetted appropriately," he said.

Both Fort Madison City and Lee County officials hinted after the budgeting process that Alliant was looking at a rate increase.

Schmidt said when considering filing for increases, the utility tries to have communication with the local governments prior to them setting budgets. However this time the budgets were set and approved prior to the filing for the increase.

"We'll have to do a little better job of that in the future," he said.

But he indicated that the utility generally meets quarterly with larger industrial customers to give them an outlook.

He also said there are more on utility bills that just the base rate and that rate represents about 60% of the bill for most customers and about 30% of the bill for the largest customers.

For Eaves-Fedler, rodeo crown is a path of family the anxiety that goes with pageant competitions.

"I ran for Little Miss Rodeo," she said. "I didn't win because at that age I was nervous about doing things. I just kind of stood up there and didn't do anything," she said.

But this time went a bit differently as Eaves-Fedler prepared a speech on the rodeo and had to have a dress made.

She said she decided in June last year they she wanted to give the pageant another shot.

"Well, I've never really ran for a title before, besides the Little Miss Rodeo, and I decided, 'Hey why not do this, it's the last chance at this age,' she said.

But she was quick to recognize the help and support she received and seems to be quickly overcoming her stage fright.

"I'm excited for the opportunity to represent the State of Iowa, the sport of rodeo and I look forward to traveling," Eaves-Fedler told the group. "None of this would be possible without the individuals and businesses that were generous enough to show their support. And a special thank you to Mom and Dad and uncle Bob because without their love support and checkbooks none of this would have happened."

Eaves-Fedler's mother Trish said the pageant has been a part of her family's life for a long time.

"It's been quite a road for Kami as far as getting her prepared for the pageant. She was very nervous about the public speaking but it seems today she's getting over that," her mother said.

"Being a rodeo queen is a big process. There's a lot you have to go through. I think it's good the pageant has this division. It meant a lot to have her Uncle Bob crown her."

She said she's glad her daughter has the opportunity to work through the introductory level of the pageant as the Miss Junior.

"She was unsure of it and it's very overwhelming so at this level they can bring her along at a bit of a better pace for her," she said.

"This is our rodeo family and we're very proud to be a part of it. Uncle Bob helped bring this pageant to this area and he believes in it wholeheartedly. So we've all grown up around this pageant."

Braden to monitor juvenile shooting case closely

Lee County Attorney Ross Braden said the county will be prosecuting Richers as a juvenile and Mio Santiago, an assistant in the office is assigned to the case, however, Braden said he will be working very closely with Santiago on the case. Braden was in contact with officers at the scene of the shooting by telephone. "I will be very hands on with it," Braden said today. During a traffic stop on Saturday, a family member who was driving to the residence in Denmark at a high rate of speed told a Lee County Sheriff's deputy about the incident, prompting the deputy to send rescue personnel from Lee County EMS, Denmark Fire and Rescue, Lee County Sheriff's Department and AirEvac to the scene. No details were released pertaining to the type of gun used in the shooting. A hearing was set for this afternoon at North Lee County Courthouse.
