State and federal dollars allocated to build resilience in local food supply chain

SUBMITTED BY AMBER BETTS
WSDA

OLYMPIA - The need to respond to pandemic-related disruptions to the food supply chain in recent years illustrated the important ways that resilient local food systems can help connect consumers to foods produced closer to home. The need for local food system infrastructure that supports growth in local economies and healthy communities is recognized by both the state and federal governments who are making new grants and technical assistance available.

Washington State Department of Agriculture (WSDA) and United States Department of Agriculture (USDA) are investing in grants and technical assistance programs that bolster resilient local food systems. Earlier this year, Washington State Legislature approved $8 million in new ongoing state funding to continue WSDA's successful Local Food System Infrastructure Grant. In addition, this summer, USDA announced the Resilient Food System Infrastructure Program is providing $9.4 million in funding for Washington state to administer grants and technical assistance that will support farms and food businesses with infrastructure projects that expand capacity and strengthen collaboration across linkages in the regional food supply chain.

Background: In 2022 and 2023, nearly $20 million in grants were awarded to small farms and local food businesses through the Local Food Systems Infrastructure and Local Meat Processing Capacity Grant programs, which are administered by the WSDA Regional Markets Program. The businesses that received assistance through these programs have demonstrated the important role they play in maintaining a vibrant and robust local food system. Continued funding from Washington State Legislature will further bolster the resiliency of our local food systems.

In addition to state-funded programming, WSDA is partnering with USDA on the newly announced Resilient Food Systems Infrastructure Program. Federal funding from this program will complement the state-funded program, supporting continued expansion of local food system capacity and farm viability in Washington. Funds will be used primarily for large-scale grants and technical assistance designed to build resilience across the middle of the state's food supply chain.

Choosing a Decongestant for Allergy Symptoms

Yesterday, my sister-in-law Ann called me for advice. She's suffering from allergies.

"My nose is SO stuffed up, I have to breathe through my mouth. I've been taking a decongestant, but it isn't working. Can you develop an immunity to Sudafed?"

"When you got the last box of Sudafed®, did you pick it up off the shelf, or did you have to sign something before buying it?"

"I got it from the cough and cold section of the grocery store."

"The Sudafed® found on the shelves of the cough and cold medicine sections of pharmacies and grocery stores today is not the Sudafed® that you remember. The name on the box is a little different, too. It's now Sudafed PE® instead of Sudafed®."

Ann, you're not getting the relief you used to get because you're not taking the same medicine. Your older version of Sudafed® contained pseudoephedrine. The formula you bought off the shelf, called Sudafed PE®, contains phenylephrine. While it's true that pseudoephedrine and phenylephrine are both decongestants designed to relieve stuffy nose symptoms, the newer version isn't as effective."

There are two reasons for this. One reason is that the over-the-counter version of Sudafed PE® is less effective than its original formula. Another reason is not everyone absorbs the entire dose of Sudafed PE®. Some of it gets left behind in their bloodstream to help their nasal congestion symptoms.

Phenylephrine and pseudoephedrine are equally effective as nasal decongestants when taken as a 30mg tablet. Unfortunately, phenylephrine can cause high blood pressure and strokes when taken at that dose. For public safety, the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) limited the amount of phenylephrine to 10mg, just one-third of its effective dose. Sudafed PE® is unlikely to cause serious side effects but is also unlikely to give as much relief from a stuffy nose as its older cousin, pseudoephedrine.

Phenylephrine is sold as Sudafed PE® tablets, syrup, and Neo-Synephrine® nose spray and drops.

Why was an effective non-prescription decongestant medicine replaced with a "wimpy" one? Because pseudoephedrine is a critical ingredient in making methamphetamine. In 2005, the USA Patriot Act restricted the sale of crucial components, called precursors, used to manufacture methamphetamine, to combat meth production, trafficking, and abuse.

The compounds identified as methamphetamine precursors were ephedrine, phenylpropanolamine, and pseudoephedrine (the generic name of Sudafed®). Beginning on September 30, 2006, products containing any of these were kept "behind the counter" in pharmacies or under lock and key by grocery stores and other vendors.

To fully address Ann's allergy symptoms, she needs more than just a switch to the older version of Sudafed®. In addition to a decongestant, Ann should also include an antihistamine. When you're suffering from both a runny nose and a stuffy nose, some antihistamines are better at relieving those symptoms than others.

Newer antihistamines like Claritin® and Allegra® cause less drowsiness but don't help dry up a runny nose (rhinorrhea) as effectively as older drugs. Zyrtec®-D (cetirizine plus pseudoephedrine) and Actifed® (triprolidine plus pseudoephedrine) are my favorites to address both a runny and stuffy nose from a common cold or allergies. These combination medications don't usually cause drowsiness and work well to dry up a runny nose.

Actifed® can be hard to find, as many younger pharmacists have never heard of it. You'll need to ask for it behind the counter. It's generic version, Aprodine® from Major® Pharmaceuticals, has been unavailable for most of this year. Luckily, when I asked my pharmacy if they could order it this week, it's available again, just in time for ragweed season!

Here Are 5 Tips for Using a Decongestant Effectively:

1. Don't use a decongestant to treat a runny nose.
A decongestant can relieve a stuffy nose but often worsens a runny nose. Use an antihistamine instead for allergy symptoms.

2. Avoid phenylephrine tablets and nose spray.
More effective decongestant choices, such as the older form of Sudafed® (pseudoephedrine) as tablets and Afrin® (naphazoline) as a nasal spray, are available.

3. Avoid oral decongestants if you have high blood pressure.
Use just an antihistamine alone, or a decongestant nasal spray like Afrin® (naphazoline).

4. Limit the use of decongestant nose sprays.
Avoid using any decongestant nasal spray for more than 3 days in a row to avoid triggering "rebound", a worsening of your stuffy nose symptoms.

5. Use an antihistamine PLUS a decongestant to relieve both a stuffy and runny nose.
Adding an antihistamine will relieve overall allergy symptoms and dry up a runny nose.

Outdoor workers required to take breaks, have access to shade and water under high heat rules

SUBMITTED BY WASHINGTON LABOR & INDUSTRIES

TUMWATER - As temperatures soar in Washington, industries whose workers do their jobs outdoors must give workers frequent breaks, access to shade, and water cool enough to drink, among other steps. Updated rules from the Department of Labor & Industries (L&I) took effect June requiring employers to take both proactive and responsive action to keep their workers safe. Protections for outdoor workers kick in at 80 degrees Fahrenheit, with additional requirements when there is high heat, so forecasted temperatures above 90 and even 100 degrees mean many with outdoor jobs will be working with those requirements in place now. As the forecasted temperatures in many places are 10 or more degrees above the average temperatures for the last 5 days, the heat wave requirement to closely observe all workers applies, as all workers are vulnerable to heat-related illness when there is sudden increase in temperature.

- At or above 80 degrees for most workers, employers must:
- Encourage and allow workers to take paid preventative cool-down rest periods as needed;
- Provide enough shade or other way of cooling down—like an air-conditioned building or running vehicle—for all employees on a meal or rest break to use;
- Provide enough cool drinking water for each employee to drink a quart per hour; and
- Closely observe new employees, employees returning from absences, and, during heat waves, all employees.

At or above 90 degrees, employers must require a 10-minute paid cool down rest period every two hours. When the temperature reaches 100 degrees or higher, the requirement for breaks becomes 15-minutes of paid cool down rest every hour.

Learn more at www.Lni.wa.gov/HeatSmart.

Recognizing symptoms of heat stress Heat exhaustion and heat stroke can come on quickly and be serious or fatal. Employers and workers should recognize these symptoms and respond appropriately:

- Heat exhaustion;
- Heavy sweating;
- A fast, weak pulse;
- Cold, pale, and clammy skin;
- Headaches, dizziness, nausea or vomiting;
- Weakness and/or cramps.

Workers experiencing these symptoms should move into the shade, drink water, and take cool-down rests as needed. Employers who see the symptoms in their workers must take action, provide aid, and continue to monitor symptoms.

Heat stroke:

- Heat stroke is more serious and must be treated as a medical emergency that requires professional medical treatment;
- Skin that is hot, red, and dry, with no sweat;
- A body temperature of 104 degrees Fahrenheit or higher;
- A fast, strong pulse, nausea, and/or loss of consciousness.

Be proactive by protecting workers' health and safety during the extreme heat of the summer.

However, if they complete six college credits, then they can claim Ability to Benefit (ATB), a federal classification that gives them access to financial aid to continue their education.

"These students are in a financial aid desert," said Rachel Evey, WVC Foundation executive director. "With funding from the Numerica Charitable Fund to support WVC Bridge, WVC can cover college-related expenses for ABE students to successfully transition into higher education programs. We are excited to serve these students directly and share their success with the community."

Numerica Charitable Fund annual grants are awarded to organizations that foster education, support women and children and work to end hunger and homelessness.

"Numerica is proud to support organizations that show up for our most vulnerable community members when times are tough," said Carla Cicero, Numerica Credit Union president and CEO. "Our annual grant program is just another way we show our commitment to enhancing lives, fulfilling dreams, and building communities."

Of 564 WVC students enrolled in Adult Basic Education who were surveyed, 52% reported having a family income below the 70% lower-living income standard for Washington, according to ABE faculty Julie Fitch. Learn more about ABE at WVC at wvc.edu/TransitionalStudies.

Cascade Creative Reuse Community Survey
What is creative reuse? It is the upcycling or repurposing of otherwise unwanted materials into something new. Creative reuse can include the exchange of physical materials, the sharing of ideas and knowledge, and the borrowing of tools and supplies. Creative reuse centers are physical locations dedicated to reuse and can inspire creativity, provide community gathering space, and conserve resources. The information gathered by this survey will help plan the next steps for a new creative reuse center in Cashmere called Cascade Creative Reuse. Let them know what you'd like to see by taking the survey online at wenatcheeriverinstitute.org.

Campus Fire Safety

SUBMITTED BY WA STATE FIRE MARSHAL'S OFFICE

Olympia—Living in a college dorm can be a fun experience, but fire safety should always be taken serious no matter where you are living. Last year in Washington State, there were over 800 fire incidents that involved college campus dormitories with a dollar loss of over $11 million. Fires in dormitories are more common during the evening hours and weekends, usually occurring between the hours of 5-11 p.m.

The State Fire Marshal's Office encourages college students living away from home to take a few minutes to ensure that they are living in a fire-safe environment by:

- Making sure the dorm room has working smoke alarms.
- Testing and maintaining smoke alarms in accordance with manufacturer's instructions.
- Never removing batteries or disable smoke alarms.
- Knowing two ways out from each room and dormitory building, and practicing a fire escape plan.

- Talking to roommates to determine a safe place to meet outside the building in case of a fire.
- Clearing exits, hallways, and stairs so they are not blocked if there is a need to leave quickly.
- Leaving quickly whenever the fire or smoke alarm sounds. Spending time retrieving items increases the chances of being trapped. Leave everything and GO.
- Staying in the kitchen whenever cooking, and only cook when alert. Do not cook when sleepy or drowsy from drugs or alcohol.
- Never leave burning candles unattended.
- Checking with school's policies and rules before using any electrical appliances in sleeping room.

For more information, contact the State Fire Marshal's Office at (360) 596-3929.

Grandpa's Thermos

In the evenings before heading to bed Grandpa prepares the coffee pot to make five cups of coffee in the morning: one cup for me and two cups each for him and Grandma. In the wee hours of the morning Grandma gets up; brews the coffee; drinks her two cups; pours the remaining three cups into Grandpa's Stanley thermos then she starts her day. Three or four hours later Grandpa and I wake up, crawl out of bed, and make our way to the kitchen table to start our day sipping hot coffee out of that thermos.

Yesterday I seated myself across the table from Grandpa. I sprinkled half a teaspoon of kosher gelatine into the bottom of my pretty teacup; reached out; grabbed the thermos; started to pour my coffee and the plastic handle broke. My body was surprised when it came apart in my hand, but my mind wasn't. That thermos has been around for a very long time. It has grown old in Grandpa's hands. Across the top of the lid yellow fingernail polish tells us how to position the cap so coffee will flow in a stream, not to fast, not to slow, into our cups. The inside of that thermos is a permanent shade of 'coffee'. Logically the plastic handle with years of useful stress and strain would have weakened to the point of failure. And mine was the hand that caused it to happen. Grandma and Grandpa looked it over; found the 'super' glue. We took some time, worked together, and glued the plastic handle back into position. Neither one of them poked or prodded about my breaking the handle... until after the handle was back together. Then they teased me a bit about being heavy handed.

I teased back about the Stanley thermos prior to this one that had a second life after Grandpa ran over it with the tractor and squished it. The thermos had a strange shape, but it didn't leak. He kept using it for a year or two until Grandma got tired of seeing it and bought him this one new.

When I joined Grandpa at the kitchen table this morning while Grandma made oatmeal with raisins for breakfast, I saw that the 'super' glue hadn't held, and the handle was back to being broken. I looked at the once hunter green of the handle. Over time the color had mellowed to take on a blueish tint as the plastic oxidized and weakened. Grandpa saw me checking out the handle. "Leather. I'll make a better handle, even than it had new," he said. I looked at the two square moving metal 'rings' attached to the thermos to hold the handle. One piece of square metal held the handle end that still maintained its integrity. I was trying to imagine how a leather handle on that old thermos could be better than the plastic one and I wasn't seeing it when Grandpa continued, "out of good thick leather." (How did he know I was seeing a flimsy, floppy, pliant leather band tied around those two metal rings?) He nodded my direction, "not supple. Thick and stiff." Then I saw what he was imagining. When he tans hides, he's aiming for soft and supple for Grandma to enjoy. But there's quite a few hides in his shop that didn't make it to the 'supple' stage and are stiff as boards. He wouldn't be able to tie it on; it would have to be riveted; I could see it; it made sense.

I grinned, "That'll work. At least this Stanley has a second life that's still in the round." He grinned back and Grandma chuckled.

Coffee 'Jello'

- 1 cup hot coffee
- 1 teaspoon honey (or sugar)
- ½ teaspoon - 1 Tablespoon plain kosher gelatine-no flavors or sugar added

Pour hot coffee into a cup or a ½ pint mason jar. Mix in honey or another sweetener. Decide how stiff the 'Jello' needs to be and add ¼ teaspoon to 1 Tablespoon plain gelatine. (If kosher gelatine can't be found, Knox will work). Stir, stir, stir until the gelatine is dissolved in the coffee. Put in the fridge and eat topped with whipped cream once it gets solid. (Sometimes my left-over morning coffee will gel in the cup without refrigeration, so I have an ongoing experiment to figure that out.) Note: I prefer to buy WIC labeled and Kosher labeled food products because I think they are produced under higher standards than other food stuffs. I try to make our food from scratch when I can because I have a better handle on the nutritional value that way. That's just me.

The Contract
Unveiling the healing power of forgiveness
A novel by local writer William E. Forhan.

Nobel Prize winning author Gabriel García Márquez was quoted as saying, "All human beings have three lives, public, private and secret." In our modern world of the Internet search engines and DNA testing, keeping our private and secret lives separate is increasingly difficult. Sometimes they can come crashing in on our public lives when we least expect it.

Father Robert McCarthy is a middle-aged priest who is suddenly and unexpectedly confronted with his secret past. How he deals with the revelation of that past with his family, his congregation and the impacts of that secret life is inspirational. How McCarthy discloses the news of his college indiscretion requires him to take everyone involved on a journey of confession. That journey forces him to deal with issues of homosexuality, judgementalism, divorce and pride.

His pastoring skills and the depth of support from his wife help him bring forgiveness and restoration to many broken relationships.

The bonds of three families are ultimately restored through celebrations of life experiences including fishing, holiday gatherings, the discovery of unknown family connections and a wedding.

Campfires now banned in the Okanogan-Wenatchee National Forest

SUBMITTED BY VICTORIA WILKINS

Continuing hot, dry weather, and worsening fire danger conditions have prompted forest officials to expand campfire restrictions across the entire Okanogan-Wenatchee National Forest. Stage 2 Fire Restrictions went into effect on Friday, August 18, banning campfires across the forest, including developed campgrounds and designated Wilderness areas.

Under the forest-wide restriction, the use of wood and charcoal campfires is banned; however, people will still be able to use pressurized or bottled liquid fuel stoves, lanterns, campfires or heating devices if no flammable material is present within three feet of the device. Wood burning camp stoves will not be allowed.

"This season we have seen a concerning increase in human-caused fires. Public cooperation is needed to help prevent new starts as hot and dry conditions continue across the forest," said Fire Management Officer Kyle Cannon. "Critical fire weather conditions are forecast through the weekend and any new starts will have potential to get large quickly in these conditions."

Stage 2 Fire Restrictions also prohibit recreational (target) shooting on the forest. The shooting restriction does not impact lawful hunting under tribal treaty rights or with a valid state-issued license during hunting season. Visit www.fs.usda.gov/goto/fire-restrictions for details on current restrictions. Firewood cutters must also comply with Industrial Fire Precaution Level requirements found at fortress.wa.gov/dnr/protection/ifpl/.

Apollo Club

In April 2022 and performed traditional Christmas selections at senior living centers that December. It performed eight times this year before taking a summer break. Those performances included a benefit concert with Columbia Chorale and other groups, a performance of the U.S. and Canadian anthems for the new Wenatchee Bighorns Basketball Team, and guests at an Apples concert.

The Apollo Club was also in the Apple Blossom Festival parade, a fundraiser for Ukrainian refugees, and a performance at the Wenatchee Farmers Market in June.

Tim Scheer, a retired choral music teacher of 40 years in Wisconsin public schools, became Apollo Club director in January and says he's "delighted and humbled to step into the shoes of a long line of exceptional club directors." Hank LuBean, club president who has been a member since 2012, said the mission is to provide men an opportunity to develop their vocal skills and be community ambassadors of goodwill.

"All-male choruses are a unique sound that audiences love," LuBean said. "We love to sing and bring entertaining, positive songs."

"Community and church choirs were already declining before Covid, and the Apollo Club was no exception and continues to struggle to maintain its numbers. We need new members, particularly young men of high school and college age, but all ages are very welcome," LuBean said. "The community would lose a valuable asset if Apollo Club ceased and we need new members to continue the men's choir tradition here in North Central Washington," he said.

Prospective members must be able to sing. The ability to read music is desirable but not required. Practice tracks are provided to learn parts. Few songs require memorization.

The club is planning a Christmas concert and a late spring 2024 concert and is looking for other opportunities, including benefit concerts.

Singers interested in joining or groups interested in arranging performances may contact Apollo Club at: wenatcheeapolloclub.com or apollo1910.org or come to a rehearsal. Apollo Club is on Facebook. Rehearsals are 7 p.m. Tuesdays at Eastmont Junior High in the choir room on the lower level with entry from the west door. A pre-season potluck will be held at Walla Walla Point Park, shelter No. 2, at 5:30 p.m. Aug. 29; prospective members and their families are also invited.

Rep. Schrier and the Fentanyl Roundtable with Local Elected Officials, Law Enforcement, First Responders, and Community Members

CONGRESSWOMAN KIM SCHRIER, M.D.
Serving the 8th District of Washington

Wenatchee - On Friday August 18, Representative Kim Schrier, M.D. (WA-08) hosted a roundtable discussion regarding fentanyl in Chelan County with Chelan County Commissioner Kevin Overbay; Wenatchee Valley Fire District Fire Chief, Brian Brett; Wenatchee School District Superintendent, Kory Kalahar; Chelan Douglas Health District Deputy Director, Kristen Hosey; Chelan Douglas Health

District Regional Emergency Response Coordinator, Kent Sisson; Wenatchee Police Department Chief, Steve Crown; Center for Drug and Alcohol Treatment Director, Loretta Stover; Chelan County Sheriff, Mike Morrison; and Director Chelan County Regional Justice Center, Chris Sharp. Following the event, Congresswoman Schrier addressed her work to combat this crisis.

Overdose deaths have tragically skyrocketed in Washington state. As a physician and a mother, Congresswoman Schrier understands the severity of this crisis and shares the concerns of parents throughout Washington state. In Congress, Rep. Schrier has worked to address the fentanyl crisis in Congress by:

- Voting for the HALT Fentanyl Act, which

- passed the House of Representatives and designates fentanyl as a Schedule 1 drug.
- Cosponsoring the Invest to Protect Act, which became law last year and increased funding for small law enforcement departments.
- Signing onto a letter advocating for increased funding for border security. This year alone, federal agents have seized more than 19,000 pounds of illicit fentanyl at the border, already totally more than CBP intercepting in all of 2022. Representative Schrier joined her New Democrat Coalition colleagues in signing this letter.

- Introducing the bipartisan ALERT Parity Act, which would increase connection to emergency services for rural communities. Access to emergency services is critical in medical emergencies such as overdoses. This bill passed the House with overwhelming bipartisan support.
- Hosting town halls dedicated to informing parents and teens about the dangers of fentanyl and how to stay safe.
- Hosting a series of fentanyl roundtables to gather feedback from community members and local experts throughout the Eighth District.

New apprenticeship funding focuses on easing nurse and teacher shortage

SUBMITTED BY WASHINGTON LABOR & INDUSTRIES

TUMWATER — Apprenticeship programs for nurses and special education teachers in Washington are getting a $5.6 million boost through a local partnership that won a federal Department of Labor grant.

The Washington departments of Labor & Industries (L&I) and Washington Department of Veterans Affairs (WDVA), together with the Office of the Superintendent of Public Instruction (OSPI) and Washington Education Association (WEA), will invest the funds in training for two industries facing consistent and significant staffing shortages.

"Our Career Connect and apprenticeship efforts are all about connecting students and workers to the many incredible career opportunities in high-demand fields, including education and health care," said Gov. Jay Inslee. "The collaboration among state agencies and union partners is paying off and we appreciate the support of the federal Department of Labor."

"Training more teachers and nurses will ease the pressure on workers who are doing their best to meet demands well beyond their capacity," said Joel Sacks, L&I director. "Along with that, this funding will provide pathways for people in our state into these rewarding careers, particularly to underserved populations."

Special education teachers

Under the grant, apprenticeship programs for special education teachers will focus on providing training in the Walla Walla, Federal Way, and Mukilteo school districts. Because it requires participants have a bachelor's degree, rather than a master's degree, the grant will open the possibility of a career in teaching to a new universe of potential educators.

It's also a first-of-its-kind partnership between L&I, the OSPI, and the WEA.

"Across the nation, schools continue to experience shortages in educators trained to support students with disabilities, and Washington state is no exception," said State Superintendent Chris Reykdal. "Preparing future educators by empowering them to spend more time with mentor teachers and students prior to earning their certification is the power of apprenticeship, and I am so excited we are bringing it to Washington. We are grateful for our partnership with L&I, WDVA, and WEA."

"Our goal is simple. As an education community, we must continue to lift diverse, aspiring educators who reflect the diversity of our public schools. Our students and communities deserve the best-prepared and most innovative teachers. Together, in our education communities, we have the power and expertise to make a difference," said Larry Delaney, Washington Education Association (WEA) president. "For the future of education in our state and across the nation, we will continue to strengthen our public schools."

Licensed practical nurses

L&I and the WDVA will use another part of the grant to fund on-the-job training through apprenticeship for licensed practical nurses

(LPN) in long-term care facilities serving veterans including the Washington Soldiers Home, Washington Veterans Home, Spokane Veterans Home and Walla Walla Veterans Home.

The program will focus on nursing assistants and nursing technicians who are completing LPN coursework.

"The Washington Department of Veterans Affairs is uniquely positioned to expand registered apprenticeship opportunities in Washington state and support our staff as they begin their nursing career serving those who served," said WDVA Director David Puente. "By creating a career pathway from Nursing Assisting to Licensed Practical Nurse, we are removing barriers for candidates wanting to enter nursing and providing supported employment while they train."

Expanding participation and investment

A third part of the grant involves providing support services to pre-apprenticeship program participants. That work could include outreach to underrepresented communities including women, people of color, and veterans as a way to expand participation in a variety of occupations

This grant is part of a significant focus from L&I on increasing participation in registered apprenticeships. That includes $8 million invested in expanding existing programs in 2022 and $15 million for apprenticeship in aerospace engineering in 2021.

There are about 190 registered apprenticeship programs in the state. There are more than 22,000 people participating in apprenticeship programs, which cover some 200 different occupations.

Executive Director, Visit Chelan County

WENATCHEE - How happy are you, as a local resident, with tourism in Chelan County? Do you see where improvements can be made? Do you have concerns about the industry's impact on our local way of life? What are we missing, here in Chelan County?

Visit Chelan County, a newly formed destination marketing and stewardship organization, seeks answers to these questions and more as the organization develops a long-term Destination Stewardship Plan for tourism in the region.

Visit Chelan County is asking area residents to complete an online survey that was posted earlier this week. The survey can be found at www.surveymonkey.com/r/ChelanCountyCommunitySurvey and takes about 15 minutes to complete. It is open through Oct. 8, and is also available at www.visitchelancounty.com. "In developing the Destination Stewardship Plan, our goal is to gather and listen to all voices so we can create a shared vision for not only making Chelan County an even better place to live and work but also keeping it an appealing place to visit," said Jerri Barkley, executive director of Visit Chelan County. "Your participation will help guide our needs for stewardship and sustainability, ensuring that we protect and support our natural assets and the environment that makes our county so special."

A 10-year roadmap for tourism development, the Destination Stewardship Plan aims to provide a framework for responsible tourism development and promotion in Chelan County; its goal is to enhance the quality of life for residents as well as visitor experiences across the county.

The community survey includes questions about not only where participants live and how they feel about tourism, but also how it impacts them personally, what changes or improvements they would like to see and how they envision tourism in the area in the next five to 10 years.

A second survey, targeted at stakeholders, is also being distributed directly to a mix of tourism industry leaders, community leaders, government officials and customers. Information gathered by both efforts will be shared with the Chelan County Lodging Tax Advisory Committee, which coordinates the Visit Chelan County campaign, to use when prioritizing local tourism investments in the near future and beyond, Barkley added.

Barkley encourages the public to complete the online survey and have a voice in the future of tourism in Chelan County. "When we talk about responsible tourism promotion, we aren't focused only on the visitor's experience," she said. "The concerns and priorities of our local residents also will play heavily in the plan's development."

Visit Chelan County is the newly formed destination marketing and stewardship organization that is responsible for the promotion and management of tourism in the unincorporated communities in Chelan County. For more information, visit www.visitchelancounty.com. Or call 509.699.8555

WASHINGTON OUTDOORS REPORT

The Mountain Men

By JOHN KRUSE

I first spoke with Nick Burson and Marc McPherson in 2017. Nick and Marc are both law enforcement officers who work and live in Central Washington. Nick is a Corporal at the Kittitas County Sheriff's Office and Marc serves as a Lieutenant for the Central Washington University Police Department. The two are dedicated law enforcement officers but when they aren't working, they love to climb to mountains and do so like nobody else.

In the summer of 2017 the two summited Washington's five volcanos (Mt. Adams, Mt. St. Helens, Mt. Rainier, Glacier Peak and Mt. Baker) in five and a half days. It seemed like the accomplishment of a lifetime, done in a nearly non-stop fashion and going one 36-hour stretch without any sleep at all.

However, two weeks ago, Nick reached out to me again to let me know he and Marc had done not one better, but seven better, scaling twelve summits in three states in less than twelve days between July 23 and August 2. Nick told me their goal was to summit all twelve volcanos of the Cascade Mountain Range over 10,000 feet in 11 days.

Nick and Marc had been looking for a new challenge since 2017 that was in Nick's words, "Bigger and better and a little more challenging than what they did before." That's how they came up with the idea of scaling these peaks in Washington, Oregon and California in less than 12 days.

The two actually tried to complete this quest last year, summiting Lassen Peak in California but coming up a couple of hundred feet short of the summit of North Sister peak in Central Oregon. The two encountered snow just below the summit that required a technical climb to get through and the two had not brought the equipment with them to do it. The two were faced with hiking back to the trailhead to retrieve the gear they needed to make it to the summit and realized the weather was deteriorating on the of the mountains they planned to climb next. With their timeline blown, they resolved to try again this year.

Shortly after midnight on the morning of July 23 the two men set out from the Pole Creek Trailhead towards North Sister, the peak that defeated them the previous summer. They encountered the same treacherous snowfield below the summit they found last year but with the right gear, they were able to traverse it and reach the peak. The two then summited the peak of Middle Sister from the same trailhead that brought them to North Sister. They then hiked back to their vehicle and drove to a different trailhead, setting out for the peak of South Sister that evening and managed to make it to the top before midnight, tagging all three peaks in less than 24 hours.

It was a great start to the expedition and more than most mere mortals would ever dream of doing in two or three days. After running back to the trailhead, they slept in the campsite there for a few hours before driving south six hours to the trailhead that would take them to Lassen Peak in California. After bagging Lassen Peak, they drove north to Mount Shasta, slept for 90 minutes and began making their way towards the top of this iconic Northern California mountain shortly before midnight. The following day they reached the summit of Shasta and returned to the trailhead to make an hour-long plus drive to another trailhead that would lead them towards little known Mount Shastina. Burson explained few people climb this mountain and there were really no defined trails to the top but they managed to make it there late on their third day, conquering six mountain peaks in 72 hours.

The next day the duo rested some and traveled to the base of Mount Jefferson in Central Oregon. It was a mountain they had summited before but the route they were taking this time was unfamiliar, and hiking the trail in the dark with their headlamps, the two lost the trail. What was supposed to be a 14-mile hike to the top of the mountain instead turned into a 20-something-mile-long trek. McPherson said in addition to the long trek Mt. Jefferson is challenging because you also have to do some rock scrambling, traverse snowfields and do some technical climbing before you reach the summit, after which you have to rappel down cliffs to safer ground.

After this very long day McPherson and Burson headed towards Mount Hood in Northern Oregon. The latest climbing report from the rangers there were three weeks old with a recommendation of not climbing the mountain. However, buoyed by their success on Mount Jefferson, the two went anyway. They had the mountain to themselves and made the summit where they only stayed a short time, being buffeted by 50 mph winds, before heading back down.

The two next bagged Mount Adams during an uneventful climb, tagged Mount Rainier after setting out on a morning climb to reach the summit at sunset, normally it's done the other way to reach the summit at sunrise, and then it was on to Glacier Peak, which was a long hike covering 38 miles round trip from the trailhead to the summit and back.

On the tenth day they began their climb up Mount Baker, their final destination. They reached the summit by 5 p.m., which they had to themselves to savor their accomplishment for an hour before heading back to the trailhead where they checked the clock and found they had completed their epic quest in 10 days, 23 hours and 51 minutes. It will be interesting to see what kind of mountain climbing challenge the two will take up next. I'll share the details of the next expedition with you when it occurs.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

PARKING

I was talking with someone the other day about the efforts to build "A mixed-use project with parking, retail, and apartments located in sunken Parking Lot 2 / Blewett." I understand it is to be about 50 apartments, and about 75 parking spaces to serve the apartments and about 6 retail shops. I was saying that I thought it was more valuable as a potential full scale parking lot/structure, but they said, "It was too valuable as commercial property to be used as parking."

I have been thinking about that "too valuable as commercial property to be used as parking" for some time now. Parking is a big part of any major store or mall. In most cases more commercial property is dedicated to parking than retail buildings. I can't imagine a Costco, Walmart, Target or any major retailer or mall without plenty of parking in close proximity to the stores. This idea that Leavenworth should build a parking lot up the Chumstick or on East Leavenworth and bus the customers into town doesn't seem like a good solution to the parking problem. First, I don't think our visitors would find it convenient and second, I think the cost of running shuttles from early morning until the bars closed seven days a week would be cost prohibitive. A parking garage built over the sunken parking lot next to the Festhalle seems like an ideal location. It is located right off Highway 2 so there is no need to direct cars through town to a remote location. It is close to the Festhalle, which is our main event location, so no need for a long walk or shuttle for the visitors to the event. It is offset to the east from the Festhalle so it wouldn't block the view of the Festhalle. A 4 or 5 story garage over the hole would leave the large adjacent surface parking lot available for Festhalle events like car shows, Ferris wheels, etc. As general visitor parking, it is close enough to most shops that a family that purchased items could take them to their car and then continue shopping or go to eat or explore the village. Also, a garage in the east part of town near the Festhalle works well with the DOT parking lot on the west end of town.

An additional point of interest is that the City owns the triangle shaped lot to the east of the lot hole which would allow for the ramps to the garage floors to be built outside the main structure thus preserving more garage space for cars. It should also allow for equipment and material staging during construction causing less impact on existing parking.

With the transition of Front Street to a walking mall, that street parking has been lost and to add to that by converting the sunken Parking Lot 2 to the proposed mixed use only adds to the parking problem. I feel that if the parking issue is not addressed in the near future that our customer base will slowly fade away.

I am supportive of affordable housing, however I can't think of a less desirable location than right downtown Leavenworth. Where will kids play, on the street or within the parking area? How will friends and family find parking close by to visit on busy weekends or holidays? I believe the upper valley communities of Leavenworth, Cashmere, Dryden, Peshastin, and the County should come together and build affordable housing near the middle, in maybe Dryden or Peshastin. I would think more housing (even with a kids' park area) could be built as a costly high-rise structure in Leavenworth. With the great Link bus system, residents would have access to jobs up and down the valley from Leavenworth to Wenatchee. Many present Leavenworth residents work down valley because of the greater range of jobs and many ride the Link bus. Elmer Larsen, Leavenworth
