Local HVAC owner moving into new digs

Strunk moves operations into former Pioneer Glass facility

BY CHUCK VANDENBERG PCC EDITOR

FORT MADISON - He says he likes to keep a low profile, but Phil Strunk is taking his heating and cooling business into a bigger home with a bigger sign.

Strunk is moving his Community Heating and Cooling business into the former Pioneer Glass warehouse at the corner of 19th Street and Avenue L.

He said he doesn't have any additional plans for expansion but wanted to be more visible for customers.

"I've been running this business from behind Doc Shannon's place up by Rodeo Park. You don't get seen very well up there so I thought it would be good to move down here and be on a main street through the town," Strunk said Thursday.

Crews are currently renovating the office space of the former glass dealership. The entire office has been completely gutted and opened up. Strunk is building a new wall and is basically cleaning the building, which he said used to be a car dealership and grocery store, prior to Pioneer and now Community Heating and Cooling. A reception area is also in the works.

'If you're gonna have a secretary there you might as well sell some parts, filters, etc," he said. "It'll just be nice to have a place where people can just come in.,"

He said he may look at possibly offering some retail furnace parts, but he plans on just sticking to the what he's good at which is providing around the clock heating and cooling service and sales. Community Heating and Cooling has been in business for three years with a main service market of Burlington, Keokuk, and Fort Madison.

Strunk graduated from Hawkeye Community College in Waterloo in 2000 and has a low-key approach to his business.

"I'm just the most low-profile people you'll ever see," he said. "I like showing up at people's homes and they don't know I'm the boss."

Services he offers include all heating and cooling services, duct work and new home duct work and humidifiers. He also leases ice machines to clients throughout southeast Iowa and northeast Missouri. Strunk says he can service all brands of heating and cooling systems, but specializes in Goodman systems. He said a Goodman sign is ready to be installed on the building. His crew will also respond to calls 24/7 and said that's just the way the industry is.

"You have to accommodate for people's lifestyles. People don't work normal hours anymore. Used to be most people worked 8-4 but that just doesn't happen anymore and we need to accommodate them," he said.

Strunk said he doesn't really have a grand opening date, but is telling everyone after the beginning of the year.

ISU researchers leading initiatives to improve rural health

Higher disease rates due to gaps in rural health care

AMES, Iowa – More than a million Iowans are at an increased risk of according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. National exercise are necessary for good health, regardless of where you live. Unfortunately, going to a gym or even having a grocery store with healthful foods nearby is not an option in many rural areas. Recognizing these challenges, Francis and colleagues have designed and implemented programs to promote health and wellness. Latinos Living Well, which offers classes on nutrition and physical activity with the goal of preventing the onset of Type 2 diabetes, is one of her most recent efforts. Latinos are twice as likely to develop diabetes, but many do not know if they have the illness or may be at risk, Francis said. The risk combined with the growing Latino population in rural Iowa has created a need for these culturally appropriate classes (taught in Spanish) to help Latinos develop healthful lifestyles. Data collected during a pilot of the Latinos Living Well program found participants grew more confident about research-based, which is especially important in rural areas where limited health care access and fewer physical activity opportunities may exacerbate diabetes risk. Francis and a team of Extension nutrition and wellness specialists across the state also offer a Wellness and Independence through Nutrition program. The goal is to improve nutrition and quality of life for older dying from heart disease, cancer or a stroke simply because they live in a rural area.

Higher rates of smoking, high blood pressure and obesity among rural Americans, as well as poverty rates and access to health care all contribute to this disparity, Rural Health Day on Nov. 16 aims to reduce the gap in rural and urban health outcomes – something Iowa State University researchers are directly and indirectly doing through their research and ISU Extension and Outreach initiatives. Proper nutrition and FRANCIS managing diabetes through lifestyle changes, exercised more and prepared class recipes at home.

"As the Latino population grows, we must respond with culturally appropriate, impactful programming," Francis said. "The program is Great River Health Systems plans Nov. 21 groundbreaking ceremony for Keokuk clinic

A public groundbreaking ceremony for Great River Health Systems' new clinic in Keokuk is scheduled at noon Tuesday, Nov. 21. The 19,000-square-foot facility will be built in the 3200 block of Main Street, between Hampton Inn and Sonic. Estimated to cost $6.85 million, the clinic is expected to open in late 2018.

The health system purchased The Keokuk Clinic Jan. 1, 2012. It has grown from a practice with three internal medicine physicians to 10 health care providers. The new building will be four times larger than the existing clinic at 1603 Morgan Street.

"First and foremost, we're building a new clinic to increase access to primary-care services for people in southeast Iowa - specifically the Keokuk area," said Mark Richardson, president and CEO. "It's part of our strategy to expand the health system's regionalism, which includes bringing specialty care to areas that don't have these services.

"In nearly six years, Great River Health Systems has added cardiology, podiatry, rheumatology, sports medicine and women's health to the clinic's services. With a larger building, there will be room for more."

Great River Health Systems last week purchased property to build another clinic in Burlington, near the intersection of Agency Street and Roosevelt Avenue. The clinic will be located between Walgreens and Pizza Ranch. It will provide primary- and urgent-care services. Construction will begin within one year.

The new one-story clinics will resemble Great River Health Systems' buildings on its main campus in West Burlington. Carl A. Nelson and Company is the general contractor.

Elks Soup supper fundraiser set for Nov. 17

BY PCC STAFF

FORT MADISON - The Fort Madison Elks Lodge will be once again holding their annual Soup Supper Fundraiser on Nov. 17 to coincide with the downtown Wine and Beer Walk.

The supper will run from 5:30 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. or until the soup is gone and will feature eight soups and a large bread table filled with breads, muffins and biscuits.

This year's senior division will feature Dave Clark preparing a creamy chicken and wild rice soup. Rick Tebbs will bring an oriental Thai Soup, Lee Meller will feature a vegetable/meat soup, and Lin Cramer and Lori Illner will bring an Italian Wedding soup.

In the junior teams division, Carol Cowles and sous chef Maddy will bring a beef stew. Bridget Link and sous chef Addison will bring back their 2016 winning squash soup. Lynn Parson and sous chef Reyna will feature a chill, and Jodie Ried and sous chef Jordyn will bring a potato ham soup with grilled cheese croutons.

Again this year, there will be "Tip" jars out in front of each soup and the soup with the highest amount of money in the jar is the overall winner. The team with the most tips received in their jar will win the team competition.

The money raised supports the Elks Lodge and the Elks Kid's Christmas Party as well as Elk's community Projects. Prices for the event are adults-$8.00 kids 3-12-$5.00 and kids under three are free.

Jodie Ried, Deann Niggemeyer and Lin Cramer have organized the event and more information can be obtained by calling the Elks Lodge at 319-372-3724.

bo among the vegetated areas and around deep structure.

Lake Wapello

Water temperatures are dropping and few anglers have been out. Largemouth Bass - Slow: Try spinnerbaits or jig n pig combos around the brush piles. Slow down the presentation with the cooler water. Black Crappie - Slow: Use jigs tipped with live bait around submerged structure. Sorting may be needed for larger fish. Black Bullhead -Slow: Try nightcrawlers fished on the lake bottom in about 6 feet of water.

Ottumwa Park Pond South

Trout were stocked on Oct. 27th. Use small tube jigs, small twister tails, in-line spinners, casting spoons and live bait under a bobber.

Rathbun Reservoir

The current lake level is 903.53 msl. The water temperature is 45 degrees. Normal operating elevation is 904.0 msl. Lake Rathbun has zebra mussels, so make sure to properly drain, clean, and dry equipment before transporting to another water body. All docks and the fish cleaning stations have been removed for the year. The ramps at the Rathbun marina are closed for the season. White Crappie - Slow: Use jigs around structure and along the rip-rapped shorelines. Channel Catfish - Slow: Use nightcrawlers or cut bait. Walleye - Slow: Troll crankbaits that mimic shad in areas with a variation in depths. Try also trolling nightcrawler rigs. Some fish will start to move shallow with the cooler temperatures.

Red Haw Lake

Water temperatures are dropping and fishing pressure has dropped with few anglers out. Bluegill - Slow: Use small jigs tipped with a chunk of nightcrawler along the shoreline and around structure. Largemouth Bass - Slow: Try rubber worms or spinnerbaits in areas with rip rap or other types of structure. Try shallow areas as the water continues to cool down and slow down the presentation. Channel Catfish - Slow: Use nightcrawlers or chicken liver around the fishing jetties.

Surface water temperatures in the Rathbun district lakes are in the low to mid 40's. The district includes Mahaska, Lucas, Wayne, Monroe, Appanoose, Wapello, Davis and Van Buren counties. Contact the Rathbun Fish Hatchery at 641-647-2406 with questions about fishing in south central Iowa.

Mississippi River Pool 19

Tailwater stage is 4.49 feet at Lock and Dam 18 above Burlington and has been fairly steady the past few days. White Crappie - No Report: Use jigs and minnows or minnows under a bobber in backwaters around brush piles. Sauger - Slow: Vertical jig with minnows or pull three-way rigs with minnows or stick baits.

Tailwater stages have been fairly steady this past week. Main channel water temperature is around 40 degrees and water clarity has been good. There has been some tailwater fishing for walleyes and saugers. If you have questions on fishing Pools 16-19, contact the Fairport Fish Hatchery at 563-263-5062.

Mental health stigma a hurdle to seeking care

adults by helping those who are eligible be more aware of the Supplemental and Nutrition Assistance Program. Since 2014, more than 4,500 older adults have participated and 117 were referred to the Food Bank of the Heartland for application assistance. Access to mental health services is not the only barrier for people living in rural communities. Greder says cost and distance often prevent people from seeking help, but stigma is also a problem. Much of her research focuses on the mental and physical health of low-income families in rural communities. Even if families have the resources for treatment, she says they are often ashamed or embarrassed.

"In a town of 10,000 residents, everyone is going to know if your car is parked outside the therapist's office," Greder said. "The tight, close-knit aspect of rural communities is a great thing, but it also makes it difficult to ask a friend or neighbor for help, especially if it's related to a mental or emotional issue. We need to help families realize it is OK to seek help or talk with others when they're not feeling well mentally."

Improving physical health can also benefit mental health. Through her extension efforts, Greder coordinates the Abriendo Caminos program for Latino families in Perry, Postville and Ottumwa. Over the course of six weeks, parents and children learn about nutrition and physical activity, and work together as a family to make decisions and set goals on how to live a more healthful lifestyle. Greder is working with researchers at the University of Illinois to collect data and evaluate the program.

There is also a misconception that families in rural communities have ample access to outdoor space for physical activity, Greder said. However, her research has found the green space is not always usable or convenient. Low-income, rural mothers interviewed for the study reported they did not have access to parks with age-appropriate equipment or safe walking trails.

With a growing number of older adults in Iowa, many living in rural areas, Margrett is concerned about the lack of qualified workers, support services and care facilities for people with dementia. She and her colleagues are working on solutions to improve health care access in counties labeled "care deserts" or classified by the CDC as medically underserved.

Nearly 80 percent of Iowa counties have segments of the population that are medically underserved, which affects all aspects of the life span from infant mortality to care for older adults who want to age in place, Margrett said. In a medical emergency, people living in these "care deserts" are miles away from the closest hospital, which might not have specialized care. Margrett says they may delay or not seek treatment for mental health or preventative care because distance is a barrier.

"Our data also looked at whether adults had someone they could turn to if they needed help. A high number of Iowans in rural areas felt they had no one they could rely on," Margrett said. "The concern in these care deserts is not just formal support, such as doctors and specialists, but also informal support from family, friends and neighbors."

Creating walkable, pedestrian-friendly communities and landscapes provides safe routes for children walking or biking to school and an avenue for older adults to increase their physical activity. Seeger, in partnership with the Iowa Department of Public Health, has worked with 50 Iowa communities to tackle this issue through the I-WALK (Iowans Walking Assessment Logistics Kit) project. The main goal was to identify infrastructure gaps where communities need to extend sidewalks or address other problems.

Seeger and colleagues with Iowa State Extension and Outreach are building upon that work to provide city and county governments or agencies with data to improve decision-making. The Indicators Portal features county-specific information from multiple sources, such as the U.S. Census Bureau, CDC and the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation. Seeger says within the next few months the site will include health indicators and data at both the city and county level.

"We want to make sure communities receive real, unbiased data that is understandable," Seeger said. "The goal is that if a county government is looking at areas to improve health, the portal has all the information in one place to see what areas need improvement."
