Link Transit plans new Leavenworth Park and Ride for 2018

By IAN DUNN
EDITOR

Plans are moving forward for a new Link Transit Park and Ride in Leavenworth adjacent to Safeway. Link Transit held an open house at Leavenworth City Hall on Nov. 15. Link Finance and Planning Manager Nick Covey said this has been in the works for a few years.

"We had to purchase the property and put the design down. Now, we're going out to get public comment on our design work. We hope to go out to bid in January with construction starting as soon as the snow melts, having it completed by about October, 2018," Covey said.

It will be a 90-car park and ride, for the Link Transit route 22, which serves Leavenworth. A new transit-only access road is to be constructed just east of the new Hampton Inn. Covey said the 22 bus will go into town until 11 a.m. daily with a new shuttle serving the downtown corridor from 11 a.m. to 7 p.m.

"This will hopefully take care of some traffic issues on Highway 2 during the day and help our bus stay on schedule. Right now, during the holiday season, Thursday, Friday and weekends, they get behind just because of all the traffic," Covey said.

The plan at present is for the shuttle to be complimentary service, according to Lauren Loebsock, Link planning officer.

"The shuttle is going to do the same thing the 22 does. It's going to the Shell station at the end, turn around and come back. It should be able to do that three times an hour and meet our bus when it comes in every hour," Covey said.

The Link Transit Board likes the concept, he said. The Nov. 15 meeting was the first public hearing for the actual concept.

"The city is very supportive of it. The WSDOT (Washington State Department of Transportation) is very supportive of it. Anything to get this corridor cleared off any way, shape or form, is helpful to everybody," Covey said. "We've had a lot of good agency support. Everyone we've talked to in the area has supported it as well. It has been good. Hopefully it will work as well as we think it will."

The new access road will be transit only, at least at first. Covey said the city has been deeded the property and has the right-of-way to put a full 60-foot street there with sidewalks on both sides.

"It will be road we can go both ways on eventually. Until the WSDOT signs off on right had turns of it, and the money comes along to finish the road, that may or may not happen when we build it out next spring. It may just be transit only for the first year or two. That is up to the city of Leavenworth," Covey said.

The Link Transit schedule will be changing slightly next July. Covey said the 22 route will be on a 45-minute schedule. Right now, there is commuter service every half-hour in the morning that spreads out to an hour in the afternoon, then comes back to half-hour.

"The 45 minute route should satisfy pretty much everybody on it. We're seeing some our trips with very few people on it. It's a little bit less expensive. We can save ourselves a bus," he said.

The Leavenworth 22 route is one of the best routes in the whole system. It is very well supported in Leavenworth, he said.

"We get a lot of commuters and reverse commuters, coming to Leavenworth to work, then getting home. Our last bus leaves here at 9 p.m. Hopefully we'll be able to extend that beyond the 10 p.m. range soon. Don't have any plans now, but we'd like to hit that extra shift so people can get back to Wenatchee," he said.

Plans are to open the new station in September or October next year. Darrell Smith with Perteet Engineering said the design on the new station is quite unique.

"First of all, this will be the first Bavarian themed park and ride in the state. We're really excited to be involved with that. It's going to involve a 90-plus stall parking facility. It's going to have two transit bay areas. One is for the 22 route that goes between Wenatchee and Leavenworth," Smith said. "Then, there's going to be a local circulator that will also come into it that will go through downtown. We're improving access into that greater Safeway area. There will be a new roundabout and a new connection onto Highway 2."

The roundabout will be connected to the new Zelt Strasse, which will serve the KOA, and the new access road, which at present, does not have a name. Currently, only a driver only bathroom is planned for the site. City officials are talking to Link about adding public restrooms.

In terms of coming up with a Bavarian theme for the station, Smith said they worked with TCF Architecture.

"They did a lot of different research to come up with the different accents. I think for a park and ride, they've done a really nice job getting the traditional type chairs incorporated. They will be metal, but they will look very Bavarian," Smith said. "The operator comfort station is more a ski chalet type look. They are putting in some nice accents, some traditional lettering on the side of the buildings."

The design has not gone before the Design Review Board, because there has been no final decision on the restrooms.

"Right now, the way it is configured, there is a tiny break room. There are two bathrooms on the inside and a maintenance room in the back. There will be a glass type structure on the outside for good weather protection," Smith said.

For Smith, the design of the station is real revelation for a public project.

"Years ago, I worked for the state of Washington. Sometimes government agencies are very structured. You're not going to find something like that in a design book. I think Link is doing some really nice work here and pretty darn cost effective, as well," Smith said.

School District considering selling a portion of Beaver Valley property to Lake Wenatchee Fire and Rescue

By IAN DUNN
EDITOR

Cascade School District officials are considering selling a portion of their Beaver Valley School property in Plain for construction of a new fire station.

"We were contacted by the Fire Chief of Chelan County Fire District 9, Mick LeMar. He approached me saying the fire district has expanded quite a bit due to the number of calls they are responding to because they are doing emergency medical out of their station and fire calls," said Bill Motsenbocker, Cascade superintendent. "They have a need to expand their facilities to house more vehicles, some maintenance areas, larger training areas, etc. They were interested in purchasing part of our Beaver Valley property."

The fire district is interested in about 5.5 acres. Motsenbocker said he informally contacted the board to see if they would be interested in talking about it. They indicated they were interested in continuing the discussion as long as the purchaser was another public agency, especially if part of the development plans could include space for kids.

"They've talked about having an interest in having some green space for little kids soccer and a backstop for baseball. The training room they have an interest in building would be accessible to our Beaver Valley students, staff and parents," Motsenbocker said.

A community meeting on the proposal was held on Nov. 6 at the fire station in Plain. Around 80 people attended the meeting.

"They were going to have a presentation on that and would take questions from the community. I attended and Carrie Sorensen attended. Mick LeMar gave a powerpoint presentation on the history of the district and why there was the need to expand facilities," Motsenbocker said. "The Fire District 9 commissioners were there. The chair of the commission, Rollie Schmitt, spoke the commission was in favor locating some property. Members of the community were able to ask questions and state how they felt about it."

Most of the people spoke in favor of it as long as there was going to be community access to a large meeting area and some open space. There was a small group of people who live on nearby Hill Street there.

They indicated concerns about noise and light pollution, wanting to know exactly what was being developed there and how their properties would be affected by it.

"The fire district indicated they would like to work di-

Beaver Valley: Talks continue

ing the conversation with the fire district but we have not made any agreement.”

LeMar said they have long recognized the growth occurring in the district. They are seeing more and more people moving in, and along with that, call volume has gone up.

With that, they brought in a company called ESCI, which is Emergency Services Consulting Institute, to do a strategic plan.

“One of the things identified, some of the stations we have now aren’t accommodating to us both environmentally and operationally. Three of our four stations are basically land locked, either on leased land or are encumbered by a road or a river, where we could not do an expansion,” LeMar said. “We wanted to stay close to our existing stations because they are strategically located and helps the constituents receive a lower insurance rating because we’re spread out throughout the district.”

At that point, LeMar said they started looking at the Beaver Valley School next door, noting that the back end of the 10-acre parcel has sat unused since the school was built.

“After our strategic plan and looking at our current stations, we thought let’s send a letter to the school district, and if they were ever in a place where they might consider surplus that land, we would be interested,” LeMar said. “It co-joins us. It’s right by a station that we already have. Part of our strategic plan calls for the development of a refuge, if we have disaster, for the community to be able to go to.”

LeMar remembers the big tree storm from a few years ago, which killed two people and left five critically injured. The residents there were without power for eight to 10 days.

“We really had no place to house them, to eat a meal or take a shower, wash clothes. We feel providing emergency services as volunteer fire district is not only fire related, it actually surviving in extreme conditions,” LeMar said. “I think that was accentuated by the Oso landslide when Arlington and Darrington and those small departments had to respond to that disaster. We wanted to be proactive and look for some land to expand in. That land seemed like a natural for us because it is close by.”

LeMar said they could save the taxpayers some money if they could acquire it and hold it for awhile as they develop a plan for a station on the two parcels. The would prefer that emergency response equipment still use Beaver Valley Road.

The two old metal buildings there now would go. The new station would go right there. There is the possibility for administrative spaces or a community meeting room. He said they would not be going into Hill Street itself.

“The people on Hill Street would be the most impacted. They had concerns they expressed to us. Most of those were design related. What size building? What are you going to do there?,” LeMar said. “We addressed some of their concerns. Some of their concerns, we’re not able to address until we design the facility. We invited them to be part of the design crew and committee that we’re going to put together to look at it.”

To fund the project, LeMar said they would try for an USDA block grant, which typically takes 3-to-5 years. After that, would be a design and build period. It would be several years before something is built on the property.

“We’ve missed some opportunities to have some seasonal firefights assigned by DNR (Department of Natural Resources) because we currently don’t have sleeping quarters in our stations. The propensity of fire seems to be growing and threat is not going away,” LeMar said. “We’re going to need to look into the future. Volunteer fire departments membership is declining. Ours happens to be fairly steady. We have to look 20 years into the future. In 20 years, there’s a real possibility there would be career firefighters on duty up here to respond to calls.”

The older stations were built for smaller fire trucks. The new fire trucks are much bigger. The job of the firefighter is much more complex, LeMar said.

“There’s a lot of external rules that apply to us that weren’t there when we built our old stations. We need to be deliberate about this and thoughtful about it. We need to be respectful of the folks on Hill Street and what their concerns are,” LeMar said. “At the same time, we as a fire district, have to be forward thinking. Land is becoming less and less available, less and less affordable, less and less located in an area centrally located for the responders. We’re just trying to lock some of that down.”

School children would still be able to access the property, LeMar said. His firefighters spend a lot of time at the school. They helped build the covered play area.

“We envision a place where kids can run and play. No fences if they want to cross country ski. The field will be open for that sort of thing,” LeMar said. “I’ve had grandkids graduate from Beaver Valley Elementary. I could see, if we have the right place built, kindergarten graduation could be held in the community meeting room. I honestly believe this fire district is the fabric of the community.”

Some of the folks on Hill Street think they are wanting to build the Taj-Ma-Fire Hall, he said.

“That is just not our intent. Our intention is to be forward thinking, secure some land, so in the future we can develop, so the district is prepared to address the threats and the risks that come with larger populations, more visitors, more fire risks,” LeMar said. “We’re excited to be partners with the school district, if this works out. It is key for us to be responsive to the people most affected by this. We want to include them in the design

ICICLE CREEK THIS WEEK

What does basketball have to do with the Arts?

JAMIE HOWELL

I’ve got a Christmas idea for you. How about putting a free trip for two to the Final Four under the tree for someone this year?

Between now and Dec. 22, for every $100 in contributions you make to Icicle Creek Center for the Arts, your name will be entered to win a trip for two, complete with airfare and hotel, to see the 2018 Final Four tournament in San Antonio, Texas.

But what on earth does basketball have to do with the arts? Well, I suppose it has as much to do with the arts as bake sales have to do with dance recitals, or Ford Mustang raffles with Rotary clubs.

Raising money is a fact of life for non-profits. Feeding the hungry, sheltering the poor or nurturing the arts, it’s not free to be out in the world doing good. The point is not the prize, but the role you play in making good works possible in the world.

So, how about stepping up to the line and taking a shot? In doing so, you will help to ensure that the arts remain vibrant for our children, families and communities. Winner will be drawn Dec. 23, in plenty of time for Christmas. Donate today at icicle.org!

For every $100 in contributions, donors to Icicle Creek will receive one entry to win a FREE trip to the 2018 Final Four!

Support the arts today. Happy Holidays!!

Cooking With Teri

A Cozy Christmas

'Tis the season for a lot of things including Christmas guests, whether they are visiting for a few hours or days, you want them to feel welcome. One way to start is by having your house clean and smelling good. My recipe this week will make your home inviting and cozy but don't wait until company comes to try it do it for yourself. Here are some other tips for creating a cozy guest room for holiday visitors.

Fresh flowers or a Poinsettia (unless they have allergies).
Luggage rack (or empty hangers in the closet).
Small clean trash can
Scented candle with matches
Tissues
Alarm clock
Pen and paper
XL Robe
Good reading light
Magazines
Pitcher and glass
Snacks

If you are a guest always arrive with a hostess gift and and a go with the flow attitude, offer to help with food preparation and clean up. If you bring children as guests make sure they have activities for them to enjoy as well. Clean up after yourself, you are not at a hotel you are a guest in someone's home. Enjoy your time with family and friends.

Holiday Spice Potpourri

1/2 orange, sliced

2 Cinnamon sticks, broken in half

1/2 cup fresh cranberries

1 teaspoon cloves whole or ground cloves

1 teaspoon nutmeg

Add all the ingredients in a small crockpot. Fill the crockpot with water about one inch below the rim.

If using a regular sized crockpot triple or quadruple the recipe

New Lions Club pavilion design 4x larger

By IAN DUNN
EDITOR

Leavenworth City officials are planning to replace the 40-year-old plus pavilion in Lions Club Park. City Administrator Joel Walinski said the structure is at the end of its useful life.

"Earlier this year, the Lions Club said they would like to see that re-done. They worked with Peter DeVries on an initial design, but he passed away," Walinski said, at the Oct. 10 study session. "We looked at that and did some assessment of it. Took it to the Parks Committee and said, we're at the point if we do want to re-do that thing, we need an architect to take a look."

Some of key points of the new design included building size and orientation on the site. Architect Alison Miller was hired to complete the design. She presented an initial design to the Parks Committee. The Parks Committee wanted to have a larger discussion with the city council.

Miller presented her design at the Oct. 10 city council study session. She said she started by talking to Walinski and Public Works Director Herb Amick about the prior plan, and what had been discussed with DeVries in terms of the size of the structure and how it would be used.

"Based on the current use of the park from when the first pavilion was done, a much larger pavilion would be required. The potential to use that as a skating rink that fit. We looked at that as well," Miller said. "There are two major considerations in my design. The size that would be appropriate, how it would be used both for fitting the park and making it Bavarian."

The new pavilion is about four times the size of the existing one.

"It is the same distance from the pool which allows for the trees and the nice green space around it. Centered on the same point. A little closer to the restroom, but not crowding it. Leaving quite a bit of green space. It has a quite large roof overhang in Bavarian style," Miller said.

The roof covering would probably be composition shingle, she said. Shake would be traditional but more expensive. Councilman Elmer Larsen asked about any vertical bracing for the snow load.

Miller said there would probably be steel embedded Walinski said.

Miller said she has started getting feedback from the Design Review Board.

"Some of the things they have mentioned is, for this type of structure, it would probably be appropriate to simplify this. They said the curved elements, for this region, might not be the most appropriate. Also, larger post bases, which could also help," Miller said.

Electrical would be added to the pavilion, but not water, Walinski said. There would be lights in the structure.

"The simplicity of the design is part of its appeal, I think. It's clean," Farivar said.

Miller said lights could be arranged in many different ways. Total cost for the project is $310,000.

"The next few steps is we're going to go to the Design Review Board and have a more formal conversation with them. Probably sit down with some of the local non-profits and community groups, talk about if there are any modifications they want to talk about," Walinski said.

It is surprising how much

The proposed new pavilion at Lions Club Park could also accommodate ice skating during the winter months.

into some of the connections. There is also good potential for some cross bracing for structural reasons.

"What we've done here is just the architectural drawing. One of the next steps would be to have an engineer look at it to make sure the structure is sound," Walinski said.

Larsen asked about the potential for a skating rink, and whether any cooling coil would be installed.

"We hadn't anticipated cooling coil, but we had anticipated a concrete slab where you could put an edging board up so, if and when the weather got cold enough, you would have a small skating rink,"

"I believe we would have lights similar to what we have here. Not necessarily full use lights, but enough lights for security and give you the light to go home," Walinski said.

"If we are thinking of the skating rink, that is an evening activity, so we would have to have lights. We would need to upsize our electrical to accommodate for the future use of that," said Mayor Cheri Kelley Farivar.

If it is going to be a multi-use, with evening events, then having lights makes sense, Larsen said. He also said there was no place for storage. Walinski said temporary storage could be added.

locals use that for reunions, parties, Larsen said.

"It occurred to me how beautiful a wedding venue that would be, if we would consider renting it like the Gazebo," Farivar said.

Ellyn Margaret Parkins

Ellyn Margaret Parkins was born May 23, 1941 in Bellingham, Washington to Josephine and Hugh McKenna where she graduated high school and loved to roller skate.

She married Henry W. Parkins in Snoqualmie, Washington on Jan. 6, 1962 and moved to Leavenworth where she had lived ever since.

The most important thing to Ellyn was her family where she put them before herself and instilled family values. She loved fishing with her family where she would bring a book and put a pole in the water (without any bait) just enjoying the peacefulness of being together.

Anyone who knew Ellyn would recognize her contagious laugh and loved her unique sense of humor. Ellyn had a green thumb and loved working barefooted in her garden and flower beds.

Ellyn now resides with the angels which she so loved. She will be dearly missed by all who knew and loved her.

She is survived by her husband Henry; children Colleen, Teri and Michael; Grandchildren Ryan, Tasha, Talen, Karlee, Jacob, Blake, Jeremy, Taylor and Jessica; and three great-grandchildren. She was preceded in death by her parents Josephine and Hugh McKenna; her siblings Lloyd and Muriel; and one granddaughter Kierstin.

At Ellyn's request there will be no service held at this time. Memorial contributions may be made in Ellyn's name to St. Jude's Children's Research Hospital at 262 Danny Thomas Place, Memphis, Tennessee 38105.

Joan Sanger

Joan Sanger, a resident of Leavenworth for the past 73 years, died Wednesday, Nov. 15th, 2017 at Mountain Meadows Senior Living in Leavenworth.

She was born February 21, 1921 in Staining, Lancashire, England to George and Lillian (Blackstock) Bradshaw. After Joan's mother passed away, she was raised by her father and stepmother Ruby.

During World War II, on Nov. 20, 1942 in Blackpool, England, Joan married 8th

Army Air Corpsman, Paul Sanger of Leavenworth. Joan came to the U.S. in November, 1944 where she has lived ever since.

Joan survived by her daughter Carol and husband George Sikora; son Barry and his wife Jan Sanger and son Ed and his wife Peachy Sanger; Three granddaughters Doreen, Shelly and Jillana and nine great-grandchildren. She was preceded in death by her parents her husband Paul and a grandson

Casey.

What an exceptional lady she was. We will miss her. Until we meet again. Love you.

The family would like to thank Dr. Mara Merritt, the Cascade Medical EMTs, Mountain Meadows and their dedicated staff

At Joan's request, no services will be held at this time. Ward's Funeral Chapel, Leavenworth is in charge of the arrangements.

PUD selects route for transmission lines into Bavarian substation

The Chelan County PUD has selected the route for a new transmission line into proposed new Bavarian substation, located at the intersection of North Road and Chumstick Hwy.

Transmission lines bring the power into the substation, while the distribution lines spread the power out into the surrounding community. These high voltage lines are typically on poles, not underground.

"We went through some stakeholder engagement with people that were interested in helping provide input on three different routes we had proposed. We met with them in August and September. In October, we got direction from the board to go ahead and move forward with alternative three, which stays mostly on Chelan County and PUD property. It's also the shortest route," Teka Sellers, PUD customer outreach specialist II.

One of the most important aspects of the project was to have a redundant feed or looped transmission. There will be two feeds going into the substations.

"If one of the substation were to go down, or we pick up a lot of load from the other substation, we would still have a feed going into the substation, if one of the transmission lines went down," Sellers said.

"Not all of our substations have looped transmission or a redundant feed like that. It was important we took the opportunity to do that here."

One route will come out of the existing station, up the Chumstick Hwy. and into the new substation. The other line will tap off the existing substation and come into the new substation to create the loop.

"We wanted to take the opportunity since we're building this new substation to have looped transmission. That was really important to us to make sure we could create a loop. We knew one of the transmission lines would come out of the existing substation and into the new substation," Sellers said. "We had some different options on how we were going to get that second line in there. We've presented three alternatives. The one the PUD preferred was also the one preferred by the stakeholder group as well."

Now that a transmission line route has been chosen, Sellers said they will fold the to provide input. Sellers said they would get a first permit-level design done and share that with the stakeholders and get a little more input. Then, continue to move forward.

"Maybe in the spring, we should have a permit-level design ready to submit to Chelan County to initiate the conditional use permitting process. Then, we'll continue with design, permitting and design of the transmission line and the design of the substation into one project. As they move forward, they will be designing both things. There is a substation design stakeholder group, which has been asked engineering in 2018. Then, we expect substation and transmission line construction in 2019 and 2020," she said.
