Golf carts, ATVs one roll call away

BY CHUCK VANDENBERG
PCC EDITOR

FORT MADISON – A packed Fort Madison Council Chambers saw the Fort Madison City Council edge closer to allowing golf carts and ATVs on certain city streets.

The council voted 4-3 on the second reading of the ordinance to allow the vehicles on city streets with the exception of 15th and 18th streets, Hwy. 2, and Business 61.

The ordinance would follow county regulations and would allow licensed drivers 18 and older to operate golf carts, ATVs, and side-by-sides on city streets.

Earlier this year, the Lee County Supervisors and West Point City Council approved similar measures.

Councilmen Matt Mohrfeld, Chris Greenwald, Rusty Andrews, and Kevin Rink voted in favor of the move, while Bob Morawitz, Mark Lair, and Chad Cangas all voted against the measure. The vote was on the same lines as the first reading.

The ordinance will require a third reading at the Oct. 15 meeting and then would go into effect after it is published.

Eleven residents went to the podium to give their opinion on the proposed code change.

Councilman Chad Cangas suggested toward the end of the discussion that the issue be put on a ballot to applause from the standing-room only crowd, but Morawitz said that wouldn't be a legal question.

"That's not a question that the state will allow you to put on a ballot," Morawitz said.

He said the comments he's received from the constituents he's heard from is that they don't want the change,

King issues raises more than money

The Stead Family Children's Hospital was our place of residence for about three days last year.

Our daughter was found passed out in the hallway of her dorm at the University of Iowa and was diagnosed with pulmonary hypertension. She'd had it for years and we didn't know. That's not something for which a father ever forgives himself.

But the facilities at that oblong, wave-recipient of a hospital are best in the nation. Our child was in the best place in the world. And we knew it.

The fact that the entirety of Kinnick Stadium turns on Saturdays throughout the fall and waves to those children is a wave at my daughter. The fact that Carson King's sign has generated $2 million (as of Friday night) for that hospital is warming to say the least. Enough so that Governor Kim Reynolds made Saturday Carson King Day in Iowa.

But the whirlwind of King's past three weeks has stirred up a sloppy, thick, and perplexing muck that has me thinking about how the premiere newspaper in Iowa is stuck defending itself...even today.

There's substantial merit to those who say we've morphed into a society where journalism doesn't just shoulder the burden of unearthing the grim and corrupt, but now we get after the less-than-perfect.

King retweeted some racist stuff as a 16-year-old from the raunchy Tosh.O show. I caught glimpses of the show at its prime and was left wanting to take a shower. Somewhat like Ridiculousness now. But there's a market for everything and capitalistic minds capitalize.

But for me, I see a state that's now advertising for a new "state beer". Busch donated $350,000 ( a capped amount for sure, but also more than I have to donate... definitely). Venmo is donating and the great people of the social media universe are donating. The end game is that goodness floats.

We forgive this man's immaturity for something he did eight years ago because of something he's doing now. That same tool of a civilized society should also be applied to Anheuser Busch for exercising extra caution in protecting its brand...and is should be applied to

Tuesday accident sends one to FMCH

Traffic lights down at intersection

BY PCC STAFF

FORT MADISON – A Tuesday afternoon three-car accident has sent one person to the hospital with unknown injuries.

According to a release from Fort Madison Police Chief Mark Rohloff, at 12:11 p.m., officers were dispatched to a rollover accident in front of Fort Madison Community Hospital.

Upon arrival it was discovered that a crash had occurred at the intersection of Avenue O and 53rd Street. The traffic lights at the intersection are inoperable, and had been replaced with temporary stop signs and warning flags. Two vehicles were found in the intersection, with a truck on its side just west of the scene.

Witnesses reported observing a van and a car stopped at the intersection facing west waiting for traffic to clear, when at that point a westbound pickup truck approached and struck the rear end of both vehicles. The force propelled both cars into the intersection and caused the pickup truck to roll multiple times before coming to a rest across the street.

The driver of the truck, a 2017 Dodge Ram was identified as Kristopher Lee Amberger, 50, of West Point, IA. He was able to exit his own vehicle and refused medical treatment. The driver of the car, a

Some want issue pushed to next council

so that's how he will continue to vote.

Greenwald said his position is centered around creating a new law and whether the law creates a freedom or a limitation.

"This brings one of the biggest things that a council can do – create a law. We live in a free country and it comes down to whether we prohibit a freedom or allow it," he said.

Fort Madison resident Dave Bohnenkamp spoke to the council and asked that the issue be tabled until the next city council is seated in January.

Former City Councilman Brian Wright asked what it would take to reverse the ordinance should it be passed by the current council. City Attorney Robert Johnson said it would be like any other added agenda item at the request of the City Manager, the Mayor, or two city council representatives.

OBITUARIES

PHILLIP FRANCIS HOENIG

Phillip Francis Hoenig, 70 of Fort Madison, IA died early Tuesday morning at the Great River Hospice House in Burlington, IA.

Phil was born June 14, 1949 in Fort Madison, IA. He was the second child of Leo and Adelaide (Friye) Hoenig. He is survived by his four children Jozef (Holly) Hoenig of Galva, IL Heidi (Sean) Leitch of Bel Air, MD, Johann Hoenig of Ft. Madison and Franz (Darian) Hoenig of Ft. Madison Three grandchildren Addison Hoenig, Jude Hoenig and Juliet Leitch. His brother Anthony "Mike" Hoenig of Ft. Madison, sister Kathleen (Dennis Kelsch) Hoenig of Salt Lake City, UT. Also, several nieces, nephews and cousins. He was preceded in death by his parents Leo and Adelaide Hoenig and his younger brother Stephen Hoenig.

HOENIG

Phil attended the Sacred Heart Catholic school in Fort Madison. He developed a passion for music and spent much of high school playing with different bands. He worked at Rempé's music house in Fort Madison where he developed an interest in fixing pipe organs. He eventually traveled to Pennsylvania to begin an apprenticeship for an organ builder.

Phil returned to Iowa and spent the next 40 years mastering his craft of building, restoring, tuning and playing the pipe organ. He could play a wide variety of instruments, and was a skilled woodworker. He possessed an incredible ability to tune pipe organs by ear, a talent that few have. Phil's work can be found all over the United States, even as far as Tokyo, Japan where he built and delivered several pipe organs.

In addition to being a talented and hard worker he was also a family man, a father to four children. Both family and music were infinitely important to Phil. He taught his children the importance of hard work and of being themselves. He was a creative and unique soul who was truly one of a kind. A beautiful sound has left this world with Phil's passing.

The memorial mass will be held at 11 AM on Monday, October 7, 2019 at Ss. Mary & Joseph Church with Rev. Joseph Phung officiating. ## From the Front/Lottery Numbers

Paper's handling of story muddies up the waters

the Des Moines Register.

That kid, Aaron Calvin, was doing diligence on a story, a practice and habit that people of the WORLD have to come count on from journalists – digging into stories and revealing not just the truth...but the whole truth. Reputable accounts indicate he “no longer works for the publication” but if he was dismissed, it makes forgiveness of the company tougher for even me to swallow. The Executive Editor herself said a board convened to make a determination of whether the 8-year old tweets should be included in the piece. And they made the determination that it should be included buried at the bottom. I think that's a shallow gesture because someone's gonna read the whole thing...and someone's gonna comment.

If that account holds true, his dismissal is him being thrown on the sword and that's not acceptable. But if he left under his own accord, it's easier to stand by the paper.

I still believe in my four decades or so of cynicism that there's more to this story than has been totally revealed yet, but my bigger concern at the moment is what's happening to society's impression of journalism and the role of news reporting in our society.

As part of the news gathering community, even in our hyperlocal endeavor here, we make decisions every day on how much time and resources we commit to tips, requests, news stories, and other coverage.

No, as many people have messaged us and asked, we do not do regular background checks on sources in our stories. Where in the world would that time come from? You folks still think there's two of me. BUT...we don't own a five-story professional building staffed with everything we would need to do those background checks. If so, we probably would.

I've been in the Des Moines Register before and I'm pretty sure the reporter, who is a reputable reporter around the state, didn't do a background check on my social media feeds. He wouldn't have found anything because I typically don't engage unless its for clarification. And when I was 16, the only phone we had had this wiggly cable attached to it that I regularly overstretched talking to girls until all hours of the night.

So my question in this piece is this... Where would you prefer us to stop?

It's always been my philosophy that we peel the layers back, but how far is far enough? It's also critical to remember this: we don't print everything we hear. Not even close.

King went to social media for beer money and when it became more than he was expecting he decided he would donate the rest to the hospital with no clue at that point that Busch and Venmo were jumping on board. They did, and then it went viral and exploded. At that point, it's not that big of a leap for a reporter who's professionally trained to look at all angles of a story and to check out King's other social media activity.

I'm a journalist, and admittedly am nowhere near qualified to pass judgment on that editorial board for printing the past King tweets. I wouldn't have done it because the added editorial risk didn't outweigh the value of the good deed. But this same journalist says there is no blame here, only the continued dismantling of the fourth estate in this country.

We are challenged to pursue unabated and with zeal, the truth in that which we report. That's supposed to be our mission.

Corporations are gobbling up most of the newspapers in this country, sucking the life out of them through management fees and staff reductions, and leaving the dried fruit on the ground in hopes that someone local will pick it up with grand illusions of rebuilding it to greatness.

Now throw in social media culture dictating through what one publication called the “culture of cancellation” and you leave us wondering – what is it that you really want from us?

It's pretty easy to copy and paste a press release... but that's Beside the Point.

Motorist had to be extricated from vehicle

2001 Pontiac was Sandra Louise Seager, 58, of Donnellson, who had to be extricated from her car by the fire department. She was transported by ambulance to the FMCH emergency department for treatment.

The driver of the van, a 2016 Honda, was identified as Sabrina Marie Brown, 37, of Niota, IL, who had a complaint of minor injury and would later seek medical care.

All vehicles were disabled and required to be towed from the roadway. Responders to the scene included the Fort Madison Police Department, Fort Madison Fire Department, Lee County EMS, and the Lee County Sheriff's Department.

Amberger was taken to the Fort Madison Police Department where he was initially charged with a traffic offense of “Following Too Closely.”

The case is currently under investigation and no further details are available for release.
