

Does Icicle Creek have enough water to meet Leavenworth's future needs

In this Anthropocene Era of climate change, perhaps the biggest challenge for the Western United States is its dwindling water supply, only exacerbated by the region's widespread drought. Very few days pass without news of the crises that is the Colorado River drainage, water restrictions in California, or falling reservoirs and reduced mountain snowpacks throughout the West. Surely, though, Leavenworth and environs, tucked into the eastern flanks of the lush Cascades, are immune from this predicament. If only that was true.

Leavenworth's primary water supply is Icicle Creek, via a water intake and filter plant located roughly five miles upriver from the creek's terminus at the Wenatchee River. (The other source is drawn from an aquifer at the wellfield adjacent to Cascade Orchard Bridge on Icicle Road.) Steep and turbulent for much of its flow, Icicle Creek, the name of which is derived from the Native American word na-sik-elt, or narrow canyon, falls over 3,000 feet in 32 miles from its origin, Lake Josephine, near Stevens Pass, to its confluence with the Wenatchee, across from the Leavenworth Golf Club. The creek's drainage basin is comprised of land within the Alpine Lakes Wilderness and the Wenatchee National Forest, and their glaciers, lakes, reservoirs, and streams.

Demands on the Icicle, however, are far from limited to the City of Leavenworth. In fact, there are myriad demands, which stand starkly in contrast to the comparatively static supply of water. That dichotomy leads the water supply to be stretched thin in times of plenty. In times of drought - most recently notable in 2015 - the Icicle's flow can fail to meet its demands. That, in turn, can lead to a limitation upon, or even a cessation of, irrigation water to certain agricultural users, who are entitled to water on a "first in time, first in right" basis. In addition, the negative effects in time of drought extend to the creek's fish habitat, operations at the Leavenworth National Fish Hatchery, and upon tribal fishing rights. Ultimately, it can, and has, lead to legal disputes among the Icicle's water use stakeholders.

After a period of petitions for injunctions and lawsuits between and among the Icicle stakeholders, culminating with the Washington Department of Ecology seeking to limit the City of Leavenworth's water rights, a proposal was made to create a coalition of those diverse, interested parties to avoid future litigation, if not disputes all together. All realized that a common core of each party's position was an interest in having a healthy water system in the Icicle basin, with enough water for everyone. From that realization, and appreciation of a common interest, arose, in 2012, the Icicle Work Group. The Department of Ecology's Office of the Columbia River, together with the Chelan County Natural Resource Department brought together municipal, state, and federal government agencies, tribal representatives, irrigation managers, hatchery administration, and environmental organizations. The Group included, among others, the two convening parties, the City of Leavenworth, the Colville Confederated Tribes, the Yakama Nation, the US Forest Service, the Washington Department of Fish and Wildlife, the Fish Hatchery, the Washington Water Trust, and the Peshastin and Icicle Irrigation District.

For six years, the Work Group met, collaborated, and compromised to devise a vision, strategy and

Thank you for supporting my sixth annual listening tour

COMMUNITY VOICES

Senator Brad Hawkins

I recently concluded the first portion of my sixth annual 12th District listening tour. Traveling throughout our district with my staff has become an annual tradition each fall, the time of year when legislators begin planning for the upcoming legislative session. Due to the COVID-19 pandemic, the past two listening tours consisted primarily of remote meetings. This year's tour included in-person meetings with remote meetings available as an option.

This year's listening tour is split between the traditional areas of the 12th District and the new areas resulting from the recent state redistricting. The first portion of the tour took place September 13-16, with visits to Cashmere, Leavenworth, Chelan, and Wenatchee. The remaining tour will take place November 14-18 in the King and Snohomish counties portion of the new 12th District.

Past listening tours have taken me all throughout the 12th District and helped me connect with issues important to all four counties. Many of these communities, unfortunately, will no longer be within the 12th District boundaries going forward, which is why this year's Chelan County stops featured Cashmere, Chelan, and Wenatchee. During my meetings this year, key topics included the state budget, health care, education, land use, wildfire, recreation, and more. This feedback will be very helpful for me when casting important votes in Olympia.

Hosting a listening tour each year helps prepare me for our state's annual legislative session. Ideas shared during past listening tours have turned into successful legislative action. As examples, a suggestion by Leavenworth officials to dispose of brush and yard clippings resulted in a bill that became law in 2018. A funding request for the Saddle Rock trail in Wenatchee became reality when it was included in the state budget two years ago, and a road-paving project to a popular fishing location in Okanogan County was recently funded. A biochar demonstration project to reduce wildfire risk was also funded, as well as significant improvements to Pinnacles Prep School. All were ideas first raised by constituents during listening tours. Besides legislative ideas, I also collect helpful comments that prepare me to make better decisions for you.

As I reflect upon discussions from this year's listening tour and look ahead to the legislative session, I will be better prepared to represent us in the Senate. When legislators convene at the state Capitol in January, the primary focus will be developing budgets for the 2023-2025 biennium. This two-year period runs July 1, 2023, through June 30, 2025. Legislators likely will approve all three budgets in April or May.

Your support has been terrific throughout my six years of listening tours. Whether you were able to join me this year or not, please know that my position exists to serve you. Please reach out to me anytime, either in Olympia or here at home. I always appreciate hearing your thoughts and ideas about state government. Contrary to what some people may think, listening is the most important skill any elected official can have. It certainly helps me do my job better.

Brad Hawkins is our 12th District state senator representing North Central Washington in Olympia. Contact info: 360-786-7622 or brad.hawkins@leg.wa.gov.

It's Pear Bowl time

By LINDSAY TIMMERMANS
Staff Report

The annual battle for bragging rights in the Upper Valley is set for this Friday, October 7 at 7:00 p.m. at Cashmere High School for the annual Pear Bowl. The Cascade Kodiaks and winners of the 2021 game, will travel to Cashmere on the night of the Bulldog's Homecoming night.

The Bulldogs will be vying for possession of the Pear Bowl Trophy from the Kodiaks who won it last March when Fall Sports commenced later in the school year due to the pandemic. Last year's final score was Cascade 24; Cashmere 19.

Going into this game the Kodiaks are 4 and 1. The Kodiaks' head coach is Dominique Coffin. He respectfully regarded the competition Friday saying, "For this year's Pear Bowl it should be a fun one. Cashmere has a very talented team and have done well so far this preseason. Every year you don't know what to expect with the Pear Bowl because it doesn't matter what everyone's record is or who is favored, it is always a great game."

The Kodiaks are coming off a game vs. Quincy last week at home where they picked up another win at 42-7.

"As a team we are excited to get the opportunity to compete against a strong team that is well coached. We are also excited to be able to show what we have," shared Kodiaks' coach Coffin.

The Bulldogs Bulldogs are 5 and 0. The Bulldogs played away last week at Ephrata and picked up a win with the final score at 30 - 15. The Bulldogs head coach is Bryan Bremer.

For many of the players on both teams this will be their last chance to go into the history books as a member of the winning Pear Bowl Team of 2022-2023. Sixteen of Cashmere's 44-man roster graduate this year, with 41 points per average. Ten of Cascade's 39-man roster are seniors with 50 points per average. This would indicate the Bulldog's roster is a little more experienced than the Kodiak's, but that Cascade may lead again this year in offensive scoring.

It would appear on paper that the teams are pretty well balanced so the game should be another close one just like the last two years in 2019 and 2021. Both teams are capable of making big plays and both teams play with a lot of heart, never giving up. Tickets are on sale on both the Cashmere and Cascade school district websites. Head out this Friday to support your home team under the Friday night lights. What builds a solid rivalry is the mutual respect for the other teams' excellence. The right to brag that goes back to the 1980's between these two CTL schools, with a dash of homecoming this year, is sure to fuel the night.

Obituary & Memorial Policies

NCW Media, Inc.: Leavenworth Echo, Cashmere Valley Record, Lake Chelan Mirror, Quad City Herald. An Obituary is a way for family member(s) to commemorate a loved one's life and to notify the community of the passing of the loved one. Obituaries are also used for historical and ancestral data. Memorials are another way to let the community know about the life and memories of the person who has passed. A Memorial is different from an Obituary. An Obituary is usually current, while a Memorial can be written later. Obituaries and Memorials need to be typed and emailed as a Word Document. They can be placed in one or more papers - all publish weekly on Wednesday. Obituaries are priced by the number of words and include one color photo and go online at no extra charge. Memorials are priced per column inch. Please call for cost. *Payment is due at the time of placement. *Exception: Chapels, funeral homes who have an account, can be billed. There is no charge for a Death Notice - information is limited. Deadline is 4 p.m. on Friday - some exceptions may apply. Please call 509-548-5286 for more information Or email classifieds@leavenworthecho.com

Breast Cancer Awareness Month

Phytoestrogens

Years ago, while speaking to 120 pharmacy students in an auditorium in Pullman, Washington, I had my first hot flash. I noticed my scalp suddenly feeling hot and prickly. Two heartbeats later, a shower of sweat gushed down my neck and back. In less than 5 seconds, I was soaking wet!

Can phytoestrogens relieve the physical and social discomfort of menopausal symptoms like sudden hot flashes/flushes or their nighttime equivalent, night sweats?

For decades, researchers have noticed how Asian women don't suffer as much from hot flashes during menopause as Western women do, labeling it the "Japanese Effect." The primary reason for this difference is believed to be diet.

A typical Asian diet contains much more soy than a standard American diet. Foods containing soy and soy concentrates contain phytoestrogens, which are plant-based substances acting in your body in ways and places similar to estrogen.

But eating more soy is only part of the answer. Protection against hot flushes may also depend upon whether your body can change the basic phytoestrogens found in soy into equol, a powerful phytoestrogen. Overall, 30-50% of North American women can convert soy into equol. Asian and Hispanic women can do this more easily.

Phytoestrogens work by attaching or binding to the same places in your body that other types of estrogens do. These binding sites are called estrogen receptors, or ERs. The two main types of ERs are ER alpha and ER beta receptors. Most estrogens and phytoestrogens bind to ER alpha receptors, which can also stimulate breast and uterine cancer.

However, some phytoestrogens bind to ER-beta receptors, which triggers the opposite effect. Binding to ER-beta receptors can BLOCK the action of estrogen on breast tissue. This is similar to how the estrogen-blocking medicines tamoxifen and raloxifene (Evista®) help prevent certain types of breast cancer.

Unfortunately, studying the effects of any one phytoestrogen in the body is challenging. One reason is that foods and herbal sources of phytoestrogens contain different types of phytoestrogens. The 2 most common types of phytoestrogens are isoflavones and lignans. Soybeans contain isoflavones like genistein and daidzein, while lignans are found in flaxseed, fruits and vegetables, and other foods.

Another reason it's hard to predict the effects of phytoestrogens is that some attach to ER-alpha receptors, some to ER-beta receptors, and some to BOTH, which can create different outcomes. This may explain why phytoestrogens have been shown to encourage weight loss in post-menopausal women in some studies yet weight gain in others.

Depending on their growing conditions, plants can also have variable concentrations of phytoestrogens. An additional complication is how much estrogen is already in place. Phytoestrogens can act differently in pre-menopausal women compared to post-menopausal women, whose bodies contain much less estrogen.

How much soy do you need to reduce hot flashes/hot flush symptoms? Most clinical studies have used between 40 and 80 mg of phytoestrogens from soy-based products daily. Recent evidence suggests you should start with 2 servings a day of soy foods for 3 months, noting whether you experience fewer episodes of hot flushes/flushes.

One serving of soy food can be 3 ounces of tofu, ½ cup of edamame, ½ cup tofu, ¼ cup soy nuts, or 1 cup of soy milk. Flaxseed, chickpeas, beans, peas, green leafy vegetables, cauliflower, and nuts are good sources of phytoestrogens. After trying soy for 3 months, if you don't notice any decrease in your hot flashes or hot flushes, you can stop it.

Can eating soy-based food cause breast cancer? If you're not a vegetarian, you're unlikely to get enough soy in your diet to increase your risk of breast cancer.

Be cautious about taking supplements that contain phytoestrogens and estrogen-like compounds. Soy concentrates and herbal products like black cohosh marketed for "menopause support," like Remifemin®, may increase breast cancer risk.

Ask... Dr. Louise

Here are 3 Tips for Taking Phytoestrogens Safely:

1. You CAN eat food containing soy, even if you have a history of breast cancer.

Moderation is the key. If you are vegetarian or vegan, don't eat tofu or tempeh every day, and watch your consumption of soy milk.

2. Be cautious with supplements for menopausal symptoms.

If you have a family history or an increased risk of breast cancer, avoid taking supplements containing concentrated phytoestrogens, like soy concentrates or black cohosh, until more is known about their long-term effects.

3. Stick to phytoestrogens that have had their potency tested.

The exact concentrations of certain phytoestrogens differ depending on growing conditions. The best phytoestrogen supplements measure and standardize every batch to ensure consistent potency.

Think Pink

By: SHARI CAMPBELL

Cascade Medical Foundation

It's October, the time of year when the temperatures start to cool and we celebrate Oktoberfest, with all the beauty of our Bavarian village and alpine setting. October also marks National Breast Cancer Awareness Month. Across the country, people show their support for everyone affected by breast cancer and the approximately 264,000 women and 2,400 men expected to be diagnosed with the disease this year. Here in Leavenworth and the surrounding communities, the Cascade Medical Foundation and Cascade Medical invite you to take time to know the facts and support women in our community. Think Pink. As you stroll shops and restaurants in downtown Leavenworth, you may see brightly colored Think Pink fliers. Not only does this remind us all about Breast Cancer Awareness Month, but it lets you know the business is supporting free and reduced-price mammograms at Cascade Medical - either by making a donation or by selling a "Think Pink" item such as a pink soap, a chocolate with a fun pink design or a pink t-shirt. For women who don't have insurance, the funds donated by these businesses help pay for mammograms, which are still the best tool to diagnose breast cancer. What else should you know about Breast Cancer?

Know the numbers!

- One in eight women will be diagnosed with cancer
- Nearly 275,000 women are diagnosed annually with breast cancer
- Most women who get breast cancer don't have a family history of breast cancer. In fact, only about 15-20% of women diagnosed with breast cancer report having a family history of the disease.

- About 65% of breast cancer cases are diagnosed at a localized stage - there is no sign the cancer has spread outside of the breast and the 5-year survival rate is 99 percent!
- And, importantly, about 47% of women put off preventive care such as mammography due to cost. That's why the funds raised via Think Pink are so important!

- Get your mammogram scheduled. Today.

Whether you're Katie Couric (who was recently diagnosed with breast cancer after forgetting to her annual exam) or Katie from Cole's Corner, getting regular mammograms is your best tool to spot breast cancer in its earliest stages, when it's most treatable and most curable. And, thanks to the work of the Cascade Medical Foundation and the support of our generous community, Cascade Medical has leading edge digital mammography. According to the American Cancer Society, women between the ages of 40 and 44 have the option to consider getting a screening mammogram. Women 45-54 should get mammograms every year, they say.

Additional guidelines or mammograms vary, based on your age, family history and other health factors. Talk to your health care provider about what's best for you.

To schedule a mammogram at Cascade Medical, just call 509-548-2512. Their friendly, helpful staff will get you scheduled and get your results back within a matter of days, so don't wait.

The Washington Outdoors Report

Eastern Washington bird hunting prospects

By JOHN KRUSE

With several bird hunting seasons opening up this month it's time to take a look at what the season ahead has in store for us in Central and Eastern Washington.

WATERFOWL: Year in and year out, Grant County has offered the highest waterfowl harvests in the state. Last year, hunters took home 56,487 ducks and 18,167 geese. The reason for this is habitat. Potholes Reservoir, Moses Lake and surrounding waste water ways and ponds offer ample places for both resident and migrating waterfowl to loiter and abundant grain fields in the area provide a steady food source.

Last year a drought resulted in several long-time ponds drying up. This year, despite a cool, wet spring, there was once again very little rain over the summer months. Couple this with a 23-foot drawdown of Potholes Reservoir and the majority of these ponds remain dry or at very low levels.

Because of this it will be difficult to access traditional hunting areas at the north end of Potholes Reservoir and there is a strong possibility the ponds in the North Potholes Regulated Access Area will be dry again this year. On the other hand, public lands along both Frenchman and Winchester Wasteway, as well as along Lower Crab Creek and Royal Lake, should hold ducks when the season begins. As the season progresses and birds come into the area from the north, hunting along the Columbia River and the Pend Oreille River from Newport to Usk will provide hunters with good opportunities.

One other species to consider is the snow goose. Rarely seen in the past, the Columbia Basin has been discovered by these birds and thousands of them can be now found on Potholes Reservoir and in the surrounding grain fields during hunting season.

used to be as popular as duck hunting but changing agricultural practices and loss of habitat have resulted in a serious long-term decline for these birds. Now, WDFW does approximately three releases every season of farm raised pheasants on to wildlife areas as part of their Eastern Washington Pheasant Enhancement Program. These releases usually occur in conjunction with the youth opener, the opening day of pheasant season, and a week or two prior to Thanksgiving. Because of rising costs fewer birds have been released in recent years and hunters tend to be jam packed in the wildlife areas following a release, making for a hunting experience that is anything but idyllic.

An option to this is to pay to hunt on lands not accessible to the public. The Yakima Tribal Nation offers this opportunity near Toppenish for both duck and upland bird hunters. You can find out more about purchasing a permit to hunt there at www.ynwildlife.org/permits/.

In addition to this, the Royal Youth Booster Club sells hunting passes out of MarDon Resort that allow you to access up to 25,000 acres of private land to include areas where pheasant are planted every week until Thanksgiving. You can purchase either a three-consecutive-day pass or a season pass. There are only a limited number of these passes available so you will want to contact MarDon Resort sooner than later if you are interested. The telephone number to call is 509-346-2651. One other thing, the proceeds from these hunting passes goes to youth programs in the Royal City area.

QUAIL & CHUKAR: Whereas pheasant populations have been facing a long-term decline, quail populations have grown dramatically in some areas. WDFW biologists in the Columbia Basin state, "Quail hunting is expected to be good again this year with reports from the field painting an optimistic picture." Grant County has lots of public land with good habitat for quail and last year hunters there harvested 11,000 birds.

Chelan and Douglas County (District 7) generally offers good quail hunting too, with a five-year average harvest of 9718 quail. However, those harvest numbers have significantly declined the last two years despite hunter numbers staying stable. Biologists believe wildfires in the area, along with prolonged drought, have knocked back quail numbers in this region. These same conditions have also brought down chukar numbers in this district which in the recent past, has had the highest harvest rate in the state.

Another place that traditionally holds good numbers of quail on state wildlife areas and public land is Okanogan County, especially in the lower elevations. Unfortunately, harvest declined here last year as well, for the same reasons it did in District 7.

On the other hand, Okanogan County should offer good opportunity for both chukar and Hungarian partridge this year. According to WDFW, "Hungarian partridge populations are widely distributed and locally abundant throughout the district's shrub-steppe habitats. Scattered groups of chukar are found in the rocky areas in lower elevations. The steep hills along the Similkameen River in the north part of the Okanogan Valley and the rocky areas of the Pateros and Indian Dan Wildlife Areas typically hold good numbers of birds."

slate of projects that would collectively form a sustainable water management plan to address the Icicle's chronic water supply issues. The Icicle Strategy is based on a vision "to increase community and ecological resiliency through implementing collaborative solutions for water management within the Icicle Creek drainage to provide a suite of balanced benefits for existing and new domestic and agricultural uses, non-consumptive uses, fish, wildlife, and habitat while protecting treaty and non-treaty fishing interests." The Guiding Principles, of the Icicle Strategy, incorporate over a dozen major projects, which were chosen by means of analyzing the "best available science to identify and support water management solutions that lead to implementation of high-priority water resource projects within the Icicle Creek drainage."

The Group released an Environmental Impact Statement (EIS) in January of 2019 that "identified a mix of conservation and storage modification projects to achieve reliable water supplies and instream flows." The projects include:

- Alpine Lakes Reservoirs Optimization, Modernization, and Automation, which "modernizes and automates the outlet and gate infrastructure at seven Alpine Lakes within the Icicle Creek Subbasin.
- Icicle-Peshastin Irrigation District Irrigation Efficiencies that includes "options to improve irrigation delivery and on-farm efficiencies by means of canal piping or lining and on-farm efficiency upgrades"
- Domestic Conservation Efficiencies that focus "on conservation projects in the City of Leavenworth and Chelan County and implements municipal and rural water efficiency projects such as a lawn reduction program, leak detection and repair, meter installation, and water use conservation."
- Tribal and Non-Tribal Fisheries to "ensure that projects and actions taken do not have negative effects on tribal fishery activity in the Icicle Creek Subbasin";
- Leavenworth National Fish Hatchery Improvements with "projects to reduce surface water use and improve access to groundwater"
- Habitat Protection and Enhancement to "implement stream restoration and protection projects such as riparian plantings, engineered log jams, and conservation easements to improve stream habitat and ecosystem health"; and
- Fish Screening that "upgrades fish screens on diversions [of] Icicle Creek [to bring them] into compliance with Washington State and federal screening requirements." The yeoman's effort completed, over the better part of a decade, by the Icicle Work Group to establish the Icicle Strategy, the EIS, and the projects it outlined, finally made way to the implementation phase. In 2020, among other things, work began to upgrade fish screens near Snow Lakes, off

Icicle Road, and canal lining on the "beats" of the Peshastin and Icicle Irrigation District. Chelan County Natural Resources Manager, Mary Jo Sanborn, summed up what may be the general sentiment of the Work Group when she voiced that "now that the strategy has been developed, we're into the fun part and will soon see some positive results with benefits for all."

Davis Washines, Government Relations Liaison for the Yakama Nations Fisheries, had a reserved, yet equally sanguine perspective, stating that our "right to our waters were given to us by the Creator at the time of creation and important part of that right - and our history - is our special relationship to the salmon, which have a right to complete their life cycle in the manner that was prescribed for them. [Yet,] we share this land and the only way to find solutions is by working together. I have no doubt that by doing so, despite differences, with a holistic approach that includes addressing the effects of climate change, we will improve the condition of our waters." Leavenworth National Fish Hatchery Manager, Mat Maxey, while discussing the Work Group and one of its current projects that will bring into compliance the Icicle's surface water intake and fish passage screening by replacing 1930s infrastructure, echoed Washines's concerns and optimism about the future of the Icicle Watershed: "We have a specific goal, in this case, of protecting endangered species - bull trout and steelhead - by keeping them out of the Hatchery. The more general goal, though, is to restore for the future the health of the Icicle. We are keenly aware that the actions we take to achieve these goals, all the while considering climate change and the thermal increases it is making to the river, will have effects on generations to come. Collaborative projects are hard but, in the long run, are the most effective way to get things equitably. Water users on Icicle Work Group are working diligently to make it multi-user friendly for the environment, and to users and community and tribal partners. If we are able to achieve the projects outlined [by the Icicle Strategy], we should be able to alleviate overuse concerns and effects of climate change."

Significantly, the viewpoint of the biggest diverter of Icicle Creek, the Peshastin and Icicle Irrigation District, is largely in line with those of the other Icicle stakeholders. As the former Manager and current Project Manager of the District Tony Jantzer said of the Work Group and the District's role in it: "We're basically trying to make things better - hopefully - for everybody. We're aiming for a sustainable, dependable win-win situation for the fish, the City of Leavenworth, the Hatchery, and the district, which, though not easy with a big diverse group, is doable." Tracy Valentine, the City of Leavenworth's Water Plant Supervisor, continued the same sentiment, while adding that having the City of Leavenworth and the Icicle Work Group "work directly with community, we've found people to be mindful of their individual water usage when necessary. While the town is almost uniquely lucky to have two sources of water - the Icicle and the wellfield - which gives us flexibility if one source goes off-line, having a supportive community is equally important. Living and working in a responsible community like ours is every water operator's dream." Though hurtles remain, that community responsibility, in combination with the projects of the Icicle Work Group, just may help Leavenworth, even as it grows, and the other Icicle stakeholders, achieve drought resilient and climate responsive results to preserve our most important natural resource, thereby meeting the needs of, and ensuring the way of life for, all of Icicle Creek's users, including the natural aquatic habitat, now and in the future.
