A new addition has been made to Leavenworth - the Link Transit Wilkommen Park and Ride located at 200 Ward Strasse had its grand opening June 28 at 11:30 p.m. with a ribbon cutting ceremony and Munchen Haus lunch.

"I want to welcome everyone to our ribbon cutting for this park and ride transit center investment we were able to make in the Leavenworth area through a partnership with the city, Washington State Department of Transportation and Link Transit," said Richard DeRock, Link Transit General Manager.

The new transportation hub was made possible through a state grant, WSDOT, that is connected to a funding program that invests in transit that can reduce congestion and reduce vehicle miles from the borders, according to DeRock.

"With the traffic we had in Leavenworth and the delays that were on the highways, it was really an opportunity," said DeRock. "It should have the potential to reduce some of the demand and traffic in the borders as well as support the growth in the community in ways that are more sensitive to the needs out there."

Some familiar faces in attendance was Mayor Cheri Farivar, Council member and Link Board Member Mia Bretz, DeRock, Washington State District 12 representative Mike Steele and WSDOT Deputy Secretary of Transportation, Keith Metcalf.

"We here in the Upper Valley are really fortunate to have access to a public transit system and now we have this beautiful new facility, allowing for efficient transfer, much needed parking - and soon a shuttle system to navigate Leavenworth streets for commuters, employers and visitors," said Mayor Farivar.

Mayor Farivar shared some words about the latest public transportation avenue available for residents and tourists, what it means for Leavenworth and how it impacts festival season.

"I would like to thank everyone who took part in the planning, funding and building of the Leavenworth Link Transfer center," said Mayor Farivar. "The people of Leavenworth, our down valley employees and all of our visitors will continue to benefit from this facility for decades to come."

The ribbon cutting ceremony also had an opportunity to dig in to lunch provided by local favorite, Munchen Haus, and a demo shuttle was running from 12:30 until 2:30 p.m.

City grants temporary ice rink Special Use permit despite hesitation

By KALIE DRAGO
Echo Reporter

A special use permit was put into place for an upcoming winter recreation fixture, Holiday on Ice, a temporary ice rink - only after some concern was voiced, grumbling from concerned residents and even debate amongst council members.

After Rich Yakkey, Holidays on Ice owner, approached the council on his third visit in February, the council put into motion the development of a special use permit for the project.

"Mr. Yakkey's company will be providing the necessary equipment to construct, operate and then maintaining 75 foot by 100 foot temporary ice rink," said Joel Walinski, city administrator. "That will be at Lions Club park. They'll be open some point in early November through January, approximately three months."

The special use permit is a measure to ensure the city can provide a location and the basic infrastructure needs for the temporary ice rink. The needed equipment from the city will serve future purposes and not just tied to the temporary ice skating rink, according to Walinski.

"On the city's side, the city will have to provide the space.. we'll have to provide the box

(for the three phase transformer from the Chelan PUD)," said Walinski. "In terms of trash, access to the bathrooms, plow the snow. We (Public Works) already do those so I don't see an increase in staff time."

Holidays on Ice will handle the the majority of the elements internally, without the city's aid - maintenance, skate rentals and the concession stand will be the company's responsibility. Once Holiday

Wickett-Ford brings dance and culture to Leavenworth Public Library

By AL STOVER

Although the theme of the Leavenworth Public Library's summer program is a "Universe of Stories," local children and adults received a glimpse into other cultures from around the world, courtesy of Susan Wickett-Ford.

The Seattle-born writer and dancer gave a presentation "Jump for Joy, More Village Rhythms from Around the World" on June 25 at the Leavenworth library.

According to her website, Wickett-Ford uses dance to educate children about different cultures. She has written for the stage and performed comedy monologues, completed various artistic projects, and has written the novel "Lover's Waltz."

Wickett-Ford began the presentation by handing out scarves to the children and placing them on the floor. She likened each child's scarf to a separate country and had asked them to dance within their boundaries.

Using music and dance, Wickett-Ford narrated a story about a child who traveled to different places - like Ninja Land and Rhythm Land - before he met other children on the final island in his journey. As she described each country, she had children act out moves associated with each island.

After telling the story, Wickett-Ford asked the children to show them their own moves.

"We're getting a whole range of human emotion," Wickett-Ford said as she watched the children dance.

She also encouraged parents to participate in the fun.

"One of the things I love about dancing, is that we are doing it together," she said.

The audience also watched a seven-minute video that featured dances from various countries, such as ribbon dancing from China, the Russian Folk Dance and castells, which are human towers built in festivals in Barcelona, Spain.

Wickett-Ford explained that some cultures will take their village dance, practice and perform them in front of a wider audience.

Once the video was finished, Wickett-Ford and the audience performed the dances seen on the video. During the Russian Folk Dance, kids also learned a little bit of Russian numbers and words.

Kids also used wooden sticks to perform the Mexican Machete dance before transitioning to Chinese ribbon dancing, followed with a traditional Hawaiian dance.

For the final dance, Wickett-Ford and the audience performed a circle dance from Middle East. At different points, everyone would move toward the middle before going back outside.

Wickett-Ford noted that the art of dancing, no matter what the culture, brings everyone, young and old, together.

"We're just taking a piece of the culture and seeing what is so special about it," she added.

Community comes together for Ramos fundraiser

By AL STOVER

The sounds of laughter and hits like Pharrel's "Happy," could be heard from outside of Alpine Lakes Elementary School on June 22, as family members, classmates and community members came together for local high school Kelvin Ramos for a fundraiser.

The event help raised funds for Ramos and his family. Ramos suffers from muscular dystrophy, a progressive condition that leads to muscle weakness and disability.

He and his family fly to Texas for his therapy sessions.

Tacos, tamales, pupuzas and other delicious food items were sold. There were also prizes and other items donated by local businesses. Several folks also volunteered at the fundraiser.

"I'm happy that everyone came out to help with my therapy and (expenses) to Texas," Ramos said.

Folks who want to help Ramos and his family can go to Cashmere Valley Bank and make a donation to the Kelvin Ramos benefit account.

City Council gathered June 25 at 6:30 p.m. with the plan to plant themselves on either the supportive or opposing side of the Link Transit ballot and put in motion supplying more bike racks.

Link Transit general manager, Richard DeRock, presented the ballot measure at the May 14 study session. Essentially the .4 % Link collects from 8.4% sales tax in Leavenworth will increase with an addition .2%.

This increase isn't to keep Link afloat, the public transportation unit is financially sturdy to continue running as is, this is just to fuel an expansion that the public voiced they wanted.

"We heard from the community they were interested in a more robust system than we currently have," said Mia Bretz, council member. "Compared to other transit authorities in the state, we have not done any increases when others have. It is modest and timely that this initiative came about - and it came about from the feedback we got from the public."

The implementation of the increase will be gradual and the .1% increase will occur in January 2020 and then the next .1% increase will be January 2022.

(DeRock) provided some information determining what that (the future projects) would be: Expanding Saturday and adding Sunday services to all towns, increase transit (i.e. more service) on existing routes, expanding coverage and reach to other areas, improving faster travel times between Leavenworth and Wenatchee. So what they're asking for is the .2% and that would be a phased increase," said Joel Walinski, City Administrator.

There was a public hearing prior to the vote so that the council could use the opportunity to hear from residents and Link representatives before swaying either way.

Council member Sharon Waters seemed heavily interested in determining how much benefit Leavenworth residents would reap from the future projects.

"I like to see it be more specific where they mention Leavenworth and where they say services for all cities and town. Because in my experience, the things you think you're getting, you may not be getting all of it. And that bothers me," said Waters. "I've seen too many things, the things they said we're going to happen did not."

A particular point that was zeroed in on how Leavenworth will benefit was the commuters that trickle into Leavenworth for those odd timed shifts when Link isn't always running.

Those that infiltrate the city for those second shifts, weekend shifts and night owls would be a huge beneficiary of the upgraded transit system.

"The public has asked for more. We are active in each town, each city we serve to do a better job. We're not perfect, there's more we can do. The proposal is to expand the service," said Russ Speidel, Link tax measure ballot campaign chair. "There's more that's being provided financially to Link, it's about six million dollars when it's in full sweep when it's actually up to .2%. It's a detailed process that takes time to implement."

With the promise of 30 projects for the public transportation unit to expand and offer more frequent services, many pertaining directly to Leavenworth residents, the council approved the motion to support the ballot measure.

"Bikers aren't an usual sight around Leavenworth, residents taking the scenic route by biking to work and tourists biking with the beautiful scenery as the backdrop for their ride. The Parking Advisory Committee is picking up the pace on alleviating some downtown issues - particularly with accommodating bikes. Their suggestion to purchase six bike racks should help the problem of overflowing bike racks and the issue of popular joints not offering nearby bike racks for patrons.

"The Parking Advisory Committee is asking for your approval for an expenditure. We'll use dollars, 50% from the parking fund and 50% from Lodging Tax fund," said Walinski.

The recommended locations for the racks are: areas on Front Street, Commercial Street, 9th Street and in a lot P1 thirty minute parking stall. Each bike rack cost $1,000. Eight bikes fit into each bike rack so there will

LEAVENWORTH ROTARY NEWS PAUL HARRIS FELLOW AWARD

Rotarian President Penny Carpenter presents Dan Elridge with certificate in recognition as a Paul Harris Fellow as John Dawson left and Ross Frank look on. Both are Fire Commissioners.

Served as a volunteer from October of 1998 to October of 2018. He spent almost every day from 8 to 5 manning the front desk and responding to incidents, all without compensation. He also served at Ward's funeral home and at the Nazarene church. Dan was in charge of putting up and taking down all of the flags for businesses who signed up for this service on each holiday.

He spent countless hours cooking for the rest of the volunteers and during the fire investigators conference. He used his skills as a retired baker to make special baked goods for birthdays, weddings and memorials.

But the most memorable was his attitude. He always had a smile on his face even though he had endured some serious health issues and the loss of his wife. Congratulations to Dan for a well-deserved award.

By KALIE DRAGO
Echo Reporter

Now that council member Jason Lundgren has found his footing after a year and a half serving on Leavenworth's City Council, he's ready to stay submerged in the process of representing his community.

Lundgren is re-running for a seat on council in this upcoming election.

"I love the work the council does," said Lundgren. "It's very, very meaningful in all follow the herd, Lundgren has been a pivotal member on the Leavenworth City Council.

Lundgren says that him being receptive and open minded is helpful in his role as a council man.

His ability to listen to all angles of an argument is a product of his day job that aids him in his work with city council business.

"I'm a very good listener and open to diverse points of view. I've done twenty years of collaborative work. My job is pulling divided people in a common direction," said Lundgren. "Those skills apply to City Council."

Lundgren has three main goals he's concentrating on for the community of Leavenworth. He is working on bring an industrial composter to Leavenworth in his effort to sustain and reduce waste from the downtown core. Lundgren also wants to raise awareness and increase the city's preparedness for wildfires, as he's illustrated recently by bringing this conversation up.

Lastly he wants to do a community assessment of a community center that could benefit a wide range demographic.

"(The two big challenges for being on council is) I feel like there's a perception of distrust with city council and local government, but I think these people have a lot of integrity. The other challenge is giving council the time it deserves," said Lundgren.

He is eyeing the upcoming term with an idea of the obstacles that crop up when a person is given city council responsibility and is prepared to face them head on.

Now that he's familiar with council, the challenges and the time it takes; he is ready to take on another term.

"I'm becoming comfortable being the sounding board for the public," said Lundgren.

Bilingual program flourish in the schools

By KALIE DRAGO
Echo Reporter

With the school hallways emptied out, there is still tasks and conversations to be done.

The school board gathered on June 24 to discuss the bilingual and migrant program and formally dot their i's before new superintendent Tracey Beckendorf-Edou steps into Bill Molsenbocker's shoes for the upcoming 2019-2020 school year.

Emily Ross, Peshastin-Dryden Elementary principal and Migrant and Bilingual programs director, presented the flourishing programs in an effort for the school board to approve the program again.

"These are two different programs. Transitional Bilingual Instructional program and the Migrant program, they're completely separate," explained Ross.

Beyond the students within the programs success, Ross emphasized the degree the staff that works within the two programs have hit milestones as well. She noted that it was the first year every school had an EL teacher to aid students and there wasn't heavy guidance from the director, which Ross says is a good thing.

"This year that team really kept going without individual direction from me, which was really nice. We met together monthly and we coordinated and we planned, but they really let their feet do the work which was wonderful," said Ross.

She also offered insight in the last year's success and explained the core elements of the program including how students are assessed for their improvement.

"The students take this yearly assessment. Every year, any student who qualifies for this program needs to take this assessment," said Ross. "That includes those who sign do not be included in the instruction (from the program)."

The students are tested on listening, speaking, reading and writing in English yearly and the results are used to track the progression the student is making. There are three levels the students can be linked to: emerging, progressing and efficient. She reiterated the assessment is challenging, regardless of whether a student is well versed in the English language or not.

"Our biggest amount of exiting (meaning they exit the program in the following year) students are here at Alpine (Lakes Elementary)," Ross. "80% of our exited students passed the Smarter Balance assessment which is really, really, really amazing."

Ross also touched on what was in store for the program in the future. There is a Parent Advisory Committee incorporated. She mentioned some new staff members, but despite some changes in that department, the dedication to the program will remain.

"We are also one of the longest exited EL programs in the state. So it takes our students longer to exit the program, but once they do, they're solid. Really solid," said Ross.

Ross also was eager to share the Hispanic Heritage Month celebration that racked in a lot of community participation and was a way to intertwine the students, culture and their growth in the program. This upcoming school year the celebration will fall on September 20. Overall, the program was given not only approval, but applauded for the work being done.

"I have to give Emily some kudos. She has done more in her time here than we have probably done in 20 years," said Molsenbocker.

Prior to the regularly scheduled school board meeting, there was a budget meeting where they discussed figures and formulas for how the fiscal end of things will unravel in the upcoming school year.

Other business:

- Three soccer enthusiasts approached the board about finding funding for middle school soccer, something they found imperative after a survey was conducted. The school board seemed receptive to their comments, but there is a lot of monetary and other matters to consider.

- The board updated Leave Sharing policy and procedure for Cascade School District staff. Leave sharing, which is when staff can donate their sick leave to colleagues, is optional to Washington schools. Cascade opts in, therefore the state has certain rules to follow. Now several additional reasons for shared leave are permitted: domestic violence, sexual assault, stalking and some others.

- The school board will start incorporating state standards into their self assessment.

Cascade Jr. Tennis Camp

By AL STOVER

Several Leavenworth children attended the during the Cascade Junior Tennis Camp, June 17-21, where they learned some tennis fundamentals, tips and techniques that will help them on the court.

Cascade High School Tennis Head Coach Mark Hassinger ran the camp on the courts next to the Cascade School District administration office. The young athletes who attended the camp got to play on the same courts as the CHS Kodiak tennis teams practiced and played on during their 2019 season, which culminated in a third-place state finish for the girls.

While the CHS practices focused on competition, Hassinger, who was in his third year of running the youth camp, said he was more focused on teaching kids the basics of tennis.

"The camp is to get kids excited and energized," Hassinger said. "Some kids play tennis with their families, which is great. It's a lifelong sport and I just want to get kids to play on the courts."

The camp was broken into two groups with Icicle River Middle School students playing in the first session, followed by elementary-aged children. Coach Hassinger noted that some younger athletes played in the first session with their older siblings.

During the camp, students learned and practiced their hand-eye coordination with drills where they balanced, bounced and dribbled the tennis balls on their racquets. Hassinger noted that balancing the ball with consistency can help strengthen the muscles in their forearm.

After getting a feel for the racquet, campers transitioned into learning the forehand and backhand shots. They also spent time practicing volleys and serving tennis balls over the net.

When it comes to hitting, Coach Hassinger advised players to keep their racquet perpendicular to the ball. Tessa Hassinger added that in most sports, athletes will want to go toward the ball, but in tennis, players want to wait until it comes to them before smacking it away.

Coach Hassinger also recommended that players should not be stationary, and but rather keep their feet loose, especially during a match.

Cascade High School Stella Johnson feeds tennis balls to one of the campers to hit. Johnson was one of the Kodiak athletes who helped during the junior tennis camp.

"People think tennis is just arms and a racquet," he added. "But there's a lot of feet work. You've got to be on your toes and moving."

Along with learning the basics, campers played games and practiced some live match scenarios and played games. Kids also participated in Starburst challenges where they would earn a fruity candy for completing a task. One of these involved catching a ball in their shirt after Hassinger bounced it across the net. This showed campers how to determine where the ball was going after a bounce.

Hassinger was not alone in running the youth camp. Assisting him were his daughter, Cascade High School alumna Tessa Hassinger, who once wore a CHS tennis jersey, as well as members of the Kodiak tennis teams.

CHS tennis player Stella Johnson helped on the camp's final day. Johnson, who finished sixth in girls' doubles at state in May, said she enjoyed helping at the camp. She and Hassinger also noticed the progression of campers through the fourth day.

"I talked to Coach H (Hassinger) and from the beginning to the end of camp, these kids have improved so much," Johnson said. "In the earlier group we had four kids play some great tennis, including one who never played before camp. It was super cool to see."

While campers learned a bit about tennis fundamentals, they also gained some insight on perseverance and how can relate to tennis. Hassinger shared the story about playing basketball when he was 10 years old and struggled to make his shots, which turned him against the game.

Although tennis is a difficult sport, Hassinger encouraged the campers to not give up on it if they "don't pick it up at first."

"Tennis is hard and we don't want them to give up, (rather) we want to set them up for success," Coach Hassinger added.

Trygve Sorensen was one of the local kids who attended the first session with his sister, Ingrid Sorensen. He said played a little tennis before attending the camp, and ended up enjoying it.

Another camper, Logan Rowles, had fun as well, especially when it came to playing a 3-on-3 where he, Coach Hassinger, Tessa Hassinger and the other coaches had to hit the ball while keeping it in a small space. Rowles also liked hitting the ball on each side of the net.

"It's awesome seeing kids doing stuff (outside) and trying a new skill," Coach Hassinger said.

Little riders receive mountain biking lessons at camp

By AL STOVER

Although school is out for summer break, several local little mountain bikers received some handy education that they can take with them on trails and hills.

The Central Evergreen Mountain Bike Alliance held a Beginners Youth Skills Camp for 6-9 year-olds, from June 17-21 at the Leavenworth Ski Hill.

The Central Washington Evergreen Mountain Bike Alliance is a "non-profit organization focuses on mountain bike advocacy, educating riders of all abilities, especially youth, and building and maintaining sustainable trails in the greater Wenatchee Valley area."

The organization hosts the skills camps to provide lessons to riders in order to help them become better bike riders on mountain biking trails.

One of the first lessons campers learned was to perform a check on their bikes before they ride for the trail, what Instructor Courtney Feeney referred to as the "ABC's of bike checking."

Before riders hit the trail, they should pinch their tire to check the air pressure, then examine the breaks to make sure they are working properly and clean their chain if needed.

After completing these steps, riders should check their quick release, then their headset and handlebars to make sure they are straight, and not loose.

Folks should also make sure they bring their helmet every time they go out for a ride. Instructor Joel Augustine said to have the chin strap tight enough to where only two fingers can fit under it.

Throughout the week, riders learned various breaking techniques and the following body positions: neutral, ready, steady, forward, backwards and lateral. They also received instruction on how and when to shift gears when climbing a hill, and keeping their pedals level, dropping their heels and fingers on the break as they are descending techniques.

On the fifth day, riders learned the importance of cleaning their bike. Augustine demonstrated on how properly to clean and lubricate a bike chain.

"It's important to keep your bike clean," Fenney said. "Rocks and dirt can get in the gears and if you don't clean them, you won't be able to shift properly."

Feeney added that campers also learned numerous safety tips and how to ride in groups along the trail during their five days at camp.

"This group had a blast," Fenney said. "Some of these kids have gone and ridden on the trails after the camp was over (for the day)."

In addition to becoming better riders, campers had the opportunity to perform some trail maintenance. While riding, Feeney and Augustine also recommended campers stop slowly and refrain from skidding, as it could ruin their tires and damage trails.

Avi Carvitto was one of the campers and has been mountain biking since she was six year ago. Carvitto said she had fun at the camp and that her favorite part was riding on the trails.

Greer Swoboda was one a young volunteers who helped campers. Swoboda said she enjoyed volunteering at the camp as it allowed her to pass along her riding knowledge to the little riders, especially ones new to mountain biking.

"It brought back the nostalgia of when I was younger and starting to ride," Swoboda said. "It's awesome seeing the campers learn skills and that I can help teach them."

The Basic Skills Camp is not the only event Central Evergreen Mountain Bike Alliance will host at the Ski Hill. The organization returns host an Intermediate Youth Skills Camp for 9-12 year olds from July 8-12.

City grants temporary ice rink Special Use permit despite hesitation

on Ice reaches $200,000 ticket sales, 50% of ticket sales will be paid back to the city. Once the city reaches $10,000 in payment, the city's ticket sale intake will be reduced to 25%.

"I would like to say I'm totally in support of this. It is an opportunity for us to have a skating rink, albeit small. I would love to have a bigger option, but this is now. This gives us a chance to see how many people would use it," said Margaret Neighbors, council member. "I think it will be something that will add to the charm of Leavenworth."

Council member, Jason Lundgren, seemed hesitate to cast a swift approval and questioned the noise, the parking, the time that the ice rink will close and how the neighborhoods near the future ice rink will react. He rattled off several factors wedged between him and his vote of approval.

"Have we or will we do any outreach to the neighbors? I noticed that their noise will be permitted to 10 p.m. which is with code, but nonetheless I wonder has anyone spoken with the neighbors who are going to have a new thing in their backyard," asked Lundgren to which Walinski replied, not yet but the city has plans to contact those nearby. "I don't want it to prevent us to have a more full fledged ice rink in the future. I'm a little bit concerned about the exterior look of the ice rink. Where do we expect customers to park?"

Walinski stated that the city has provided parking behind Lion's Park to the temporary rink and the pool parking lot will be available. The expectation is that there isn't much anticipation for individuals to drive to the rink, but rather walk from downtown.

One concerned neighbor, Lisa Magee, echoed Lundgren's worry about the noise extending until 10 p.m. seeping into the surrounding neighborhoods.

"Live a block away from here and we get all kinds of noise in the winter time. So 'oh this is not going to matter after eight or ten at night', it does matter," said Magee.

Local resident, Marco Aurilio, had a different series of questions to prod the council with. He particularly framed his curiosity around his desire to have a much larger, more community driven ice skating rink.

"I want a rink desperately. The rink they're providing is too small for programs (such as figure skating, hockey)," said Aurilio. "It's (Holidays on Ice rink) not even going to represent what we could achieve. We are a sporting community. We need something that's going to provide something we can figure skate on, play ice hockey on and not be overcrowded."

Aurilio then launched into his question as to why this ice rink was approved but a previously proposed ice rink that would be large and safe enough for programs was denied by the city. Walinski leaped in to answer this question.

"There's nobody that came forward that said they would own, operate and run an ice rink over in that area whereas this gentleman contacted us the last couple of years that he was very interested in doing that. That's probably the number one reason why," said Walinski.

Lundgren casted his vote in favor of the rink that seemed to be tipping in the middle as he weighed the pros and cons; but first he regarded Aurilio's worries with a consoling prediction as to how it will work out in his favor in the long run.

"I hope I'm right about this, but I actually think this ice skating rink despite its flaws might actually help you see your vision in the future. Having an ice skating rink that crushes it over there and does really well could help your case," said Lundgren. "As much as this thing makes me a little uncomfortable, I think it could actually help us into a nicer facility for everybody."

Leavenworth's Daisy Swart waits for her teammate to reach her before beginning her portion of the medley relay.

City gives nod of approval to ballot measure and bike racks be 48 bike spots for those gliding into downtown.

"We're gaining 48 bicycle spots and losing only one single 30 minute stall," said Mayor Cheri Farivar.

A&W Paving was approved to do the process of a double shot chip seal for pavement improvement and patching work with the bid of $38,450.

The work will be done on: portions of Front Street, Commercial and 9th Street intersection, Schloze and Joseph Street intersection, Benton Street north of Ski Hill Drive and Pine Street east of Titus Road.

Other business tended to:

- Bretz shared some positive news about pieces of legislation that came from the state: the funding for local affordability housing projects could come from retail excise tax and sales tax that's currently allocated for the state.

- With fourth of July on the horizon, it was reiterated there is a firework ban.

- City attorney, Thomas Graafstra shared that the Friends of Leavenworth has served the city to appeal items related to the Adventure Park, but stated the petition to make its way through the Superior Court would take somewhere between two and half to five months.

- Preliminary results from the Highway 2 Corridor Study should be released by September, there will be public meetings throughout the process and the study should be completed by the end of 2019.

Cooking With Teri

Nothing taste better than a glass of perfect sweet tea on a hot summer's day.

A Southernism

June is National Tea Month, and it's time to celebrate the preferred drink of Summer, iced tea. As a southerner I drink tea every day with iced tea being my favorite. My preferred way is sweet tea, which has way to much sugar in it to be good for you. I also enjoy a good hot cup of tea on chilly days. In the South iced tea is served at lunch and dinner and drank throughout the day. The best iced tea starts with a good tea and cold water, let the tea steep but never boil. Personally I am not a fruit tea fan or any tea that is not fresh brewed, so call me a tea snob. So as the lazy days of Summer have began sit back relax and enjoy tea your way.

SOUTHERN SWEET TEA

- 5-8 family size tea bags or 12 regular tea bags
- 1 quart boiling water

- 3 quarts cold water
- 1/4 teaspoon baking soda

Directions

1. Sprinkle the baking soda into a pitcher. Add tea bags to the pitcher/baking soda. Pour boiling water over the tea bags. Cover and steep for 15 minutes.
2. Remove the tea bags, add the sugar and stir until the sugar is dissolved. Refrigerate until cold and ready to drink.
