HTC students spend evening talking science

More than 45 projects displayed Monday night

BY CHUCK VANDENBERG
PCC EDITOR

FORT MADISON - The HTC newly renovated hallways were packed Monday night with a wide range of students peddling some very interesting science projects.

The annual science fair at the school is typically a junior high and high school fair, but, this year, even some fourth and fifth graders got into the act.

Close to 45 students had exhibits that included such dynamic investigations as what impacts freckle presence and eye color, to erosion of streams, to which potato chips are the greasiest.

More than 20 judges from all walks of life including the Lee County Conservation District, local farmers, teachers, agriculture professionals, and others worked the hallway talking with students about their projects.

Three of the youngest scientists in the room were Addie Lynk and Emma Mohrfeld, 4th graders, and Teagan Snaadt, a 5th grader at Holy Trinity Elementary School, who wanted to see which potato chips had the most grease in them.

A binder full of graph paper shows the results of the girls spreading an equal amount chips and crushing them consistently with a rolling pin. Then allowing the chips to rest on the paper as the grease permeates the paper and leaves a visible line defining an area on the paper with the grease.

Locals will be happy to know that out of four chips tested, Sterzing's brand had the third least amount of grease according to the test.

Mohrfeld said her mother helped them come up with the idea, but the girls thought it was a fun and interesting project.

"It's something interesting to show people how much grease is in their favorite chips," she said. "We got to eat some of them while we did it, too."

Event organizer and science teacher, Ernie Schiller, said this is just a school science fair and the conference fair will be held Thursday at Westland Mall in West Burlington.

"We have two $100 savings bonds from Pilot Grove Savings Bank and that's new," Schiller said

Monday. "We've got some really great projects out there and this is a good opportunity for them to practice for the upcoming fairs."

"All students exhibiting were recognized for their time and talent for going above and beyond to delve into their project and received a participation award. Thanks to the parents, the staff, the community for helping these young students in succeeding at completing their science project."

Iowa rated top state by national magazine

DES MOINES - According to an article in U.S. News & World Report, Iowa has been rated as the top state in the union, per a ranking system the publication uses. Iowa Gov. Kim Reynolds was on CBS This Morning to tout the announcement Tuesday morning.

"Our Best States ranking is a humbling tribute to our people who have proven time and again that in Iowa, if you're willing to work hard, you can accomplish anything," Gov. Reynolds said. "My top priority as governor is to build on our current success by bringing new resources and opportunities to every corner of our state. Every Iowan contributes to the success of their community and our state, and we celebrate this honor knowing that our work to build a better Iowa will never be finished."

U.S. News & World Report is the global authority in rankings and evaluated all 50 states across 77 metrics with thousands of data points in eight categories: health care, education, economy, opportunity, infrastructure, crime & corrections, fiscal stability and quality of life. Health care and education are the most highly weighted factors in the methodology, followed closely by the economy.

Health care: Iowa ranks #3 in healthcare, up two spots from 2017

#2 for health care affordability

#1 for child wellness visits

#2 for low infant mortality rate

City finds no fault in harassment claim

BY CHUCK VANDENBERG
PCC EDITOR

FORT MADISON - A city employee has been cleared of any wrongdoing as part of a two-month investigation into a harassment claim.

With city officials remaining tight-lipped about the incident, an unsigned letter received by Pen City Current about a week ago, alluded to a harassment claim aimed at an employee of the Fort Madison Police Department.

Outside investigator finds no merit to claim

Police Chief Tim Sittig said city officials had an independent party investigate the issue and have cleared any employee of any wrongdoing and the department and the city consider the matter closed. Sittig said the issue was brought to the attention of City Manager David Varley in late October.

“The issues were brought to the attention of David and he moved very quickly with it. The investigation turned up nothing to substantiate any of the claims,” he said.

The City Council entered into closed sessions to discuss issues related to personnel matters on several occasions in December - on one occasion to evaluate an employee and on another occasion for personnel issues.

Since discussions on closed sessions are not disclosed to the general public, it is unknown if either of those issues related to the harassment complaint.
