Eightmile Dam still a danger, but it is getting better

Photo submitted by Kent Sisson

Work done last week on the Eightmile Dam will make it possible to pass four times the amount of water. Local officials feel the work will help lower the lake so it can take on more water from the rain or snowmelt.

A public meeting was held on May 14 at the Chelan Coun-ty Fire District 3 to discuss the situation at the Eightmile Dam in the Alpine Lakes Wilderness. The dam has been in danger of breeching due to the potential for increase snow melt around the watershed, which was impacted by the Jack Creek Fire last fall.

A breech could be devastating for those with homes along Icicle Creek, but it appears the danger is lessened now due to work done at the dam and also the fact that a good portion of snow in the watershed has already melted.

Chelan County Sheriff's Ser-geant Kent Sission of Chelan County Emergency Management moderated the meeting, which included officials from the Icicle Irrigation District, Dam Safety, National Weather Service, Forest Service and Anchor QEA Engineering.
Sisson said the conditions at the dam are currently Level

"This was confusing to the public because we talk about wildfire one, two and three. This is not wildfire. This is the status of the dam at Eightmile lake is Level 2, which means it has reached a point where we collaboratively feel it more so than just an advisory of an emergency situation," Sis-son said. "The dam is not breached. There was a rumor going around Leavenworth today we have issued evacuation notices. I don't know where that started. It's not true.

Sisson said they went out and talked with anybody who was within the inundation area. They've also taken a lot of phone calls.

If we get to a Level 3, which when the water reaches to the top of the old historic spillway, that puts us at a Level 3. We've agreed that puts us in a place where we would issue evacuation notifications. It is not at that level," Sisson said. Icicle Irrigation District Manager Tony Jantzer said the lake level had dropped during the recent cool spell so it could be considered Level 1. He said it is about 4-5 feet below what would be considered Sisson said they are staying at Level 2 because there was a forecast of warm weather with rain coming after. He said it was a real collaborative effort between Icicle Irrigation, Dam Safety, Emergency Management, Forest Service to get to a point where they could get monitoring in place so they could get an engineering plan in place to mitigate the emergency circumstances.

There was a lot of snow in the watershed over the lake

"The south facing slopes of the watershed is probably 90 percent melted right now. The lake melted off completely sometime last week. There is no more ice on the lake," Jantzer said. "The north facing slopes are still probably 70 percent laden with heavy, wet snow. If we get some rain up there, we could see increased

The dam, which was built in the 1920s, has been able to hand normal spills, but then in 1990, there was a big flood which pushed the dam part its comphilities to smill past its capabilities to spill. That year, part of the earthen dam washed away, but it has stayed stable since then, and continues to act as a secondThe dam hasn't changed much over the past 28 years, Jantzer said. It has been holding up well and nearly every year gets water over the earthen portion of the dam.

"What we were concerned about, based on the BAER (burned area emergency response) report in February, March. This burned area is going to generate a lot more runoff that normal, like double," Jantzer said. "If we have any kind of event, it would push the dam to a maximum amount, we could water levels going over the dam which the dam was in no way ever designed to cope with. We are concerned about that, which is why the district declared an emergency."

Jantzer said they are not too worried about it if things stay normal and it doesn't get too hot. The problem would be a hot trend followed by a big rain storm. Last week, he said they flew an excavator to the site for some emergency work.

Their ultimate hope is to replace the dam entirely with a new, modern dam, but it is looking less likely like they'll be able to do that this year.
"In the interim, to try to make things safe for every-body, we're going to rip out most of the old earthen dam. We're going to take that down to the area that was already washed down," Jantzer said. "We're going to harden that with all the rock we can find up there, make it so it will handle a 2-3 feet going over it. We're going from a 30-foot wide spillway to over 100-foot wide spillway."

wide spillway."

By doing this work, Jantzer said instead of eight feet going over it, it will be a couple feet, which should be able to handle four times as much water. This work was to be done last week. There is a portion of the wall of the dam that concerns

"It was designed to have a dirt back. Now, it is a free standing masonry wall. It has water that will pass on both sides of it. If we get significant flow, water will be passing quite deeply on the other side," Jantzer said. "Because of fire and we get a big runoff, we figure it will be a lot of debris. It will pile up against this wall. It wasn't designed

The flooding of the downtown Waterfront and Blackbird Island park trails were covered with water, these trails are very close to the Wenatchee River. Pictured above the water is completely covering of the popular Barn Beach.

Since it was announced last year the Cascade School District would look into selling a parcel of land next to Beaver Valley School, there has been controversy. The Lake Wenatchee Fire and Rescue station next door indicated an interest in purchasing the property for purposes of expanding their fire station.

The nearby Hill Street neighbors came out strongly against this expansion, feeling the larger facility would be incompatible with their residential neighborhood. Neighbors showed up with some emotional testimony at two Cascade School Board meetings.

Subsequently, the school board decided to postpone any decision on Hill Street until June. Since that time. the Hill Street neighbors have formed a Limited Liability Corporation, Friends of Rural Plain, LLC.

Hill Street neighbor Don Bottoms explained their mo-tivation behind forming an

"Part of it is we need an entity that represents the residents of our immediate Hill Street neighborhood that is a free standing, legal organization that can take whatever legal action we need to take. It's also for things like pure business purposes, in terms of having a central location for the fire district to communicate with rather than individuals and being able to pay for legal services as an entity as opposed to saying Don Bottoms has a lawyer," Bottoms said.

Since forming the LLC, Bottoms said they made a public record request from the fire district to determine their intentions, plans and the history behind their intentions for purchasing school district

He said they have not asked the school district for any

"We've merely asked the fire district for them in order to try and clarify as far as we can, what the fire district actual intentions for the use of the property are, since they are not very forthcoming what all the potential uses of the property," Bottoms said.

ceived the documentation and are looking through it. He said the amount received back is rather limited, but it does confirm the fire district is looking at the idea of a complex there that would support multiple agencies and would involve the construction of facilities that would not be compatible with a residential neighborhood. It's more like a small civic center, he said, which could evolve there if the fire district gets their wish list. In terms

"We're not arguing against that. They are the experts in terms of what they need. Our disagreement with them has nothing to do with the performance of their duties,"

Bottoms said. "Our disagreement simply has to do with the fact they wish to put the type of facility they think they need in the middle of a residential area. There are other alterna-

Bottoms feels there is the potential for acquiring land from the Forest Service or State Park or some commercial property in Plain or on Highway 207.

One of our concerns is the fire district seems to have not taken the step at any of these other alternatives in terms of going ahead and choosing the school district property," Bottoms said. "It's more like it was low hanging fruit, in the middle of the area, and it would be a government to government type land purchase. It was easy to do. In terms of research, one of things we concluded was that we found little or no evidence any other alternatives were explored. "Possibly, the fire district has decided this is the property we like, and if they tell us no, then we'll go look at alternatives. I can't say that is their philosophy, but it appears that way because they haven't done anything else."

The position of the group is the new facility belongs somewhere else. Bottoms said that is their only issue. They feel the fire district could expand on their existing 2.5 acres. He said they would be totally happy to see them build a new fire station on their existing property.

"We've also discussed the boundary lines on the Beaver Valley School property that would their fire station to be expanded modestly, which would significantly increase their footprint. They don't want to do that. They want 5.5 acres of land they won't tell anyone what they're going to do anything with," Bottoms

To many, this issue seems like your typical, not-in-mybackyard kind of deal. Bottoms said in some ways, that is a reasonable statement to make. He asked if the folks in Plain would want this kind of facility in their backyard.

He said they are absolutely supportive of the Plain community having these types of

'There's been some suggestions by the fire district that they would use some of their facilities here for a community center building. It would primarily be a fire training building for the fire district, but it could also be used for community meetings. There's also been discussions in the community about having a community center in downtown Plain. There is a piece of property that used to be the pot farm, which could be a very good place," Bottoms said. "The other thing they are talking about is a place for the sheriff and EMS and maybe a small jail. It doesn't belong in the neighborhood. We're saying to other people, would you like this in your neighborhood?"

As the facility grows, Bottoms said it could change the complexion of the whole community not just the

Dam danger: Engineers devise three phase plan for the dam

to be free standing. One of the first things we want to do is break that wall off at the level of the rock."

Jantzer is hoping, when they are done there, there will be nothing for the de-bris to catch on. It will just pass through into Eightmile Creek. Anchor QEA is the engineering firm hired to put together a mitigation plan for the dam

Engineer Dave Rice said they have been consulting with Dam Safety and others on what can be done to lower the lake to reduce the risk of breeching the dam. Then, eventually, work toward a more permanent solu-tion. Dam Safety asked them to come up with an interim plan.

"We developed three steps of action. The first steps is what Tony described, which would be taking the top off the wall, then creating this larger spillway on what's left of the earthen portion of the dam," Rice said. "Then, hardening that with as much rock as we can find. We hope to have that done this week. That is step one. It's all that Dam Safety

Through consultation with Dam Safety, Rice said the next step would be to install some pipe there to create a temporary siphon to help draw the lake down. So if the lake is drawn down, there is more of an ability for the lake to capture the runoff that comes into it, making it less likely for the lake level to rise where it becomes a dangerous situation.

The third step would be making that emergency siphon a little bit more useable over the coming months or as long as it takes before there is a more permanent solution.

"There is a condition at the dam with this low lying pipe that has been there since the it was constructed. It was blocked. It was constructed out of wood and concrete. The boards that are part of this pipe, it's only currently letting through about 4-5 cfs when it has a capacity of over 50 cfs," Sisson said. "That's an issue where we can't relieve the current impounded water like we could if that pipe was free and clear. That's why we're talking about a syphon taking pressure off the lake.'

mostly. We do believe we can unplug that. With the siphon and that going, we should be able to hold the lake down until we get some kind of an extreme event," Jantzer said. "That would give us a lot of good cushion for an extreme event so it won't go over the

A perfect storm of a giant rain cell over the watershed could bring it to a point where it rises to Level 3, Sisson said, so that's why it is important to have some monitoring up there. This is being handled by Dam Safety, which is part of the Washington State Department of Ecology.

Joe Witczak, WSDOE Dam
Safety and Wells manager, said access to the site is complicated. There is no dam tender there, which is a concern. Witczak said they want to be able to monitor the lake so they know what level they are at, one, two or three.

The priority is to get a lake level monitor in there, Witczak said.

"We're actually partnering with the Sheriff's Office which is going to provide helicopter support, so we can put lake level monitoring equipment up there. Then, DOE has staff that will get up there and install that. Once that equipment is in place, then we'll get a reading about every five minutes about what the lake is doing," Witczak said. "The Na-tional Weather Service will be watching that for us, looking at triggers, then getting back (County) Emergency Management and myself about what is going on at the dam.'

Dam Safety would also like to monitor the actual flow coming from the dam, from immediately below the dam and another around Little Eightmile Lake. He said this will happen as they buy, build or steal the equipment from another site in the area.

Witczak said they also want rain gauges up there and cameras.

"Ultimately, we want to get a camera up there, so when you see that lake level move, you don't always know why it is moving. It could be a log bumping up there. It could be a temporary situation and not like the dam is failing," Witczak said. "Having eyes on it would be really helpful. The DOE is looking to purchase this equipment. It's about $15,000 worth of equipment. We would loan it for the site to use until some other mechanism is available to do that monitoring. Then, we could use it at other dam sites.

Katherine Rowden with the National Weather Service said they don't have great radar coverage in the mountains there, so they've deployed rain gauges over the years.

We know how to make it work once the gages are out there. They transmit hourly until they reach the thresholds, then they'll transit more rapidly. Our office is staffed 24/7 and we've set up internal alarm on our forecaster's sta-tions so they can see that," Rowden said. "We try to set those thresholds lower than what might be the level of concern. We issue flood warning for dam failures but that is when somebody tells us the dam has failed. This is an unusual situation where there is nobody at the dam telling us

Emergency Management released inundation maps to generally show what could happen with a complete dam breech. It shows outside the normal channel of the Icicle Creek in the low lying areas that would see inundation.

There are 12 dots on the maps showing residences they feel would definitely be inundated.

"This isn't an exact science because there are so many different formulas. How high is the Icicle Creek at the time the dam breeches? Is it a complete dam breech or partial dam breech?," Sisson said. "Out of the extreme caution, we notified around 50 residences from Eightmile Creek to the Forest Service Campground down past the Fish Hatchery. We've made as many contacts as we can. We've found many of the residences are part time folks. Nobody home, so we've left fliers. We're trying to reach out through other means."

Chelan County Sheriff's Deputy Rich Magnussen of Emergency Management said the public notification system used in the county is called Alert Sense.

"A lot of you have probably already experienced it during fire season. We put out our evacuation notices through your cell phones or landlines," Magnussen said. "If we get notified from the weather service that monitors have picked up a big flow in the river or drop in the lake that a significant incident has occurred, we trip what is called an iPause message."

That iPause message would push out to every cell phone and landline in the area where something might be happening, which is basically an evacuation notice.

"That way, nobody has to sign up for that at all. That goes out automatically. There is a way to sign up to get some non-critical messages, public meetings, etc. Go to our emergency management website. There is a link on there to sign up. Click on Eightmile Dam," Magnussen said. "We will be doing door to door notifications. This does not take the place of that. As you've heard, we don't have a lot of time if we do have a big event up there to get a bunch of volunteers and deputies together to go door to door. It does take time to get that together."

If there was dam breech, Sisson said they would put out alerts and try to go doorto-door but they will have only about 30-45 minutes between the time of the breech Wenatchee River.

"We've had a response meeting with Fire District 3 and other responding agencies about how that would work. We want Fire District 3 to go directly to Icicle Island. My concern there is the one bridge ingress, egress," Sisson said. "Most of the homes sit above the inundation area, but we don't want people stranded out there. We would automatically notify our swiftwater team, whether they are needed or not. We going to activate them anyway. They are trained in water rescues.

Eightmile Lake is within the boundaries of the Wenatchee River Ranger District. District Ranger Jeff Rivera said they have been working with Dam Safety, their own regional dam safety and their wilderness folks on this issue. They've completed a minimum tool analysis.

"What complicates things is this is in the wilderness. By law, we're required to do this minimum tool analysis to determine which tools we can use in the wilderness," Rivera said. "That was completed for the use of the monitoring equipment.'

One of the issues that has come up is public access, said WRRD's Brian Mulligan.

"Right now, we're allowing access up the Eightmile Trail into the lake. We're going to open the campgrounds as normal," Mulligan said. "We're following the same emergency protocols. At the point, it becomes a Level 3 emergency, the campgrounds will close and we'll remove people out of there. Prior to reaching Level 3, if there is high probability of reaching Level 3, we would close the trailhead.

'I think that is a big issue. I think it's a whole community issue what happens here. The fire district said maybe they are not going to be putting live fire training on this site. Maybe they will move that to the north shore. There is an example of the fire district having the things they need, but putting them in places that are more appropriate,'

Across Plain and Lake Wenatchee, there is not agreement on this issue, Bottoms acknowledges. He knows there are people supportive of the fire district no matter

"Then, there are other people who think sometimes the fire district oversteps their their mission. We have the people in the area totally supportive of whatever the fire district wants, which is absolutely great," Bottoms said.
"Then, we have a significant number of people who don't think so. The folks that don't live right around here that we talk to are concerned that fire district would decide to put this type of facility into anyone's neighborhood.

People want fire protection, he said, but this isn't just about fire protection. Hill Street neighbors are concerned about a possible maintenance facility on site as well as a possible command station, which would bring in other agencies during a wildfire.

"This would be a pretty big complex. That's why we say, aren't there any other places in this great big wilderness area that you can do this? The answer is yeah, but this is easier to do. There's a philosophy we believe in ... you should not solve problems that are facing a community by coming up with a solution that harms members of the community," Bottoms said.

The forming of the LLC, some feel, might simply be paving the way for a lawsuit, but Bottoms said that is not

The fact is there is very little we can do to prevent the fire district from doing what they want to do after they acquire the land. It's going to be likely that some of things they want to place on the property may require conditional use permits," Bottoms said. "If they do, we will scrutinize what they are doing very carefully and take positions with the commissions that approve are asking the school district not to go forward with a decision to sell the property to the fire district until the fire district can tell the community what it plans to build on the 5.5 acres.

"The types of things they are talking about would be financed through federal grants. Once those buildings are built, the operations and maintenance costs will be born by this community. Nobody is really talking about that," Bottoms said. "We're going to have levies to sup-port whatever they put in. We don't know. Once they acquire the property, they will build it up piecemeal by conditional use permit by conditional use permit and we're sunk."

The Friends of Rural Plain have launched a website to try and relate their concerns, friendsofruralplain.us. There are also circulating a petition to ask the school district to refrain from making a final decision on the sale until the fire district details what they plan to build on the 5.5 acre site. "We are not asking that Cascade School District never sell that land, just that the citizens of Plain be given the

those permits. We won't be very successful." chance to understand what is really happening and be heard before any final decision is really happening and be heard before any final decision is made," he said.

On Feb. 26, the Hill Street neighbors requested in writ neighbors requested, in writing, a meeting with Lake Wenatchee Fire and Rescue Chief Mick Lamar to discuss preliminary plans for the property. On March 7, Lamar responded to the group the fire district was still interested in acquiring the school district

Lamar wrote they have discussed ideas for the prop-erty with those that have expressed concerns. Detailed plans will only begin if the land is acquired.

"In previous correspondence, we outlined our actions to address significant con-cerns brought to our attention by you or your neighbors. As indicated in that letter, when weather permits, we will begin that work," Lemar wrote. "I will speak with the Strategic Plan Coordinator and see when a status check presenta-tion can be readied. However, that will be at a public forum held here at the station to which you and your neighborhood can certainly attend.

'Thank you for the invitation to meet privately at your residence, but it is unlikely that any progress that has been made would warrant a meeting." meeting.

On April 12, Friends of Rural Plain, LLC wrote to Cascade Superintendent Bill Motsenbocker. The group pressed some of the same issues presented in this article, feeling it was incompatible with a rural neighborhood.

Further, they pressed some of the activities might be harmful to students, like live fire training. Motsenbocker wrote on April 16, after the less than positive comments directed at LWFR at the Dec. 11 school board meeting, he felt as though an open public forum may be the best venue for future discussions regarding the Beaver Valley property.

Motsenbocker wrote the school district is very interested in youth recreation on the property, whomever purchases the parcel. He said that would definitely be part of the requirements in the purchase and sale agreement. LWFR has already agreed with this and we see it as a non-issue, Motsenbocker wrote.

"Attractive nuisances, hazardous chemicals and training structures must be fenced and and secure so this does not create a concern for student safety," Motsenbocker wrote. "Live fire training no longer uses hazardous chemicals or fuels other than wood and propane. Also, we would require live fire training to be exclusive outside of normal school hours."

The questions surrounding set backs, landscape screening, architectural design, light/noise pollution would be issues for the Hill Street community to negotiate with the buyer, Motsenbocker wrote.

"These aspects do not directly effect the learning environment of the school nor cause adverse conditions for student safety. As a result, the school district does not wish to enter into any negotiations or conditions outside of our mission, vision or future needs," Motsenbocker wrote. "The philosophy of selling excess property at Beaver Valley is one of stewardship. Public funds are tied up in the land Cascade will not use in the foreseeable future and to keep the property is an inappropriate use of public dollars. We hope to find a buyer that will fit in well with the neighborhood and create an even stronger community.

PUD Board keeps moratorium in place; sets next hearing on Aug. 6

Commissioners may consider a rate just for cryptocurrency operations

SUBMITTED BY KIMBERLEE CRAIG

Chelan County PUD commissioners on May 14 listened to comments from customerowners and cryptocurrency miners at a public hearing. Staff reviewed steps taken since the board imposed the March 19 application moratorium for cryptocurrency mining and similar data operations. After hearing staff and public comments, commissioners voted to extend the moratorium until Aug. 6 and hold another public hearing that day.

Commissioners heard comments from more than two dozen people. Speakers ranged from customers worried about impacts on rates and power supplies to miners asking for service for an industry they say offers jobs and future technology. About 100 people attended the hearing.

Commissioner Randy Smith said the diversity of the comments made it clear to him that more time is needed for staff to develop the PUD's response to the new load demand.

Commissioner Garry Arseneault said taking more time is essential. "We are blazing a path here and we want to get

General Manager Steve Wright said the District has learned that the definition for high density loads (HDL) put in place last year is not adequate to address the impacts of the rush of applications to power cryptocurrency mining. "A lot has changed since we put HDL in place," Wright

"Keep in mind our mission specifies, 'enhance the quality of life in Chelan County.' That means the best value for the most people for the longest period of time," he said.

Lindsey Mohns, Customer Utilities business manager, outlined the substantial work accomplished so far to understand the impacts of responding to service requests from cryptocurrency operators. The PUD has requests that could more than double the PUD's retail electric load.

Analysis has found pockets of potential transmission capacity available to support the high power demand of cryptocurrency operations. Those are in an area from Monitor south to Malaga. There are a few areas with distribution system capacity, too, but most locations would require building expensive infrastructure including substations to serve potential cryptocurrency load.

Staff proposed creating a specific cryptocurrency rate to make sure risks related to miners' mobility, bitcoin price swings and the industry's mismatch with the PUD's long-term business model are

Since March staff also has updated regulations and received approval of fees and charges for investigating and enforcing unauthorized HDL loads. They have reached out to operators, customer-owners, city councils and Chelan County commissioners to discuss impacts on public safety, the power grid and the PUD's ability to respond to planned growth and already-planned work, Mohns said.

Illegal shoreline development nets $19,000 fine for project near Leavenworth and power.

Stream channel culverting, plant loss, fill cited on Wenatchee River

SUBMITTED BY JOYE REDFIELD-

A Seattle couple has been fined $19,000 for substantially developing several parcels of land along the Wenatchee River, near Leavenworth, without permits and in violation of local and state shoreline management regulations.

In addition to the civil penalty, the Washington Department of Ecology has ordered Christopher and Janett Olson to obtain all necessary permits and restore the shoreline destroyed when they created land for future development.

Naturally functioning shorelines protect life and property, preserve ecological and environmental values, and help provide flood control on Washington lakes, rivers and coastal waters. These values are threatened when property owners conduct land clearing, dredging and filling activities, on shorelines and in wetlands without proper planning and

The Olsons are cited for removing important riparian vegetation, dredging material from an unnamed stream, installing a culvert, and placing fill dirt in the river channel during development on property they own, and without permission, on a neighboring parcel.

All these activities violate policies of the Chelan County Shoreline Master Program and the 1971 state Shoreline Management Act.

Ecology issued a notice of correction on Dec. 14, 2017, to the Olsons via a process server, outlining procedures to obtain local, state and federal permits and approvals to remove the unpermitted shoreline development and restore the shoreline. They had until March 20, 2018, to comply. Two reminders were sent via email to the Olsons with no reply.

The Olsons have 30 days to file an appeal with the state Shoreline Hearings Board.

CTL District Golf: Cascade girls win league championship

By Ian Dunn Editor

The Caribou Trail League District Golf Tournament was held May 14 at Alta Lake Golf Course in Omak. The Cascade Kodiaks had the medalist for the both the boys and the girls. Senior Tim Wells shot 82, tied with Corbin Morley of Chelan. Wells beat Morley on the first playoff hole.

Senior Maddie Hontou repeated as district champion with a 99 to lead all girl golfers. The Kodiak girls also won the the CTL and District 6 Championship. The girls team of Hontou, Emma Halseth, Emma Nielson, and Natalie Craig shot 479 compared to Chelan's 508.

Cascade is sending five players to state. Senior Tim Wells, freshman Isaac Cortes (6th), senior Stefan Zucktriegel (7th), senior Maddie Hontou and sophomore Emma Nielson (5th).

"The Boys State 1A Tournament is at Liberty Lake (Spokane). This will be Tim's third trip to state, Isaac and Stefan's first. Tim will hope to improve on his 37th finish from last year," said Cascade Head Coach Randy Alexander. "The State 2B/1A tournament is at Hangman Valley (Spokane). This is Maddie's second trip to state. She played both days last year and finished 24th. This will be Emma's first time."

The pre-match speech from Alexander and Assistant Coach Ken Bauman was

"We all played a practice round last week here and got to learn what all this course is really about. There is ravine that runs just about the whole length thru most the holes on the front. A person needs to proceed with caution so that you don't hit into it," Alexander said. "So shot selection is critical along with shot placement. I thought all the kids played fairly well. The better golfers played pretty well while some of the rest struggled. It's a fairly tight course with small undulating greens."

State Golf started yesterday in Spokane and continues

"The kids are looking forward to playing one more time, this time for real deal. Something all of us have been talking about all season," Alexander said.

Cascade baseball season ends with 5-1 loss to Okanogan

By Ian Dunn Editor

The Cascade Kodiak baseball team finished up their season on May 10 in the first round of the Caribou Trail League District Playoffs. The Bulldogs beat Cascade 5-1. It was the fourth victory over Cascade this season, but closer than most.

Cascade lost 5-1.

"It was the first game in awhile that we didn't yield to the big inning. We had a couple crooked numbers in the first and the third, but other than that, it was good ball game. Okanogan is one of the top teams in the league," said Cascade Head Coach Mike Kelly. "They are the only team to beat Cashmere twice. Our league is very good. They just cruised through the NEA League and we have three teams going to state."

Sophomore TJ Thompson pitched the whole way, as he has proven to be the best pitcher for the Kodiaks this year. "TJ Thompson has worked himself into being that number one guy for us. He competes and throws strikes. He had around a 3.0 ERA this season. He went the distance in the game. He gave up 10 hits, but we're talking about a very experienced, good swinging Okanogan lineup that has hit everybody," Kelly said. "I was very proud of him. He kept us in the game and gave us a chance to compete. He got better as the game went on. TJ doesn't even know what he's capable of. He's going to be fun to watch."

Cascade finished the season 3-9 in league and 7-14 overall. Kelly feels like he has the players to turn things around.

"I really do. Last year was a trying season. This year, was trying only because of our win-loss record. I know how important that is to people. You have to have the patience to see what is going on," Kelly said. "We have a sophomore catcher, freshman third baseman, sophomore shortstop, freshman second baseman and a sophomore pitcher. That's an extremely young infield. If they have the opportunity to enjoy the process, things are going to be fine."

Kelly feels his sophomore group of Ben Sunitsch, Mason Kelly and TJ Thompson can help lead the turnaround like another talented trio did in the past.

'We've been through this before. Ben Sunitsch is doing a fantastic job behind the plate. Mason Kelly is playing a really good shortstop. TJ Thompson is playing in centerfield and is our number one pitcher," Kelly said. "It reminds me a lot of Mike Allen, Jesse Ward and Tristan Parton..right up the middle. Those three guys stuck together, just like these three guys. Those three are what drove us and turned us in the first go round. I would say we have the same opportunity."

Kelly knows things in the CTL are much different and much more competitive now.

'Back in those days, Cashmere was the class of the league. Besides that, the league was down. We were able to take advantage of that, going to state and all that," Kelly said. "We play in one of the toughest 1A leagues in the state. We have three teams in the state tournament. That says a lot. We didn't win any league games outside the forfeited games to Omak, but we were competitive in every league game with the exception of one inning. Our time will come. Just give these kids some time."

The upcoming summer schedule will be important for his team to set the foundation for next year.

"There is no denying there was a better team on the field than last year. Those kids had a year underneath them. These kids will be better, but our league is going to be better. It will be extremely competitive. We have 16 games this summer," he said.

An obituary is a way for family member(s) to commemorate a loved one's life and to notify the larger community of the deceased. Obituaries are also used for historical and ancestral data. Memorials are another way of letting the community know about the life and memories of the person who has died. A Memorial is different from an obituary. An obituary is usually current while a memorial can be written later. Obituaries and memorials need to be typed and emailed no later than Friday by 4:00 p.m. to be placed in the next available issue(s). Please call for cost of an obituary and which NCW paper(s) that it will be placed in to. Cost of the obituary/ memorial is due at the time of placement. Funeral homes and chapels can submit obituaries by Noon on Monday, unless a holiday.
