$7.8M ESTIMATE: Schedule shows work could be completed in 2027

FORT MADISON – The Fort Madison City Council got an update on the progress of the new Fort Madison Fire Station.

The new station is scheduled to be completed in 2027 with work potentially starting in November of this year.

The new 18,500 square foot building is carrying a construction estimate of $7.8 million. The building was originally planned as a 26,000 square foot facility to accommodate some ambulances and EMS equipment, but that project was scaled back when the Lee County EMS ambulance bay became reality on the city's west side.

“This is really something the city could be proud of,” said firefighter John Lang.

“The new station is 18,512 square feet and is designed to maximize efficiency and minimize unnecessary costs. This reflects our commitment to fiscal responsibility, firefighter health, and operational efficiency.”

IHSAA to move boys’ state hoops tourney to Hilton Coliseum

BOONE, Iowa – A century after playing championships inside State Gym, the Iowa High School Athletic Association (IHSAA) and Iowa State University (ISU) enter an exciting new era together as the IHSAA State Basketball Tournament will move to James H. Hilton Coliseum starting in 2027.

An initial five-year agreement with support from Discover Ames will place the five-day, 32-team boys’ tournament inside Hilton Coliseum as the first-of-its-kind multi-use CyTown district is developed at the Iowa State Center and slated to come online in 2027.

“We couldn’t be more excited about what this opportunity will offer our student-athletes, schools, and supporters

as they experience an elite basketball environment at Hilton and an awesome new tournament community in CyTown and Ames,” IHSAA executive director Tom Keating said. “Our sincere appreciation goes to everyone who has helped make this possible at Iowa State University,

Lorence has state’s top shotput mark

SPORTS: Senior has her sights set on winning 3A state title, Drake

BY CHUCK VANDENBERG
PCC EDITOR

FORT MADISON – Fort Madison senior Brylie Lorence made a commitment after not reaching her goals at Drake and the IGHSAU State track meet last year.

That commitment, and a few technical changes, have launched her on a trajectory that could result in the ultimate prize – a state title.

Lorence has started the indoor season as the top hurler in the state in girls’ 3A shotput.

Her throw of 44’-10.75” gave her the top distance in the state and the 23rd best shot in the country.

The Lady Hound said she was disappointed with her finish last year and vowed a change in her final season with Fort Madison.

“I was disappointed with my performance at the State meet last year and worked in the offseason to ensure I would do better this year,” she said Tuesday.

“Underperforming at the biggest meet of my career served as one of the major motivators for me this season.”

The offseason involved changing some techniques that allowed her to rotate in the circle rather than glide to the barrier. She fine-tuned that change during lessons and camps, some time with other coaches and Indian Hills’ throwing camps during the summer and winter.

Lorence said the switch to rotating into the throw allowed her to utilize her power more. There’s also been more time in the weight room and more focus with Athletic Enhancement Director Derek Doherty’s lifting program.

The strength conditioning is a big part of her performance early on, including the top throw in the state to date.

Discover Ames and Cyclone Athletics.”

Lauded as one of the nation’s finest college basketball venues, Hilton Coliseum boasts consistently strong attendance for the Cyclones’ men’s and women’s basketball programs with a capacity of 14,267, and the programs annually rank among the national leaders in home attendance.

ISU will make facilities at Hilton and the attached and updated Scheman Building available for the IHSAA event. Opened in 1971, ISU Athletics installed a new state-of-the-art video board, LED ribbon boards and an audio system ahead of the 2024-25 season, and has also completed upgrades to its team locker rooms within the facility. The Scheman Building is in the midst of a significant renovation which has created new hospitality spaces for Cyclone contests as well as other special events that the facility attracts.

The surrounding CyTown district – announced in 2022 and expected to be up and running in 2027 – will feature space for retail, food and beverage, common areas, and a 200-room Marriott hotel, The Cardinal.

“On behalf of Iowa State University, thank you to the IHSAA board, Tom Keating, and Tom’s staff for deciding to bring the Athletic Association’s state basketball tournament to Ames to experience Hilton Magic,” Iowa State Director of Athletics Jamie Pollard said. “We are excited to host this great event and our staff looks forward to working with the IHSAA to make this special for the athletes, coaches and fans whose teams reach the state tournament each year.”

“This is a major win for Iowa State University and our communities’ hotels and restaurants,” he added. “It is a great example of the new economic opportunities that Cy-Town can bring to the Ames community. This will be the first of many such opportunities our community will have in future years, because of Iowa State University’s investment in CyTown.”

IHSAA basketball brings eight qualifiers across four classifications to the state tournament. Since moving to a five-day format in 2018, the event has averaged nearly 50,000 paid attendees with full capacity available.

Ames already hosts over 100,000 youth sports visitors annually through the Iowa Games, Special Olympics of Iowa’s Summer Games, and more.

“We are super excited to partner with Iowa State Athletics and the IHSAA to bring the State Basketball Tournament to Ames and Hilton Coliseum starting in 2027,” said Discover Ames President and CEO Kevin Bourke. “This weeklong event will expose teams and fans from across the state to Iowa State University, as well as create a huge economic impact to Ames while showcasing our wonderful community.”

Ames played host to the IHSA’s basketball tournament six times between 1917 and 1926, all inside then-Iowa State College’s State Gym. The most recent edition featured a small-school round robin, with Irwin topping Keystone, Grandview, and Lake View for the 1926 Class B title.

The IHSAA concluded its 2025 championships on Friday at Wells Fargo Arena in Des Moines, where the tournament has been hosted since 1963.

“We have great relationships in Des Moines and at Iowa Events Center, and we thank them for all their years of support and their continued work in hosting our events,” Keating said.

Fire station bids to go out in fall

Incoming fire chief Chad Hannum said the station design was reduced as much as possible to minimize the financial burden, while still meeting both current and future needs and ensures a functional, safe, and well-designed facility for the long term.

Lang, who Hannum said has been part of the new fire station design for the past five years, said the existing fire station has critical space limitations, health and safety concerns, and operational inefficiencies.

“The new facility will provide adequate space for modern firefighting equipment and personnel and it will address health and safety concerns including decon (decontamination) areas and improved air quality,” he said.

“It will also improve our operational readiness ensuring a faster and more effective response to emergencies. Investing in this project means better service, better working conditions, and improved public safety.”

Mayor Matt Mohrfeld said he’s seen all the working concepts of the building and said the most recent plans are the best he’s seen.

“Being conscientious of the taxpayers’ money and the efficiency of the building, as they skinned it down and kept going back to the drawing board, in my opinion, this is the nicest layout,” he said.

“I thought the first one didn’t flow at all and this one really flows nicely.”

Hannum said the new building will also enhance training with a training tower that will double as a hose tower, as well as confined space tubes. He said the department regularly gets calls from industry for confined space work.

The new facility will also have five bays to hold the department’s equipment, including the rescue boat and pickup truck. Lang said that will help the department respond even quicker to river rescues because they won’t have to carry equipment out to the boat outside. He said that will also help reduce wear and tear on the boat. The facility will have living and kitchen quarters, a weight room, overnight rooms, decontamination areas, and administrative and meeting areas.

The tower will allow Fort Madison to continue to train for high angle and low angle rope rescues.

“All 16 of us are trained in the aspect. That tower will give us the ability to train year-round. We can do it inside even when we have inclement weather. That’s a critical skill that if you don’t use it, you lose it.”

Hannum said they have scoured agencies for grants to help offset the costs, but said there aren’t a lot of other resources out there. City Manager Laura Legios said the city has spoken with Congresswoman Marianne Miller-Meeks’ staff about possible funding through appropriation.

The city is hoping to bid the project in September and break ground in November.

Fort Madison's Brylie Lorence lets go with a shot during the 2024 IGH-SAU girls' state track meet. She finished 15th last year but has rededicated herself to a state title this year...and may just get it.

Lorence's strong start has her changing season goals

"I knew I was going to be a good competitor this year, but I never would have imagined being currently ranked No. 1 in the state and 23 in the nation," she said.

"I am excited to be highly ranked, but it doesn't affect the state meet and meeting my goals of having a state title.

"My performances so far are just a glimpse of what is to come this season as we head to outdoor meets. Indoor season has made me confident in myself and trusting that all the work I did in the offseason has paid off."

The girls this year are under the leadership of Jordyn Meierotto. Meierotto takes over from Brian Mendez, who has stepped back after close to three decades with the program.

"I wouldn't necessarily say anything is different for me besides I have one great coach instead of two. Coach Mendez has still been amazing and very supportive throughout the season," Lorence said.

Her goal last year was to get on the podium at state, but finished 15th with a throw just over 36 feet, a far cry from her early showings in 2025.

She's also hoping for a strong showing at Drake Relays in April.

"My goal for last year was to see the podium at State and, when I fell short of that, I knew right away that I was going to work hard to win State this year. Since May last year, I have had my eyes set on winning a state title.

"I would love to win Drake this year. With how my indoor season went, I know I need to continue to grind and get better so I can see this happen," she said.

With that in mind, having already surpassed 44-feet has Lorence rethinking her potential for the season.

"I set a goal at the beginning of the season to hit 45 feet. I was surprised to be this close to my goal this soon in my season. After hitting 44' 10.75" at the Iowa State Championships, I reevaluated and made new goals for my outdoor season. I would like to improve and hit 46 feet by the first few meets of my outdoor season.

And by the end of my season, I want to be at least in the 47s," she said.

"I am going to keep working hard the rest of this season until I meet my goal of winning state."
