City could name police chief Monday

Appointment could come after discussion on general fund

BY CHUCK VANDENBERG
PCC EDITOR

FORT MADISON – A new police chief could be named Monday night at a special meeting of the Fort Madison City Council.

The council will be in a special meeting to go over a five-year general fund projection being prepared by City Manager David Varley, but after the meeting the council has scheduled a closed session under Iowa Code to discuss a personnel matter.

After the closed session, the council is scheduled to vote on the appointment of a new police chief. It is unknown if the closed session is to discuss the appointment prior to the vote, or for another personnel issue.

The closed session is on the agenda under Iowa Code 21.5 (1)(i) which allows a governmental body to enter closed session “to evaluate the professional competency of an individual whose appointment, hiring, performance, or discharge is being considered when necessary to prevent needless and irreparable injury to that individual’s reputation and that individual requests a closed session.”

Last week Varley said the firm hired to generate a pool of candidates for the position turned over its list to the city’s Civil Service Commission who narrowed the pool to six candidates. That list included names of officers currently on the Fort Madison Police Department.

However, Varley has the authority under city code chapter 7.1.2 to appoint the police chief subject to approval of the city council. Varley initially pared the list down to three, none of whom were on the Fort Madison Police Department, and has now selected a candidate for the council’s consideration Monday night.

Varley said the narrowed field of candidates all asked for confidentiality in during the interview processes.

Lee County Sheriff Stacy Weber has been serving as interim police chief since former Police Chief Tim Sittig resigned at the end of May. The city has been paying the county from funds that were allocated for the police chief’s salary for the sheriff’s department’s services.

Rashid building back in front of city council

Head Start now interested if building can be gifted

BY CHUCK VANDENBERG
PCC EDITOR

FORT MADISON – The future of the Idol Rashid building will be back in front of the Fort Madison City Council on Tuesday night.

The building located at 3421 Avenue L, previously used as a city library, now is home to the Fort Madison Food Pantry. The pantry shared the lease with the United Way of the Greater River Region until that lease ended in April 30 of this year.

Several proposals have been bandied about including selling the building to Head Start and donating the building to the Food Pantry.

In a memo to the council, City Manager David Varley said he’s been working with the granddaughter of the Rashids on the issue. The city has to obtain the Rashid family’s permission to sell or donate the building.

According to Iowa code, the city can’t donate the building to a non-governmental agency and if it decides to sell the property, it must do so at fair market value.

Opinion

Divorced and widowed and leaning on God

The tall, handsome, dark haired man found Sharon in her shop where the Quarter Maybe More Store in Mt. Pleasant is now. She had a used furniture business. He asked her where the restroom was. Sharon led the man down a hallway. That's where he kissed her for the first time. He smelled like Aqua Velva. Sharon melted on the spot.

It all started five years before when a friend of Sharon's invited her to a Bible study in Winfield on Sunday afternoon. There she met Evangelist Gary Bortz and his wife, Olive. Olive was much older than Gary, and was sometimes confused as his mother.

Over the course of five years, Olive passed away. After one of the Bible studies, Gary said to Sharon, "I've been thinking about asking you out for supper."

"Oh?" Sharon said, like he was commenting on the weather.

She had Gary pick her up at her daughter's house in Trenton. She didn't want to be seen with Gary in Mt. Pleasant because of gossip, so they drove to the Second Street Cafe in Ottumwa. (Both Gary and Sharon are from Ottumwa.) Over chicken fried steak, Gary casually mentioned, like it was something he had just thought of, that he was looking for someone to help him with his ministry.

Sharon said, "Well, I can help you pray about it."

EMPTY NEST

By Curt Swarm

Gary cleared his throat, "I mean you." Sharon just about fell off her stool. He said, "I'm going to Kansas City this weekend to speak. I'll call you when I get back on Sunday night."

When Gary dropped her off, she jumped out of the car and ran to her daughter's house like her pants were on fire. She heard him holler, "I think more of you than you realize!"

Sharon didn't leave her apartment that weekend. She prayed and asked God, "What have You done? Are You answering my prayers?" She was divorced and had been asking God to put a Godly man in her life. She heard God say, "This is the man for you."

Sunday came and went. There was no phone call from Gary. Sharon thought, "Well, that's the end of that."

On Monday, Gary walked into her used furniture store in Mt. Pleasant. He had been delayed in Kansas City. That's when he asked where the restroom was and kissed her for the first time.

During their engagement, Gary began coughing up blood. He had cancer and needed to have his left lung removed. Sharon stayed with him the whole time, and the gossip really started. Before his surgery, Gary asked Sharon to marry him. She said, "I will only marry you if you get up off of that bed after surgery a healthy man." Which he did. Sharon was younger than Gary and sometimes confused as his daughter.

Sharon and Gary had five good years together. She traveled around the country helping with his ministry. She was his secretary and, along with Gary, prayed for people. Gary had the unique ability of knowing where he was going at all times. Sharon rode along and just enjoyed being with him.

Gary's cancer returned. He requested that they have their picture taken before he lost his hair again from the chemo therapy. Gary never saw that picture. He also had his funeral arrangements made and his will updated so that Sharon would be taken care of if he passed away. Gary died on Easter weekend, 2006.

Sharon is praying for another Godly man to come into her life.

Public hearing set to start Old Hwy. 61 rehab

However the city can donate the property to the Lee County Supervisors, who don't have such restrictions on donating the building.

City Councilman Matt Mohrfeld suggested during a meeting earlier this year, that the city donate the building to the Food Pantry due to the importance of that service in the county.

Varley had previous discussions with Head Start to purchase the building, but those discussions stopped under new regional Head Start leadership. But Varley points out in the memo that the Head Start is now interested again in the building if it can gifted to them.

Varley said he's reached out to DuPont to see if they are interested in purchasing the building.

"They stated they might be interested, but it's a long shot," he wrote. "They also said that they would prefer that something like a daycare-type facility not be located so close to their plant."

The city has been trying to divest itself of the property for the financial savings from maintenance and upkeep.

The Rashid family has the ultimate authority to sign off on any ownership changes in the property.

In an unrelated issue, the council will also vote to order construction and set a public hearing for Aug. 20, on the reconstruction of Avenue H (old Highway 61) from 2nd Street to 6th Streets.

The state turned over jurisdiction of the corridor to the city in exchange for $13.9 million dollars when the bypass was constructed. Plans included redoing several intersections, including the 27th Street and Avenue L intersection, which was completed in 2018. Plans also included redoing the intersection at Avenue O and Ortho Road.

Original plans called for four segments starting on the west side of the city and working east. However, plans changed and the city decided to go from the east and tackle 2nd Street to 6th Street, moving progressively west. The city had originally planned to have the entire stretch rehabbed by 2027.

In other action, the council will vote on applying for a $125,000 REAP grant to help with the costs of Phase 4 of the P.O.R.T. Trail which will extend the trail from Avenue L on the west side of 48th Street to River Valley Road. The total cost of Phase 4 is estimated at $415,000. The total P.O.R.T. trail project is estimated at six years at a cost of $2.7 million.
