BY BRANDI CHARLES

The fact that summer is winding down and next week brings the start of a new school year, doesn't mean that the opportunity to have fun in the great outdoors has to end.

Washington State Parks (WSP) offers a wide array of programs for children and families to participate in all year long. With an abundance of excuses for kids to stay indoors like: television, social media, cell phones and video games, it is just as important as ever for them to get outside and explore nature when they are not busy with their studies and other school activities.

The Washington State Parks Junior Ranger program has been in existence for more than 100 years and was one of the first National Park Service youth programs. Kids ages four to 12 can earn their Junior Ranger badge at more than 60 parks statewide. With so many parks in the state to choose from there are numerous options for day and overnight trips.

Earning the WSP Junior Ranger Badge is as easy as one, two, three. First, the child must visit a participating state park with a parent or guardian.

Once at the park they will need to contact a staff member and ask for the free Junior Ranger booklet.

Second, they will fill out the booklet using the symbols provided as they complete each age-appropriate activity.

Third, they will return the booklet to the park's staff, this is when the child will recite the Junior Ranger pledge and receive his or her badge.

A few exciting activities and programs coming up are the Junior Ranger morning program at the Lake Easton State Park amphitheater on Sunday, August 25, the Junior Ranger Oath ceremony and movie night on Saturday, August 24 at Lincoln Rock State Park and Nature Bingo on Saturday, August 24 at Cascade State Park.

Having a Junior Ranger in the family inevitably encourages exploration of the

Upper Valley Museum Hosts Historical Walking Tour

BY BRANDI CHARLES

To say that lifelong Leavenworth residents and Upper Valley Museum volunteers Bob Stroup and Bobbi Ferg are area experts would be the track wide railway thoroughunderstatement of the year, fanatics, in the most respectable sense of the word, or gatekeepers would be more appropriate terms. The Upper Valley Museum and it's dedicated members hosted a historical walking tour through Leavenworth at 10 a.m. on Saturday, Aug. 10, with a proceeding pancake breakfast hosted by the Lions Club. The enthusiasm the hosts have for the town is evident from the second they greet you with warm, friendly smiles and thoughtful handshakes. The day was perfect for the walking tour that was to last about two hours. Crossing Highway 2 from Lions Club Park, the group was shown how tied to the community our guides Bob and Bobbi are as they showed us the brick foundation that was a gift to the town from their graduating class of 1959 with each of their names immortalized into individual bricks. On the other side of the highway the group was shown laminated photos of what the very same spot we were standing in looked like in the late 1800's when it was a sevenfare. One could not help but imagine what it must have been like standing in this spot 120 plus years prior watching the hustle and bustle go by. Though we would stop in numerous places over the course of the tour, a definite highlight was visiting the Grange building to be greeted by long time member Mrs. Shirley Ward. As we were introduced it was pointed out that Mrs. Ward has been a Grange member for just over 70 years. Being involved with anything that long is an accomplishment, but what is so special about Mrs. Ward is her ability to remember events and people long past. The current Grange building was the home of the original Great Northern Depot, the hub of all the activity of the Great Northern Railway. Our guides showed us a photo of what the building looked like all those years ago, with it's wood facade and background free of the crowds of curious tourists of today. The building was moved to it's current spot decades ago and is now adorned with a charming Bavarian-themed facade and is virtually unrecognizable from the simple adornmentfree structure in the picture. While seated in the Grange building Bob, Bobbi and Mrs. Ward regaled the group with a multitude of stories about the history of the town, the railroad and the Grange itself. From the harrowing account of the Great Northern Railway disaster of 1910 in which 100 souls lost their lives, to tales of massive amounts of lumber being transported over the river from the lumber mill on Blackbird Island (then the largest lumber mill in the world). We were told about the impressive history of Ski Hill and it's past as the premier ski jump destination in the world. The tenacity of the women of the Grange who had the forethought to preserve the Grange building, originally leasing it for the whopping price of $50 a year was a point that all three of the guides made sure to highlight as without them, the very building we were sitting in would have been long gone. While still in the Grange

Don't delay the talk: An Early Alzheimer's Diagnosis Can Make a Big Difference

(BPT) - After 30 years of painting commercial buildings, Mario Martinez of San Jose, California, had experienced days like this before - grueling hours under a sun-soaked sky, doing back-breaking work. He loved his job, but after spending hours outside he was ready to go home.

Mario bent down to pick up his paintbrush, roller and can. Turning back to look at his day's work, he paused. His heart sank. He knew something was wrong.

"Mario came home and told me he had painted the wrong side of the doors on the building," his wife Veronica said. "It was alarming because he's been painting buildings for years and never made this kind of mistake. It worried us both."

The couple had both noticed that Mario seemed to be more forgetful recently, but neither had shared their concerns with the other. Now that Mario's memory lapses were interfering with his work, it was time to talk.

Take action through conversation

"Veronica told me I was asking for more and more help," Mario said. "I told her that I was forgetting a lot of the things she asked me to do. The more we talked, the more I realized I had a problem. I was forgetting many moments in my life and not enjoying activities that I had enjoyed before."

The couple's difficult conversation led Mario to his doctor's office and he was eventually diagnosed with Alzheimer's disease.

Mario is not alone. He is one of more than 5 million Americans living with Alzheimer's - a fatal brain disease that causes problems with memory, thinking and behavior. Every 65 seconds someone in the United States develops Alzheimer's disease and it's the country's sixthleading cause of death.

Despite Alzheimer's growing impact, many families struggle with discussing the issue. A recent Alzheimer's Association survey reveals that 72 percent of Americans say that talking to close family members about cognitive Number Two then turns to decline would be challenging for them. However, having whispers the sentence exactly as they heard it into the ear of these difficult, but important conversations sooner can prevent a crisis and improve health options and outcomes.

Reach out for help

To encourage and help more families discuss cognitive problems sooner, the Alzheimer's Association, in partnership with the Ad Council, has launched the "Our Stories" campaign. "Our Stories" features real stories of people who noticed cognitive changes in a family member and took the first, difficult step to initiate a conversation.

'It's understandable that many families are reluctant to express their concerns and start a conversation, but there are good reasons to do so," said Ruth Drew, director of information and support services, Alzheimer's Association. "Initiating conversations sooner can enable early diagnosis, which offers many important benefits, including allowing more time for critical care planning, better disease management and providing diagnosed individuals a voice in their future care."

The "Our Stories" website (alz. org/ourstories) offers families tools and resources, including customizable conversation starters, a list of early signs and symptoms of Alzheimer's, benefits of early diagnosis, a downloadable discussion guide and other resources.

Whether you're noticing changes in yourself or a loved one, starting a conversation about Alzheimer's can be difficult, but it can make a big difference and there are resources to help. When something feels different, it could be Alzheimer's - now is the time to talk.

Every time you go to a different place for medical care or see someone different from your usual medical care provider, you start a round of 'Telephone: Medical Edition", opening up the opportunity for important medical information to get missed, miscommunicated or misunderstood.

Remember when your family saw just one doctor, who would see you at his or her clinic and come to the hospital to care for you if you became sick or injured? That level of individualized care rarely ever happens today. Today's medical care system is fragmented, split between different types of care done in different places and by different people.

Instead of having most doctors having to travel to the hospital early in the morning before their clinic opens and again in the late afternoon after their last patient appointment is finished, most hospitals today hire their own doctors called hospitalists, who take care of everyone admitted to that facility.

Hospitalists and nurses work in specific time segments or shifts, and when it's time to go home they transfer the care of their patients to someone else, called a "hand-off". They communicate what needs to be done to their colleague coming on-shift, but will that

If all of your prescriptions are sent to the same place, it's easier for the pharmacist to detect drugs that SHOULDN'T be given together and intervene for you, preventing an urgent physician visit, a trip to the emergency department, or worse.

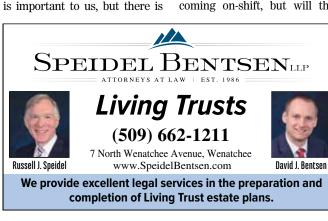

4. Request results of tests and clinic visits be shared with ALL of your doctors.

When a specialist orders lab tests, always ask the lab to send copies of your results to your other main medical providers, keeping them on the same page. If your cardiologist changes your blood pressure medicine, ask them to send a copy of your visit directly to your family physician and make sure your own medication list is updated to reflect the change.

5. Ask Questions.

You can help avoid mistakes by speaking up if something doesn't make sense or look right to you. Aware of what can go wrong, my physician colleagues personally make sure that their own loved ones always have a trusted family or friend with them during their hospital stay, ready to ask questions if something doesn't seem quite right.

Six Questions to Ask Your Healthcare Provider About Out-of-Pocket Medication Costs

(BPT) - Even in the privacy of a doctor's office, many patients hesitate to discuss one subject - money.

While nearly one in four Americans over the age of 50 feels stressed about their medical bills, only half of those have spoken to their healthcare provider about it, according to a University of Michigan poll. But it pays to ask about the cost of your treatment. The same poll found that twothirds of patients who talked to their healthcare provider about drug costs received a recommendation for a lowercost alternative.

Speaking with vour healthcare provider about treatment options and outof-pocket costs should be one of the first things you do after being diagnosed with a chronic illness. But sometimes it can be hard to know how to start the conversation, or what questions to ask. As the largest independent charitable organization dedicated to helping people pay out-ofpocket costs for their prescribed treatments, the Patient Access Network (PAN) Foundation helps patients manage the financial burden of care every day. Dan Klein, President and CEO of the PAN Foundation, suggests asking your healthcare provider the following questions if you are concerned about the cost of your medication.

1. Can you or someone in your office help me find out how much this ### medication will cost outof-pocket?

prices Although drug fluctuate, and patients pay different amounts depending on their health insurance, healthcare providers or their staff can usually provide an estimated cost for a treatment or can call your pharmacy and find out. This simple question is an easy way to start the cost-of-care conversation and let your healthcare provider know that you want to explore ways to minimize your costs.

2. Does this medication have a generic equivalent that I can use? Many brand-name drugs, especially those that have been on the market for a long time, have generic equivalents that are significantly cheaper. These generic copies contain identical active ingredients and are rigorously tested by the FDA to ensure they are as safe and effective as the brandname versions.

3. Could a change in dosage or frequency help reduce my costs, but still be effective?

on Out-of-pocket costs should not prevent you from accessing and adhering to your treatment. But controlled changes to your dosage or frequency may help you lower your costs without compromising effectiveness. It's crucial that this is only done under medical advice, as making cost-cutting decisions without your healthcare provider's input can be harmful.

4. Is there a less expensive way to receive my treatment?

Depending on your condition, there may be multiple ways to receive treatment, some more expensive than others. For example, oral anti-cancer agents have become an increasingly common part of cancer treatment plans but are sometimes more expensive than traditional intravenous (I.V.) administration. Be sure to ask your healthcare provider if there is a cheaper treatment option for you that meets your healthcare needs. 5. Do you have drug coupon discount cards for my medication, or free samples?

Drug companies often give healthcare providers discount coupons or free samples to dispense to patients. It can be easy for healthcare providers to forget about these, so don't be afraid to ask! Drug manufacturer discount coupons can only be used by those with commercial insurance, not by people with Medicare or Medicaid.

6. Can you or someone in your office help me find financial assistance to cover my costs? Is there a charitable foundation that I can apply to?

Charitable foundations, like PAN, can help patients pay their out-of-pocket costs for prescription medications. Your healthcare provider's office should be familiar with these programs and can point you in the right direction. You can learn more about patient assistance charities and connect with resources to help you manage your chronic illness at panfoundation. org. You can also download the FundFinder app from that website, which will notify you when assistance becomes available from any of the major charitable patient assistance foundations.

Who cares about the debt?

According to the Trump administration's estimate, America's brand-new budget will add nearly a trillion dollars to our national debt - in just one year. That's because the budget included an 8% increase in government spending versus a 3% expected rise in tax receipts.

There's one conclusion that is clear: The Tea Party is dead.

It seems that no one cares about the debt anymore, certainly not the financial markets. In theory, if you are already trillions of dollars in debt, and routinely spend more than you earn, any competent bank would charge you a very higher interest rate - or not loan money to you at all.

However, the bond market is currently willing to loan the US government money at less than 2% for 30 years. It's not just the US government that is falling deeper and deeper into debt. Corporate America has more debt than at any time in history - and the stock market doesn't seem to care about that either. That makes me wonder: Perhaps Trump, the Republicans, the Democrats, the business world, the stock market and the bond market have it exactly right. Maybe we don't have to worry about massive amounts of debt. There's a small, growing school of thought in the economics world called Modern Monetary Theory (MMT). The very basic idea behind it is that huge amounts of debt really don't matter, as long as a country can print its own currency and has low inflation. America checks both of those boxes. In fact, the last 10 years makes MMT seem like economic gospel.

However, we all know in our hearts that this is not sustainable. Someday, there will be too much debt, and no one will be able to ignore it. That won't be a good day. Obviously, this is not a Trump problem - at least it's not only a Trump problem. But, when he was running for President, he said he would pay down the debt in 8 years. Clearly, that's not going to happen. Even worse, he's not even talking about it. If Trump isn't going to fix this, who is? If Trump supporters don't care, who will? It's unlikely you'll see Democrats making our debt a major priority anytime soon.

It's a hard problem to solve, because the bad stuff might happen next year – or decades from now. I'm not the first person to express fear over our increasingly massive piles of debt.

This column is almost certainly a rip-off of far smarter people than me who've been saying the same thing for decades. It's also a hard problem to solve because there are no easy solutions. However, there are obvious solutions: Raise taxes, and spend less onentitle-

EDUCATIONAL CAMPS

MASON ELLIOTT

The Icicle Creek Center for the Arts has had a wonderful summer hosting a variety of camps. Let's take a look back and see all the camps that we have hosted.

Our summer camps series started with a week long Summer Symphony Camp where young musicians from around the Pacific Northwest came to practice their craft. This camp ended with a spectacular performance in our Snowy Owl Theater.

Next, we had the 25th annual Icicle Creek Chamber Music Festival and Institute. And what an incredible three weeks it was. 27 of the top students from around the world came to practice and learn from our world-renowned staff. As good as it was this year, next year we have plans of making it even bigger and better, so stay tuned!

We then moved onto our two week theater program where aspiring young actors from around the area came and learned about both acting and musicals. Both weeks were capped off by the students performing snippets from plays and musicals in front of friends and family.

Lastly, we finished up the summer with our Young Pianists Camp. Amazing musicians came and delighted campus with beautiful renditions from the likes of Bach, Beethoven and Schubert.

We love supporting and growing the arts and it is only possible with help from you! Your donations make all of this possible and we, along with all of the students, would like to give you a huge thank you!

As always, like us on Facebook and follow us on Instagram to keep up to date with all of these great camps and other events hosted by the ICCA!

Junior Ranger Program Offers Excuse to Get Outdoors

State Park system for siblings, parents/guardians and friends. The State Parks host many free days throughout the year with the next being Sunday, August 25.

For those who are so inclined a Discover Pass is a great option to buy so that you can accompany your Junior Ranger all year long.

For $30, an annual pass offers vehicle access to millions of acres of state recreation lands in Washington, including more than 100 developed state parks, nearly 700 water-access points and 2,000 miles of water and land recreation trails.

With a new school year comes the excitement of having a new teacher, making new friends and learning new subjects, but it can also be a very stressful time in a student's life.

Marilyn Price-Mitchell of the Washington State Family and Community Engagement trust says "There are many scientific studies that underscore the benefits of nature, including stress relief, improved concentration, creativity, and improved mental health.

For families, the great outdoors is a natural playground that contributes to a child's positive development." So while the weather is still shorts and t-shirt compliant a trip to one of the many State Parks within a few hour's radius is an affordable option that the whole family can enjoy and benefit from, plus on Monday morning the Junior Ranger in your life will likely have the coolest "what I did this weekend" story in the class.

Upper Valley Museum Hosts Historical Walking Tour

building we were told how entrepreneur James J. Hill was a key figure in the formation of the town.

Ranking amongst the wealthiest men in America at the time, Hill founded the Great Northern Railway which was the only privately owned railroad in the world.

The formation of the railway created job opportunities for people from all over the world, including Chinese workers who were banned from working for other railroads. As the story goes with all areas that are flushed with a sudden influx of workers, there will inevitably be a sudden influx of establishments more than happy to help them spend their wages. At one point Leavenworth was home to 13 taverns, it's hard to believe a town of this size could have so many, but at the time there were no bowling alleys, no television, no internet, so the throngs of workers would simply visit these establishments to wash their boredom away. Not to be outdone by the taverns, Leavenworth had it's share of "houses of ill-repute."

The ladies would simply allow themselves be seen on the numerous balconies around town, even sunbathing on a giant rock in town as a form of "advertisement."

The tour would stop along a number of other points of interest in town and and photos were shown of what each spot looked like 100, 80, 50 years prior.

Our guides Bob and Bobbi had photographic memories of what each building housed when they were growing up, often including the names of the people who owned them! Our final stop was the extremely impressive building is the hub of many varied activities in the community, including the Leavenworth Roller Derby. Though the hall was closed at the time, our guides arranged for a private tour ahead of time. The first thing you do as you enter the hall is look up, it's much more grand than it looks from the outside and one can see why it's so popular as a host for weddings, corporate and a number other types of events. On the wall of the front hall hangs a lovely handcrafted quilt, sewn by local townswomen.

The quilt serves as a record of the history of the town, from it's very inception, to the importance of the role of the fruit industry, to the development of the Ski Hill theatre. It was here that Bob made sure to highlight the importance of women to the development of the town.

It was women who after the railroad left town and the mill was shut down, bought many of the ten abandoned buildings. It was women of the Grange; like Mrs. Shirley Ward, who worked tirelessly to preserve the Grange building and continue their work as storytellers keeping the history of Leavenworth alive for future generations.

This tour was an extremely informative delight that visitors and residents will find enjoyable and a great way to spend a Saturday. The Upper Valley Museum sponsors this historical walking tour again on September 14 and a special railroad and mill tour on October 12. A five-dollar donation is suggested.
