Bowker, Sorrentino vie for 1st Ward seat

BY CHUCK VANDENBERG
PCC EDITOR

In the upcoming weeks, Pen City Current will talk with Fort Madison candidates in contested races as part of our full election coverage.

FORT MADISON – They're similar in a lot of ways, but 1st Ward residents Rebecca Bowker and Chris Sorrentino also have a lot of differences that should make for an interesting election come Nov. 5.

The two are running for the city's 1st Ward City Council seat currently held by Chris Greenwald, who announced in August that he wouldn't be seeking another term.

Sorrentino is no stranger to running for office with a failed attempt two years ago to unseat current Mayor Brad Randolph. Bowker is making her first run at elected office.

Bowker, who made the decision to run a little more than two months ago, said the timing was right. She moved to the city in 1995 and said she was welcomed with open arms. She's worked for the Daily Democrat, Connection Bank, and now is the executive officer at the Iowa State Penitentiary. She also is in her 13th term on the Fort Madison Housing commission, a position that would need vacated if she wins election.

Sorrentino is an over-the-road owner/operator truck driver who moved to the city about a decade ago and now calls Fort Madison home. He's served on the city's Historic Preservation Commission and the North Lee County Historical Society Society. He also is a member of OOIDA, Owner/Operator Independent Driver's Association, a truck driver advocacy group.

Both Sorrentino and Bowker believe that communication from the council and city staff to residents needs to improve.

Sorrentino said he would like to see an enhanced effort to see a better audience to the city's livestream city council meetings. He said he believes people are disenfranchised with their elected officials and that has fostered a lack of trust and therefore a lack of engagement.

"They just don't trust these people anymore. I hear from people that they call city hall, the 7700 number, punch in the extension and no one calls back. They've just lost faith and we need to get that back," Sorrentino said.

Bowker said she thinks elected officials could communicate better with residents through regular editorials or letters to the editor.

"There is a lot to be said for city leaders to do updates weekly, monthly whatever that looks like, whether it comes from the mayor, the city manager, or the council, I think there's an opportunity to give the residents a little more that just what's in the city council minutes," Bowker said.

"Give them an updates of projects, let them know why the curve down here isn't being updated, things other than just what's being recorded at city council meetings."

Both Sorrentino and Bowker agree that city finances are in peril, but cutting city staff probably isn't the answer, specifically the police and fire departments.

Bowker said reducing force there is off the table, but said she thinks additional performance objectives and

OFP looking for holiday play cast

SUBMITTED ARTICLE

FORT MADISON – Fort Madison's community theater is looking for actors to fill the cast of their December 2019 production of "The 12 Days of Christmas."

Directors Kelly Shields and Richar Abel are looking for actors of various ages and types to fill the nearly 20 roles in the production. There's nothing to memorize for the audition and no previous experience is required.

The play follows Shirley, the partridge, who must gather everyone to sing the classic Christmas song but not all of her singers can come. How will Shirley ever get her performance together in time for the holidays?

Due to some remodeling and ongoing rehearsals for our Fall play, auctions will be held at St. Luke's Episcopal Church at 605 Avenue E in Fort Madison. Stop by Friday evening between 7 & 9 pm October 4th. Or come show your talents from 1-4 on Saturday the 5th.

So, you're not quite the type who likes being in the spotlight? You can still be a part of the fun. Old Fort Players is always looking for hard-working, organized people to be stage managers, set crews, sound and light technicians as well as costume/prop stylists and makeup artists. There's even a spot for those who enjoy working with the public by selling concessions during performances. Stop by on audition nights to volunteer or send us a message on Facebook.

"The 12 Days of Christmas." will be presented by special arrangement with Dramatic Publishing. Performances run December 6-8 & 12-15. Evening shows begin at 7:30 and the curtain rises on Sundays at 2:00 pm.

The Old Fort Players have been entertaining the community since 1981 and are located in downtown Fort Madison at 725 Avenue G. Call 319-372-9559 for more information. Like them on Facebook or visit www.oldfortplayers.com to keep up with everything that's going on at the theater.

Reynolds to push volunteerism with state employees

DES MOINES - Today, Governor Kim Reynolds has directed the Iowa Department of Administrative Services (DAS) to develop a volunteer policy to help encourage state to employees make a difference in their communities through volunteerism. DAS will collaborate with all state department directors to consider how the policy best functions to benefit employees in all departments.

The announcement was made at the governor's weekly press conference at the Ronald McDonald House Charities of Iowa in Des Moines. Watch the Governor's remarks on Facebook here.

"Volunteering is as Iowan as pork chop on a stick at the State Fair," said Gov. Reynolds. "Everyday, Iowans step up and make a difference together through volunteerism. Nationally, it is estimated that one in four employers offer some kind of paid volunteer time off, and we want to grow that here in Iowa. My team volunteered at the Ronald McDonald House in Des Moines today to encourage other Iowa employers to make volunteerism part of their company culture as well."

Gov. Reynolds' team also spent part of the day volunteering at the Ronald McDonald House, an organization that provides a temporary home-away-from-home for families with children who are hospitalized or receiving treatment for a serious medical condition. The Ronald McDonald House Charities of Iowa has locations in Des Moines, Iowa City and Sioux City.

The organization is also a recipient of the Governor's Charity Steer Show - held annually at the Iowa State Fair for the past 35 years. That event has raised $3.8 million dollars for the Ronald McDonald House Charities of Iowa with a record setting $280,000 raised for this alone.

At the press conference, Gov. Reynolds also encouraged Iowa business, families, and organizations looking to get involved and give back to the community to visit, volunteeriowa.org.

College fair planned at SCC Oct. 8

WEST BURLINGTON - Southeastern Community College will host College Representative Day on Tuesday, October 8 from 9:30 to 11 a.m. in the Loren Walker Arena on the West Burlington Campus. Area high school juniors, seniors, and their guardians are invited to attend to learn more about their college options.

The college fair is free and open to the public. The event is sponsored by the Iowa Association for College Admission Counseling.

Dana Chrisman, Enrollment Coordinator at Southeastern Community College, says she is pleased to hold this fair at the college.

"This is a great opportunity for teens to see what is available to them," Chrisman said. "It's really helpful to them as they decide which path is the right one for them and how they can make higher education a reality."

Attendees can register for this event at www.gotocollegefairs.com.

For more information call Chrisman at (319) 208-5017.

ISU Extension to host Pasture Walk in Donnellson Oct. 10

DONNELLSON – Iowa State University Extension and Outreach and the Natural Resources Conservation Service will host a Pasture Walk on Thursday, October 10 from 4:30 pm to 6:00 pm. Event will be held at the Jeff Buford's Farm in Donnellson, near 1638 230th Street. This event is for anyone interested in learning about soil health, cost share assistance for grazing systems and developing a grazing plan.

In this session Patrick Wall, ISU Extension and Outreach Beef Specialist, will discuss how to develop a grazing plan that works for each individual. Patrick states, "There are so many factors that need to be considered before implementing changes to your grazing system. Just emulating what someone else is doing often doesn't work."

Additional speakers are Stacy Prassas and TJ Mathis with NRCS. Prassas will lead the soil health demonstration while Mathis will discuss what cost share assistance can be offered.

This event is free and open to the public. The Harrison Huskies 4-H group will provide a meal. Pre-registration is required. Please contact the Whitney Weisinger at the Lee County Extension Office at 319-835-5116 or weisinge@iastate.edu. The registration deadline is Tuesday, October 8.

ISU Extension and Outreach is part of an educational network supported by Iowa State University, local county governments, and the United States Department of Agriculture. ISU Extension and Outreach works to provide learning opportunities for citizens of Iowa by providing unbiased, research-based information that will improve quality of life.

Candidates want to boost public engagement in processes measures should be in place to make sure resources are being utilized appropriately.

Sorrentino stopped short of saying anything was off the table to get the city's revenues straightened out, but said he would not be in favor of reducing staff in either department.

"I support our fire and police departments fully. I can't say a reduction there would be off the table, but I certainly couldn't support it," he said.

City officials have discussed adding franchise taxes to utility providers to beef up city coffers, but both Bowker and Sorrentino said they want the city to explore all options and ask tough questions before increasing costs to residents.

"I'm data driven and we need to look at all the information and see how it affects all people," Bowker said.

"The last numbers I heard were that about 27% of people in Fort Madison were senior citizens. How would that impact them? Are we taking advantage of all grant opportunities and do we have a grant writer? We need to make sure we are asking these questions.

"I feel that my benefit to the city is to demand those answers and explore those options."

Sorrentino said the city was in financial crisis and "upside down", but adding taxes shouldn't be the only option.

"We need to flat out find other sources of revenue and bring in businesses that contribute to city funds."

Both Bowker and Sorrentino rated the city's infrastructure a "C" grade.

Sorrentino said the city is so far behind with regard to streets and sewers that it will be hard to catch up with the city's current financial condition. He said he doesn't favor how the city is doing things in stages around the city, instead of taking care of one issue and moving to the next.

He said he would be in favor of completing the sanitary sewer separation project the city is taking on in stages and then go back to fix the roads as a whole.

"This goes back to the revenue discussion. We don't have the money and we're behind."

Bowker said despite her rating of a "C-" she believes city staff is doing everything it can with the resources it has to get work completed.

Both also addressed some hot-button issues currently facing the city such as the proposed ordinance to allow golf carts and ATVs on most city streets and recent troubles getting accurate estimates and construction bids on city projects.

Both Bowker and Sorrentino said they would support the majority of residents in the 1st ward on the golf cart issue. And both, coincidentally, said they would go door-to-door if they had to to gauge the level of support for the ordinance.

"I can count on the fingers of one hand and still have fingers left, the number of people who are in favor of that ordinance," Sorrentino said. "They just don't think Fort Madison is ready for it yet."

Bowker said that would be another chance for elected officials to get with their constituents to find out what the majority of people think.

"This would be another chance for you to invite residents to come down and see you or have a gathering and if you got 50 people to show up and 30 were in favor of it, then I would vote with the majority," she said.

Bowker said with regard to the disparity seen lately in engineering estimates and construction bids, she's been a part of that work in her role with the prison and there are lots of variables in that kind of work.

"You have a lot to consider there, such as the time between the engineer's estimate and the bidding process," she said.

"If you have a year between the two, there can be substantial changes. Again, I'm data driven so I would want to see what questions are being asked in the estimating and bidding process."

Sorrentino said the gaps have put the city at a disadvantage and made it hard for people to trust the processes coming from the city.

"This kind of thing makes it hard for people to have faith in what we're doing here."

LCHD changes clinic times for immunizations

meet at least one of the eligibility requirements to qualify for Iowa's Vaccines for Children program: enrolled in the Iowa Medicaid program; does not have health insurance; is American Indian or Alaskan Native; or has health insurance that does not pay for vaccines. Free lead screenings are also available for children 6-months to 6-years of age living in Lee County.

"Should these changes in our immunization clinic times create challenges for families to have their child or adolescent receive their timely immunizations, we encourage those families to contact us to discuss other options," said Michele Ross, administrator.

"We shortened the length and hours at both clinics due to the consistently low attendance after 4 pm. However, we certainly do not want to burden families with these time changes. Families should contact our immunization clinic staff if they are unable to attend a clinic by 4:30 pm at either location"
