Day care worker charged in child death case

Supervisor faces felony endangerment charge

BY CHUCK VANDENBERG
PCC EDITOR

DONNELSON – A supervisor and teacher at a Donnellson day care center was arrested today in connection with the death of a child that occurred in December, according to a release from the Iowa Department of Public Safety.

On December 3, 2018 at approximately 8:48 a.m., the Lee County Emergency Medical Service Paramedics were dispatched and responded to an unresponsive child at the Raisin Em Up Daycare, located at 607 Park Street, Donnellson.

MCDOWELL

The child was transported to the Fort Madison Community Hospital and later transported to the University of Iowa Hospitals and Clinics where the child was provided advanced medical treatment. On December 11, 2018 the child was withdrawn from life support and was pronounced deceased.

On Thursday, Laura McDowell, the site supervisor and lead teacher of the daycare was charged with the crime of Child Endangerment Causing a Death, a Class B Felony. McDowell was booked into the Lee County Jail pursuant to a warrant. McDowell is being held on a $25,000 cash bond.

This was a joint investigation by the Donnellson Police Department, the Lee County Attorney's Office, the Iowa Department of Human Services, and the Iowa Division of Criminal Investigation.

The arrest comes on the heels of 15 complaints that were released by the Iowa Department of Human Services on the facility where the death occurred and another Raisin' Em Up learning center in Donnellson. Those complaints were from unannounced visits to the center in April and June of this year.

The complaints listed were varied, including staff sleeping while children were under their supervision, duplicating medications, unlawful transportation, failure to use curriculum, leaving children on buses unattended, and improper ratios of supervisors to children.

According to the release no other information will be released at this time.

Governor says she's not giving up on rural broadband funding

KEOKUK – With Iowa Governor Kim Reynolds seated in the front of the room, Lee County Economic Development Group President Dennis Fraise compared economic development – to a duck.

Reynolds was in town, as has been the case with several of the LCEDG efforts, to help celebrate the group's accomplishments in the past six years.

Earlier this week, the LCEDG board announced that Fraise had been named president of the group, and Dana Millard had been promoted to Economic Development Project Director.

Fraise started, at Meyer's Courtyard in Keokuk, with recognizing the successful programming of the private/public partnership LCEDG has created since being fully funded by Lee County Supervisors just six years ago. That funding formula now is 40% public and 60% private investors.

LCEDG just wrapped up its second capital campaign and raised close to $1.3 million, including a 36% increase in investors.

"That's the best score card for us. When you see a 36% increase in investors that tells you – I think we're doing some good stuff," he said.

But he said a lot of the work being done can't be seen by the public, similar to all the work a duck does to move gracefully across a pond.

"Economic Development is lot like a duck," Fraise said. "But like that duck we're always moving forward and unrelenting in our drive and passion to move Lee County forward.

"What you see is the rather serene, beautiful creature sailing across the water without a care in the world, but what's happening underneath is this frenetic amount of energy and all these things going on."

He said the pace of information and opportunity is at a level never seen before, and said lines of communication between the public and private entities embroiled in economic development has to be clean and effective.

Fraise mentioned a request that was in front of the

Lee County Conservation shutters Red Wing Access

BY PCC STAFF

LEE COUNTY – Red Wing Access is closed indefinitely along the Des Moines River.

The Lee County Conservation Board voted back in April to close this area as the access has suffered a lot of erosion causing the bank to destabilize and become dangerous.

Repeated high water events have also damaged the boat ramp. Due to high water this summer and muddy conditions, it has taken some time to be able to close down the access point.

“According to my staff’s calculations, we have lost over 10 feet of the bank at this location over the past ten years. The bank has eroded into the parking lot, creating an unsafe condition for vehicles,” said Lee County Conservation District Director Nathan Unsworth.

Boaters are encouraged to utilize the Turkey Run

Dangerous bank conditions and erosion has caused the Lee County Conservation Board to close the Red Wing access to the Des Moines River indefinitely.

Access further upstream or the Keokuk public ramps to access the river.

“You can still access Red Wing Access by foot, but the area is closed to vehicles,” Unsworth said. “There was a lot of sediment deposited by the recent flood at the access.

Additional debris has temporarily been piled on-site as the Secondary Roads Department works to clean up sediment along the roadway. Please be patient as we work through this issue.”

The Conservation Board is working with the National Park Service Rivers, Trails, and Conservation Assistance Program exploring potential water trails on local rivers. The Conservation Board hopes to identify potential new access sites through the planning process.

For more information about this issue, the public is encouraged to call the Lee County Conservation Center at 319-463-7673

Baier says board will honor sacrifices for development

LCEDG several weeks ago with a company that couldn't email information about the project, but needed a proposal packet in four days.

"I'm proud to say we sent them a very professional, polished presentation with the economic development groups from both cities coming together. That's what you don't see...that frenetic pace with our legs going like this underneath - that you don't see," Fraise said.

Newest LCEDG Chairman Jamie Baier thanked Iowa Gov. Kim Reynolds for coming to the event.

"Not just for being here, but for caring about southeast Iowa in a way that makes us feel like we're part of your team," he said.

"We've added many wonderful people with diverse backgrounds to the board, which excites me because I like watching boards work and interacting with people," he said.

Baier said he also knows how businesses in the area feel giving 1,000s of dollars a year to the LCEDG.

"You make a decision to reduce your bottom line by thousands of dollars a year. That's sacrifice and we will honor that in all we do as an organization," Baier said.

Reynolds said she talks about the Grow Lee program and LCEDG when she travels the state.

"What there doing in Lee County is phenomenal. They really, really have focused on working with their business and industry and tying that to high schoolers and that's what we want to do," Reynolds said after the meeting.

She pointed to seven straight quarters of wage growth and said 96 of the state's 99 counties are showing wage growth, and the state has jobs looking for people.

"What an amazing opportunity for Iowans to get them the skills to fill the careers that are available," Reynolds said.

She also addressed high speed Internet and the problems facing rural Iowa, including Lee County.

"So connecting rural Iowa I asked for $20 million over two fiscal years. I was able to get five and we're hoping to allocate that," she said. "My hope is that we'll allocate the entire $5 million and have a waiting list and then I'll go back to the Legislature and ask for the additional $15 million."

She said with the $20 million she would have been able to leverage $120 million from the private sector funding.

Reynolds stands with past LCEDG Chairman Dave Schwartz and board member Phil Hecht who received plaques for their service to the Lee County economic development efforts.

Recent federal data on broadband coverage for Lee County shows strong coverage throughout the county, but officials and residents have said coverage is weak and in some cases is not available at all.

"We can't expect young people to stay in these communities if they can't connect," Reynolds said.
