School construction projects winding down

By Ian Dunn Editor

Construction on the new Alpine Lakes Elementary School is coming along well, according Cascade School District Construction Liaison John Henri.

"The paving is done. They letic field, everything should be close to completion by June 27, he said. The big issue right now is the elevator at the school, which is needed to move the furniture up to the second floor.

"Right now. the furniture is postponed to June 11, but we couldn't because of the elevaThe idea is to get as much paving done as we can by this fall, so we don't have to do any next summer," Henri said of the high school. "If we don't finish the exterior due to the weather, then we'll have to do work next summer."

School Board member Trey Ising asked if the demo work before the kids come back, he said.

"We want to have the paving done by the end of August, so the kids have a parking lot. That is the ideal situation," Henri said. "It will be tough because we still have some underground (work) on the west side of the school that when we demo the building. We could find all kinds of things," Henri said.

Work on the high school was delayed due to finding a lot junk buried in ground, but Henri believes that's probably not likely at the PD site.

"Keep in mind, we're not doing a lot of excavation on that side. We have the existing building and we're adding around 8,000 square feet. We're only talking about foundation for 8,000 square feet as opposed to 100,000 at the high school and 45,000 at the elementary school," Henri said. "The likelihood of us hitting the bad, unsuitable material is unlikely. If we hit it, we'll address it, but it will be smaller." City Council close to approving temporary parking lots

By Ian Dunn Editor

The Leavenworth City Council appears to be getting closer to approving temporary parking lots in the commercial zones of the city. It was first brought up at a city council study session. The discussion continued at the May 22 city council meeting.

"We were able to study this one more because it has a little more pieces to the puzzle. The components are the same as we talked about during the study session, gravel parking lots, temporary in nature. We have some restrictions on signage. We want to make sure it is consistent," said City Development Manager Nathan Pate.

Pate said if you allow for overnight parking, that's fine, but when you start having people tent camping, that's not the real purpose of a parking lot.

"If someone needs an opportunity to be in their vehicle because of too much to drink or whatever and they stay overnight, that is a piece of the puzzle. But if it is an RV intentionally showing up there every three days, I hope the council can say that is not appropriate. That is the only real question I had for the council," Pate said.

Parking areas should be marked to delineate parking stalls, Councilman Elmer Larsen said.

"We don't need to get specific, but I'm assuming, on a lawn, you could just chalk it or spray paint. We don't know what the surface is going to are grading the landscaping, putting pipe in the ground for the irrigation. The earthwork contractor will be moving dirt all around the landscape areas," Henri said, at the May 29 Cascade School Board meeting. "Once that is done, they will start grading the soccer/athletic field, which goes all the way to Titus Road. Right now, as I've said before, costs are under budget. The contractor is supposed to be complete on June 27." Other than the soccer/athtor," Henri said. "The problem with the elevator is not that it doesn't work. We need L&I to come before we can use it. We're trying to work out method where a contractor can use it now. That is the biggest issue."

Telephone lines and Internet for the building is ready, he said. Everything is also on schedule with the high school to complete phase one.

"We have no doubts we'll make the schedule. We're trending right around budget. needs to be done before the parking lot can be constructed.

"School's out on June 15. Teachers are out on June 17. We'll have the hazmat (hazardous materials) in there in June. In July, we'll start tearing the buildings down. By September, we should have the buildings gone and the structures starting to go up," Henri said. "While that is going on, we'll be grading the parking lots."

The grading must be done has to go in."

The Peshastin-Dryden School project is in a holding pattern, he said. The school district is still getting submittals on the work. The demoing of the school will not start until the kids are out. Right now, he said they know of no hazmat issues.

"We'll demo the schools this summer. By the following summer, we'll be ready for the students. As of today, there are no issues with Peshastin-Dryden. That could change

Mayor Cheri Kelley Farivar said the parking lot next door to city hall was treated much the same way before it was paved. She said they are trying to solve the parking problem without making it too difficult. Pate said there are not a lot of rules.

Larsen noted that structures, except for pay-boxes, are prohibited.

"What happens if somebody wants to put a Port-a-Potty in there? It's a temporary structure on a temporary lot and I think some people would appreciate it," Larsen said.

Pate asked, if Port-a-potties were allowed, should they be enclosed and Bavarian compliant? Larsen said if the city doesn't make it simple, people won't do it. Councilwoman Margaret Neighbors read a portion of the proposed ordinance, "The council intends to discontinue temporary parking lots upon the instillation of permanent parking." In what century would that be?,

Career connections class brings students on-the-job experiences

Submitted by Marlene Farrell Cascade senior Makena Ala'lima-Daley gives a presentation. SUBMITTED BY MARLENE FARRELL

Three high schoolers took turns giving 20 minute presentations, with poise and confidence, in front of a conference room full of executives and managers at Cascade Medical Center (CMC) in Leavenworth.

The presentations were the final component of their Career Connections class, offered for Cascade High School juniors and seniors, to learn professional skills via classroom work (including résumé writing and mock interviews) and job shadowing/internships with local business partners.

Makena Ala'ilima-Daley, Madeline Schiefelbein and Natalie Robles shared their experiences rotating through several departments at CMC and some of the practical skills and general career insights they learned.

Ala'ilima-Daley, a senior, said, "I learned how the different departments work together to give the best possible care to their patients." Practical experience included taking off scrubs without contamination and seeing an EKG test run. "In the ER I got to have my arm splinted and also practice suturing on my own shoe." She learned a lot from the dietician, understanding the many aspects of that job, including menu planning for inpatients on solid food and those with tube feeds, and outpatient menu recommendations.

Ala'ilima-Daley said, "I found working with patients in the Acute Care department the most enjoyable because I got to speak with them one on

Temporary parking: Lots would have to be licensed every year

"This was a big discussion item. One of things we recognized, that at some point, there may be a parking structure built in this town. That's what we're referring to," Farivar responded.

"We said, we're not building parking for festival weekends. Christmas Lighting, there will never be enough parking for that," Neighbors said. Farivar said the temporary parking lots are not just for a weekend in December.

"We're talking about temporary parking lots that may be long term, two, three or four years that may get us through until such a parking solution, like parking structure," Farivar said.

Temporary parking lots would be licensed every year, Pate said, so once the council says it done, it will be discontinued. At this time, temporary lots are only allowed in the commercial district. if we're going pull their permit next year," Larsen said.

"We don't want to venture into the other areas, which could be controversial. If this is successful, council could come back," Pate said.

Somebody may want to go five years with a temporary parking lot, Larsen said.

"We might say, we'll go five years if you pave. We may want to get the point where someone is willing to invest some money, but they won't If we're going pull their permit next year," Larsen said. "This should be something we should be open to. We might get a more finished product, like landscaping, which they wouldn't otherwise."

They could make upgrades, Pate said.

"One of the examples that came up with the Bavarian Lodge. Before it was the lodge, it was an unpaved temporary parking lot. We're encouraging somebody who has a future plans for a hotel or different use of some kind, to use that area as temporary parking to help us solve our parking problem here in the downtown area," Farivar said.

"When we stripe it and mark it, it actually brings more efficient use of the space. This is a bridge to get that," Pate said.

Schiefelbein, a junior, already had a strong interest in nursing, but also became excited about pharmacy from her rotation with the pharmacist. She felt squeamish about encountering blood in the ER, but realized, "It's a small percentage of what happens there day to day. The nurses said by the time you're out of nursing school, you're used to being around it."

Each student interviewed a staff member, and Schiefelbein interviewed RN Deanna Griggs, who said the expectations for today's nurses include efficiency, mindfulness of resources and also advocating to the patients about healthy living.

Schiefelbein enjoyed getting to ride along on a paramedic call to see how rapidly the team responds to medical emergencies.

In the lab, samples of blood and urine are spun to separate the components. Students had a chance to see the different types of blood cells under a microscope and grow bacteria on petri dishes. Robles, who enjoyed the hands-on science, said, "In the lab I could apply my AP Biology knowledge."

Before working with a local business, each student must go through an interview. "This helps the business screen our students to be able to see if that student will be a good fit for their business, and it gives the student the realistic life-lesson of interviewing, as none of our placements are guaranteed," said Schmitten.

Other business partners have welcomed student interns in the fields of elementary education, law, graphic design, engineering, construction, physical therapy, environmental science, automotive repair and more. With each business, Sunitsch and Schmitten build relationships with key contacts. "Amy Webb, the Chief Operating Officer at Cascade Medical Center, is always my point of contact at the hospital in regards to getting our students' interviews set up, their field," said Ala'ilima-Daley. "It also made me more confident that I was on the right path to be successful in the future."

Robles, interested in nursing, now understood the wide range of nursing paths that exist. "The possibilities are endless," she said.

With the increasing costs of college, students try to find the best college track right away. "Many programs within colleges want you to start as soon as you get there," explained Schiefelbein. "If you don't know that you want to be a nurse until your sophomore year in college, and they wanted you to start the program as a freshman, then you are a year behind!"

School District's Home Link program continues to grow

By IAN DUNN Editor

The Cascade School District Home Link program, which serves the district's home school students, is completing it's third year. Currently, there are 37 students in the K-8 program, representing 26 families.

"A thing that happened this year to help see the importance of the program ... we had three pretty big families move from the west side into Leavenworth. They were already home schooling. They had no intention of going into the public [school]," said Home Link teacher MaryLou Bailey at the May 29 Cascade School Board meeting. "Because we had the program in place, we have nine kids in our program, in the district that we would not have if we didn't have an Home Link program."

Bailey said there is a family that spends three months of the year in Spain and another family that spends two months in Hawaii.

"These are families, because of the Home Link program, that are able to keep the education of their children on a steady course. While they're gone to these places, they are still sending their monthly reports to me so the student progress is being tracked," Bailey said.

Since finishing the third year, Bailey said she and parents have gotten better at figuring out how to make the program work, so it is helpful to the families and so she still can get all the state reporting done. She wants to keep the program flexible, so it works for families.

Bailey said she received some much needed help this past year.

"We hired Jen Barber to be a parapro in our program. It has made such a difference, just in my ability to get things done in a timely manner and have some back up with that many students. With as much reporting as is required, I was getting really bogged down. She does a little of everything," Bailey said.

Everybody in the program took the state test, she said, which is a big deal because they also had parents opting out. All the parents were willing to do it, Bailey said, and it was a good experience for the kids to get on the computer to do the test.

There was a Pacific NW History class this year which involved five middle school students.

"That was a new thing we were trying out this year. The idea of a Home Link class for credit," Bailey said. "They have a notebook that shows evervthing we've done throughout the year that shows work done, essays written and research done so they can take it to the middle school or high school and say, yes, I've done Pacific NW History class."

Bailey said they also had several community members coming in this year.

"We had someone come in and teach a Spanish class that was so well received, she is continuing next year with Spanish. We have our fitness teachers from the community," Bailey said. "Mandi Wickline, the drama coach, has been coming into Home Link once a month doing some drama with the kids. We've had a lot of real interest from the community to come in and help out. The kids really love that.'

Looking at next year, with the growing student body at Home Link, Bailey said there are going to have to figure out the logistics with the possibility of a second certified teacher to come in. She said they would have to figure out the space arrangements.

The Home Link program is housed in the upper story at the school administration building, which is next to Osborn School.

"Next year, we will expand into what is the current music room, so we'll actually have two classrooms. The music room is moving across the hall. Cathy (Merrill, Osborn/ PD music specialist) has been great to accommodate that. She was willing to make that move," Bailey said. "We're figuring out how to handle more and more students coming in."

Bailey said they had two Native American speakers come to the class, each offering a different point of view about reservations. She felt it really opened their eyes about their experiences with reservations.

they will take home at the end of the year. There was also a class on poetry.

"This past two week in our poetry class, we've been studying a sonnet. We had one student write a sonnet for Memorial Day that I sent home in the parent email, which made half the parents cry," she said. "There's a feeling in the class that is wonderful and real family atmosphere that has developed among the kids. It's a really great program."

Board member Kristen Wood asked Bailey what will be done with the testing results.

"When I get the reports back, one copy goes into files Julie maintains so it moves with the kids. We end at eighth grade. I look through a copy and see, where do we have strengths, where do we have weaknesses. Then I pass those onto the parents," Bailey said. "I meet very regularly with the parents, so I'll pass them on and look over and use that to kind of help guide their curriculum choices for the next year. Students that are weak in writing, I'll recommend a curriculum that will strengthen writing or if it is science, we'll look at a curriculum to help build those

The Home Link program is unique in that they have classes which kids can optinto or out-of, said Cascade Superintendent Bill Motsenbocker.

"They could be a full time FTE but they don't take any of our courses, but they use MaryLou as a consultant to help them with curriculum selection and those types of things so the parents can continue with the home schooling," Motsenbocker said. "They also get money to purchase curricular materials every year, although they belong to the school so they have to bring them back. If MaryLou offers those same idea for another family, those supplies go to that family, until they get too old."

Bailey said they are working to streamline those materials out and in. She said they end up with stacks all over. Now, Barber is helping to establish that library system.

"I have a feeling there is more students in Home Link because of you," Wood said to Bailey.

Draft EIS spells out Icicle Creek water strategy Plan seeks to improve streamflows, water availability

SUBMITTED BY JOYE REDFIELD-Wilder

Proposals for boosting streamflows and improving water resources in the Icicle Creek Watershed are moving forward after years of collaboration by stakeholders. Water availability in the Icicle is tight especially when fish and irrigators need it most.

Projects and actions for the Icicle Creek Water Strategy are spelled out in a draft Programmatic Environmental Impact Statement jointly prepared by the Washington Department of Ecology and Chelan County. Ecology and the County are seeking comment on the EIS through July

The programmatic EIS builds on guiding principles adopted by the Icicle Work Group to take a holistic approach to watershed management. The work group comprises a diverse set of stakeholders representing local, state and federal agencies, tribes, irrigation and agricultural interests, and environmental organizations.

The draft EIS evaluates five project alternatives that collectively meet the objectives and values identified by the work group, and includes a no-action alternative.

Actions identified in the programmatic EIS are designed to:

benefit streamflows in late summer and early fall; · promote conservation, fish passage, screening, and habitat restoration; · explore reoperation of existing storage, pump exchanges and new storage, and · institute efficiencies to protect all water uses in the basin.

Review the EIS and find additional information on the Icicle Strategy on Chelan County's Natural Resources Department page. A public hearing where comments will be accepted is scheduled for 4-8 p.m. on Wednesday, June 27, at the Leavenworth Festhalle, 1001 Front St., Leavenworth.

Submit written comments on the draft Icicle Strategy EIS to Mike Kaputa, Director, Chelan County Natural Resource Department, 411 Washington St., Suite 201, Wenatchee, WA 98801, or via email at nr.iciclesepa@ co.chelan.wa.us.

U.S. apples hit with 20 percent retaliatory tariff in Mexico trade spat

SUBMITTED BY WASHINGTON APPLE COMMISSION

In response to the Trump Administration's tariffs on aluminum and steel, Mexico announced last week that effective immediately imports of apples from the U.S. would be subject to a retaliatory tariff of 20 percent. Under WTO rules, countries hit with unilateral tariffs are allowed to levy tariffs equivalent to the amount of injury. Apples are just one item on the list of U.S. products that Mexico is targeting. Washington state, home to over 1,300 apple growers, is the source of almost all apple exports to Mexico. The State produces approximately 65 percent of all apples grown in the US and over 90 percent of US fresh apple exports. Mexico is the top export market for Washington apples, and during the 2016-17 season Washington growers shipped 13.7 million 40 lb. bushel cartons valued at more than $215 million to the market. During the current season, shipments have been ahead of last seadepending on the strategic importance of Mexico to their sales, but collectively Washington apple growers will see a decrease in what they are paid for their crop due to the 20 percent duty."

"Any tariff is clearly going to have economic impact to our industry - especially when you consider its cumulative effect along with the tariffs imposed by China and expected within the next few weeks from India, also major Washington apple export markets, in retaliation to U.S. steel and aluminum tariffs" stated Todd Fryhover, the president of the Washington Apple Commission. "The economic impact to individual growers will vary

Democrat Tannehill 'A different wing of the party'

New face to replace Senator Cantwell?

BY GARY BÉGIN

NCW Media Managing Editor Gary Bégin interviewed Democratic candidate for U.S. Senate Clint Tannehill at Bob's in downtown Wenatchee about his desire to replace longtime Senator Maria Cantwell. Here is what he had to say:

Echo: There are about 29 candidates for the U.S. Senate seat currently held by longtime Senator Maria Cantwell. Why are you attempting this uphill battle?

Tannehill: Just because you won before, doesn't mean you automatically win again. Somebody has to keep the system honest. I also believe that there is a large portion of the Democratic Party and Washingtonians that do not feel represented with our current leadership. I think it is clear with how many people are running that the state wants a change. The people are tired of the political machine that has been dominating politics for too long.

Echo: Are there certain polices she supports that you don't?

Tannehill: I think NAFTA

needs a serious overhaul. It was put in place without thinking of the needs of the people (both foreign and domestic), and only really catered to the corporations. Maria Cantwell also supported the ACA, while I support a single-payer system.

Echo: Both of you are Democrats, so it appears you are in a "different wing" of the party?

Tannehill: Yes. I am in the wing of the party that represents the working class, the 65-plus, and all of those that feel left behind by the disconnected party elites. I represent those with no seat at the table, the ones that can't afford lobbyists, the ones that don't typically fund political campaigns; the ones that need policy to work for them the most.

Echo: What about gun rights, regulations and related security areas.

Tannehill: Washington State has sensible gun laws in place that must be implemented nationwide. We need the background check system to work across all government agencies and across all states, and we must create systems that effectively execute these laws coast-to-coast. We need to push for the nation to mirror the gun laws of Washington. Gun violence liability must follow the perpetrator as well as the gun owner. As a personal victim of gun violence, my goal is to promote safe storage of firearms. This alone will save lives.

Echo: What about Tariffs, trade wars and imports-exports?

Tannehill: We need to work away from trade wars and get an understanding of a trade system that works for all parties. International trade can be good if done correctly. We should work to stop the international trading of subsidized industries and crops. Our current trade system has been broken from the get-go because it is designed with only the corporations in mind, not the welfare of the workers and the common people.

Echo: Trump seems invincible in his ability to distract the world from his corruption and his cabinet's corruption. What are you going to do about it if elected? Impeachment?

Tannehill: I think we should work on the things we can and focus solely on those areas while we wait out his tenure. If something comes about where it is without a question an impeachable offense then of course impeachment would be an option. But I think that chasing the cat is not the answer.

Echo: Please fleshout your personal profile for our readers here in North Central Washington:

Tannehill: I am a fifth-generation Washingtonian, born in Eastern Washington and raised in Hillyard. If you live in Spokane, you know Hillyard is one of the poorest neighborhoods in Washington. But Hillyard is also a place where the people take extreme pride in where they come from. Many people might consider Hillyard a ghetto, or a bad place to grow up, but to me, I see it as a place where people work hard and celebrate their community, no matter how disadvantaged they are. Growing up in Hillyard left me with a unique grit and perseverance that not everyone has. It may have been a survival mechanism rather than a choice, but I believe that's what helped instill my sense of determination to take something mediocre and make it reach its full potential. What I do wish for this area is more youth programs and more adult education opportunities. It also has many issues with addiction and people on public assistance similar to many other low income areas. I would love to see this change in Hillyard and statewide. Many of my professional endeavors have been in pursuit of seeing this idea become reality. I continue to run companies in the private sector and develop many new companies in various industries. I have also been successful in real estate investing throughout Washington for many years. Since a higher education was not an option for me growing up, I worked to make college a possibility for myself. I studied Business Administration & Management at Spokane Falls Community College and Political Science at Seattle Central College and the University of Washington. This has greatly impacted my commitment to universal higher education.

Today I live in Seattle with my fiancée Olivia and our dog Whodi. Working on cars is now a hobby of mine, and I enjoy restoring cars and motorcycles in my spare time. I am currently restoring one of my very first vehicles, a 1967 Buick Riviera.

Echo: Why would Clint Tannehill be good for Washington in D.C.?

Tannehill: I will be good because I will find the center where people agree and will work there. I will represent the true needs and ideas of Washington State. That is the only agenda that I have to push: the will of the people.

ment to get one, and only the brand name is available right now. With a high deductible insurance plan, a box of 3 patches of Transderm-Scop® can cost close to $90.00." "Ginger isn't topical, but it's pretty effective. It only lasts for 5 hours, though, and I've forgotten to re-dose before, when crossing multiple time zones. But you can safely take it along with meclizine, and it's not expensive. I prefer candied ginger root, but you can get ginger capsules in the health food section of most grocery stores."

Later, I found 3 topical motion sickness remedies at Amazon's website:

1. Sumifun's Motion Sickness Patch, or MQ Patch. Made in China with at least 7 mostly Chinese herbs, 3 of which are possibly effective. Hairy Datura flower is another name for Jimson weed and contains the same active ingredient as the Transderm-Scop® prescription patch for motion sickness. Pinellia is used as an antiemetic in China, but also contains ephedrine, which is banned in the United States because it can cause palpitations, high blood pressure, heart attack and stroke. Dahurian angelica root is used orally for nausea, but it's not clear if using it topically would help.

2. Emesyl® nasal spray is marketed as a homeopathic remedy and contains very small amounts of ipecacuana (ipecac), tabacum (tobacco) and moderate amounts of Zingiber Officinale (ginger root).

Homeopathic formulas consist of very, very dilute concentrations of compounds that can CAUSE the same symptoms that it's intended to relieve, usually in a sugar pill dissolved on the tongue. The lower the concentration, the more potent it is considered to be. There is no scientific explanation for this, and the Food and Drug Administration considers homeopathy harmless because there are barely any molecules of ingredients in traditional formulations. Homeopathic products are not regulated and do not have to comply with safety and effectiveness standards that govern other medications because of protective legislation passed in 1938 that was championed by a Senator who was also a homeopathic physician. This law protects any product containing ingredients listed in the United States Homeopathic Pharmacopeia, which is why the names on most homeopathic remedies are different than common names used today. The amount of ipecac and tobacco in Emesyl® is 6C, which means that a 1:100 dilution was made and then diluted again and by 1:100 each time, six times, resulting in very few molecules of the original ingredients left in the product. Emesyl® also contains ginger at a concentration of 1C, meaning that it was only diluted to 1:100 once. This is against the principles of homeopathy because ginger works directly to relieve motion sickness, but is probably effective for nausea if ginger is absorbed when sprayed up your nose.

3. MotionEaze® is an herbal product with 7 different essential oils in it, including lavender, peppermint, chamomile, frankincense, myrrh, ylang ylang and birch. Lavender may decrease anxiety but it hasn't been shown to be helpful for motion sickness. When drank as a tea, peppermint and chamomile can calm stomach upset, but it's not clear how much is absorbed through your skin. The other 4. essential oils are used in perfumes and are probably not active ingredients.

Are there topical medicines for motion sickness? I avoid boats. My first seaoing experience on a salmon require a prescription, so you might need a doctor's appoint-going experience on a salmon fishing boat 30 years ago was spent hanging over the stern "feeding the fish" instead of catching any. Years later, a dream cruise to Alaska became nightmare of nausea. Fifteen years has passed since that disaster at sea, so when my husband's cousin Ron suggested a one-day wildlife cruise in Alaska, my recent success with meclizine made me want to try it again. At least I wasn't alone; Ron's wife, Patricia suffers also gets seasick. Last Sunday, our150person catamaran Orca Odyssev cruised smoothly through Resurrection Bay on the way to Aialik Glacier, while we enjoyed seeing a pair of bald eagles, several whales, and a baby mountain goat next to her mama. Patricia wasn't as fortunate. On our way home that night she asked me, "Is there anything else I could try that might work better, like a topical product?" "Scopolamine patches are a prescriptiononly medicine that you wear behind your ear for 3 days at a time.
