A 31-year old Peshastin native was shot and killed by police on July 27 in Wenatchee. Matthew L. Folden, who was living in Wenatchee, was shot three times and later died at Central Washington Hospital.

According to Wenatchee Police, a 911 call was received by RiverCom shortly after 10 p.m. reporting there was a man screaming with a knife in hand in the Albertson's parking lot on North Miller Street in Wenatchee. Someone nearby called 911, according to Wenatchee Police Sergeant Edgar Reinfeld.

"It was a citizen who happened to be in the parking lot doing some work. He reported there was male moving around in the parking lot screaming incoherently, waving a knife in the air. He observed this suspect was Mr. Folden," Reinfeld said. "He headed west toward the Target parking lot and may have looped around the building with Starbucks and the other businesses. Then, came back toward Albertsons. Before the officers arrived, Folden started coming toward the person who called 911. The dispatcher told him to get out of there. Officers arrived shortly thereafter."

Wenatchee Police Officer Albert Gonzalez arrived on the scene. He had been a Wenatchee Police Officer for two years and has a total of four years of law enforcement experience. When confronted with the allegedly armed emotional Folden, Gonzalez shot him three times.

It all happened very quickly.

"It was a tense and rapidly involving circumstance. We have not released a timetable for the entire event yet. We want to confirm everything. We're trying to take a conservative approach, not releasing information until we know 100 percent exactly what happened, so we don't have to backtrack because of an error, because we've rushed out with something we did not fully understand," Reinfeld said.

Gonzalez has been placed on administrative leave as a routine part of an Officer Involved Shooting investigation.

"We have a number of witness statements and we are getting more interviews. Until we've interviewed and identified everybody, I don't think we going to try to come to any conclusions about the totality of what was said or done," Reinfeld said.

This incident is being investigated by the North Central Washington Special Investigations Unit. This is a multi-jurisdictional team with Chelan County Sheriff's Office, Douglas County Sheriff's Office, East Wenatchee Police Department, Okanogan County Sheriff's Office, Wenatchee Police Department, and the Washington State Patrol. As of the time of this press release, the Washington State Patrol Crime Scene Response Team is processing the scene for evidence. Chelan County Sheriff's Office is the lead agency for this incident.

Reinfeld said the NCW Special Investigations Unit has nearly completed interviews with all identified witnesses. A through identification of all video evidence collected is also underway.

"We seen some stuff posted on social media that we have seen. These were posted by folks shortly after the shooting. Looks like one was pulled down. We don't know if anyone has a video of the shooting itself or the events leading up to it, but if they do, we want to hear from them, we want to see them. It is evidence. We need that stuff to determine what happened in the end," Reinfeld said.

The two videos posted to social media have not been helpful, he said, because they don't start until after the shooting and they don't show a lot. One of the people shooting a video is upset and yelling.

"He is a subject that is known to us. We've had some less than positive run-ins with him over the past couple years. Everybody has their deal and that's okay. He's entitled to speak his opinion. The video doesn't show us anything. It is well after the fact," Reinfeld said. "The other one that was posted was also from after and also doesn't show us much of anything. It's hard to determine how much value there will be long term."

Reinfeld said they had some contacts with Folden prior to the shooting, but certainly not like the contacts they have with certain people every week. He was not known like that. The officers at the scene had never had contact with him before.

It is not known yet whether the officers on scene gave any verbal commands that Folden did not comply with.

"We have a number of witness statements and we are getting more interviews. Until we've interviewed and identified everybody, I don't think we going to try to come to any conclusions about the totality of what was said or done," Reinfeld said.

There are still some key issues the police are trying to find out, such as what were Folden's actions leading up to and during the event. Reinfeld said they want to know if there are other witnesses, some more video. A variety of people have already come forward.

"There was some concern that officers were very aggressive in clearing the area around the scene, telling people to go away or leave. You can see that in the one video. It's easy in those moments with all that going on to really work very hard and very rapidly to clear an area and preserve evidence," he said. "You want to say, go over there for a minute, then we'll come and get your statement. I think there was some miscommunication in the first few seconds. We can see from video, we can see someone and go talk to them."

"Every search for evidence is an excusatory evidence and exculpatory evidence for everyone involved. We look for evidence they were doing the bad thing we thought they were doing. We also look for evidence they did not do that. They are equally critical for every party involved."

It is alleged the whole incident started as a verbal argument between Folden and his girlfriend.

"We've heard a number of statements that it may have happened not in the store, but in the area. We're still trying to get that finalized. Some of the parties involved with the events leading up to it have not been interviewed," Reinfeld said. "They have not exactly wanted to talk. There's always people who don't want to talk to us. They don't have to. They are not compelled in any way, but if they talk to us and give us their side of the story, it helps us get there a lot faster."

At present, the girlfriend had not given the police a full interview, Reinfeld said.

Anyone with information in this case is requested to call the Chelan County Sheriff's Office Tip Line at 667-6845 regarding case number 17C08486.

Benefit show held for Matt Folden

By IAN DUNN
EDITOR

Around 200 people gathered on Aug. 2 at Der Hinterhof in Leavenworth to remember Matt Folden and raise money for his family. According to organizers, $2,500 was raised through the event, which included live music, a raffle and beer sales.

Many at the benefit shared their thoughts about Matt and about what happened to him.

"It was clearly evident from last night's event, seeing the multitude of people from different backgrounds, music genres, and personalities, all coming together in such overwhelming force with nothing, but positivity and love, that Matthew Folden impacted a great many lives, forever touching and inspiring others, to keep trying, to never give up, to love and create. This is the legacy of his life on all those lives he touched," Chris Mains of Leavenworth said.

Mains was very troubled by the events of that faithful night. He said that tragic and unexpected loss of such a positive member of many families and communities raises many questions.

"One on so many of our minds is ... why did this happen? Where were de-escalation tactics? Non-lethal force? What's the point of all that if officers aren't willing to utilize the numerous tools at their disposal and instead resort to heinous violence," Mains said. "This is not protecting forgotten, and we will fight for him with every breath we have."

Ashley Peterson of Leavenworth helped to coordinate the event. She said it was a memorable experience, one that make her feel like she was part of the Justice League with over 200 sidekicks.

Voters overwhelmingly approve levy increase for Chelan County Fire District 3

By IAN DUNN

Voters in Chelan County Fire District 3 have approved a levy increase. The Aug. 1 election results showed 78 percent voting in favor of the measure. Chelan County Fire District 3 Chief Kelly O'Brien was very thankful.

"We're very appreciative of the voting public that came out and supported us with overwhelming support," O'Brien said. "There's been a lot of hard work here over the past 20, 30, 40 years and I hope the public recognizes the hard work the men and women of Fire District 3 are doing. The vote shows that support."

The bond for the current fire station is almost paid off. Currently, CCFD3 is collecting 39 cents per $1,000 of assessed valuation on a bond that was passed in 1997 to build the fire station.

Taxpayers are now paying 45 cents for per $1,000 to the fire district for the bond and general levy rate. With the approval of the levy rate increase, the first district will now receive $1 per $1,000 of assessed valuation.

The current CCFD3 budget is $409,602, which has been the same level for the past 20 years, during which time their workload has increased dramatically. CCFD3 protects $1 billion worth of assessed value within the fire district.

"It's going to be a dramatic change for us. We're really excited about the future," O'Brien said.

The levy lift is going to allow the district to hire more firefighters and pay off their

Benefit show: Outpouring of support for Matt Folen's family

Matt Folen and his family and one another. It makes me proud of where we are, and where we come from. We are all such a lucky group of weirdos," Peterson said.

Peterson said Matt's character shone through each individual that night.

"He's picked so many of us up, in all aspects. His nickname 'crazy legs' was commemorated, in full force once the DJs started the second half of the night. I've never seen my people get down like that. We all were inspired by his amazing talent of dancing," Peterson said. "Matt was so open and caring. There was never any judgement from that man. He was always there to make you look up and be grateful for what you have. The amount of love everyone expressed for each other was a direct result of the lessons Matt Folen taught us."

Kenzi Converse said no matter what it was that Matt did at whatever lengths, be it amateur or pro, he did it with intention and excitement.

"It was inspiring to see how aggressively passionate he was and it resonates with me. As far as what happened, I can't really say I've had such an intense blend of sadness and anger before in my life. It's not right. Our community has suffered a gigantic loss and it didn't need to happen. I question the safety and peace of our valley," Converse said. "I question the authority taken by the police officer. I question it all. I knew Matt. We all loved him. He did not deserve this. His children did not deserve this. His friends did not deserve this. His friends did not deserve this."

Another close friend of Folen, Aki Iba, said the whole benefit came together quickly, the music, the raffle, the prizes donated by local businesses, the silent auction.

"I was amazed at the amount this community was willing to give to help my fallen brother's family. If there is one thing we can say about our community is that when times are tough you can always reach out and people are willing to lend a hand," Iba said. "The first band of the night was Heavy Petting, a new local band comprised of members from various other bands around town. And they were amazing. As I took the stage with my band The Rich and Rare Rebels, I looked out at the scene in front of me and my heart swelled with pride. This was the event I knew Matt had always dreamed of."

The owner of Der Hinterhof, Erin Mcfann, donated her venue along with money from beer sales.

"It was a moving night to be part of; to see so many people come from near and far to remember and honor someone who touched them. The night was full of stories, hugs, tears and an outpouring of generosity for his family. It was an honor to share our space," said Mcfann.

The event attracted people from so many different circles, Iba said, people that normally would not be attending such an event.

"The amount of love in the air that night was palpable. Everyone reconnected that night in a way they probably hadn't done in years. Even though we lost so much that horrible Thursday when Matt was taken from us, we were at least reminded to let others know how much we love them as often as we can. In short, this was the perfect event, it was the kind of show I know Matt would have loved. The only thing missing was him," Iba said.

Suzie Anderson said she lost a vital member of the community, a visionary, an artist, a musician, a beaming personality, a real friend.

"Matt was so full of love. It's apparent in all of the love that was at the benefit show. We were all hugging, crying, loving each other, really feeling all of it. That's exactly what he would have wanted. It's completely unfair how this all happened," Anderson said. "I want his name to be clean. I want justice for him. I want everyone to know how special he was and that he didn't have to die that way. The officer made a terrible decision. He didn't use any sort of de-escalation procedure and made his decision to kill Matt within seconds. The officer didn't even have enough time to figure out what was going on and if he would have stopped and been more observant I think this would have been a different outcome."

Dax Anderson said the event was indicative of Matt's character to the utmost.

"It was positive, it was hype, it was emotional, it was art. Punk, metal, hip hop, electronic, it doesn't matter. We're all family. I saw people I hadn't seen in years gathering in memory of our brother. We didn't have a single incident, argument, nothing. It was beautiful," Dax Anderson said.

The dialogue surrounding his death is predictable at best, inhumane at it's core, Dax Anderson said.

"The rumors and hate speech surrounding it is deplorable as well. Matt is not a threat. His heart has united this entire valley. He needed help that our current community and valley wasn't prepared to provide. He's a very emotional person, but he'd never put hands on anyone.

This was a matter of mental health, not immediate execution," Dax Anderson said.

Leavenworth wastewater treatment upgrades moving forward

By IAN DUNN
EDITOR

Another step in the process to upgrade the Leavenworth wastewater treatment plan took place on July 11 at a public hearing which was conducted primarily to comply with the requirements of the loan to the city.

City Administrator Joel Walinski said this is one of the requirements of the Rural Development loan they are applying for, to show why the upgrade is necessary, what the city is trying to do and what are the potential implications for the rates.

"The reason we're doing

City Administrator Joel Walinski

the waste treatment plant improvement is mainly to address the TMDL (total maximum daily load) on phosphorus. We need tertiary treatment at the treatment plant. We have a plant that has plenty of capacity. We're at about 65 percent going into a 20 year history," Walinski said. "... some of the machinery at the plant does need to be replaced. That is part of this process too."

As part of the waste treatment plan, Walinski said they looked at the collection system. There are a number of pieces with the city collection system that need to be upgraded, particularly the interceptor that runs along the river, which needs to be replaced.

A portion of the interceptor has been replaced, but it needs to be finalized, he said. Overall improvements come to about $13 million. This is a rough estimate, which was used for the loan application.

"We've put in the application, which is currently being reviewed by RD, Rural Development funding. We're hoping that with the approval of this, which we should hear about in October. The funding does not become available until we break ground," Walinski said. "If we go this route, there will be construction funding, which we will have to reach out to a bank. Cashmere Valley (Bank) has said they would provide us with construction funding, which is probably a loan of one or two years, to cover the initial cost of engineering and initial cost of construction."

Once the construction begins, that is when the RD funds becomes available. As part of the application requirements, the city has completed an environmental assessment and has done a preliminary engineering report, which has been reviewed and accepted by RD.

The engineering reported basically took the waste treatment facility plan and put it into a format that RD likes, he said. The other piece, which Finance Director Chantell Steiner has been working on quite a bit, is the financial feasibility and cost analysis.

"The cost analysis comes out of the facility plan, but financial feasibility is where Chantell provides a lot of the numbers, how those numbers affect us, in terms of where it fits in the overall program," Walinski said. "Do we require for poverty rates here in town? Do we hit that poverty measure? That is about median incomes. What does that look like once our rates have increased? How does that fit? If it is over a certain level, you hit your poverty basis and that's when RD can step in and say, we can provide you a low interest loan and we can provide some grant funding."

Mayor Cheri Kelley Farivar asked if the current rate study would factor into this. Walinski said they are going to use the current rates. He said they are locking in the rates for this piece of the study. Also the debt service is locked in too.

That is an important piece, Walinski said, because there is a lot of debt on the books right now for the waste treatment plant.

"But over the course of the next two years, that debt is going to be disappearing. We do want to get locked in so they take a look at where we are financially right now," he said.

Councilman Elmer Larsen wondered if they could divert some of the RD funds to a Leavenworth to Peshastin wastewater pipeline, if the regionalization study says that is feasible.

"I don't think that would be available, however, I think our timing looks pretty good here. We'll get the regionalization study started. It will be completed by the end of December, first part of January. At that time, the council can still have some flexibility, because you're not signing off on anything," Walinski said. "You still have the flexibility, if the regionalization study would say, ok this is the best way to go. Take those $8 million towards piping to Peshastin, if that is the best methodology. We would stop with the RD funding and have to after some other type of funding."

In terms of the application, Walinski said he thinks they've done a pretty good job in terms of the facility plan providing a lot of options and not locking the city into any-

Fire levy results: Plan is to hire more firefighters indebtedness, which is about $250,000 due to replacing equipment.

"We're going to hire two career full time and two six-month seasonal positions. If we accomplish anything next year, we want debt reduction completed and the hiring process completed," O'Brien said.

Currently, there are only three full time employees, O'Brien, Assistant Chief Glenn Brautaset and Chief Bill Horner. There are also plans to add to the resident program. At present, the district can only afford to pay $150 per month, while other districts are offering $700 to $1,000.

The levy increase should allow the district to make it more attractive to resident firefighters. O'Brien would like to keep the resident program full. They are planning to wrap their resident program around the Wenatchee Valley College fire science program.

The district also plans to further develop their drill field, so firefighters can practice emergency situations. They also want to implement a district wide Firewise program.

Certainly a key aspect of the increased funds is the ability of the fire district keep their rating high so property insurance rates stay low. Mainly, this will allow them to replace needed equipment on a more timely basis.

"The processes will be put in place, but the first thing that needs to happen is to pay off our debt. That will allow us to start building a capital reserve so we can pay for equipment when it is time to replace something."

Wastewater: Council will decide what improvements to the collection system

"If we go with the phosphorus tertiary treatment, is there is a different place we can put it so we don't have to rebuild the full public works building? That is a question in the report. We still have to figure that out," Walinski said. "I know Herb (Amick, public works director) has looked at two or three different options. Is sand filtering the best method to use? There is other types of filtering that we're looking at. Some are more expensive, some are less expensive."

One of the other pieces, Walinski said, is the collection system, in terms what is spent on it. At some point in time, he said the council would have to make a decision on what to do with the collection system improvements, primary, secondary, etc.

Since the city is putting in for full funding, all the collection projects can be done. Those are questions for down the road, he said. The city is applying for a 40-year loan from RD with an interest rate of 3 percent.

"... if we do our loan only, the new sewer rate is $92 per month, per household. Currently, the rate is $55.64. The hopeful scenario, if we did treatment and collection for $13 million and we had a 55 percent loan, 45 percent grant, then that rate increase would be $24, which would be $79," Walinski said. "The other piece that we haven't figured into this, the debt service part.

Right now, your rate has $11 or $12 of debt service that will be going away by 2019-2020. There will be a decrease."

Other factors play into it too, Walinski said. The council could decide not to borrow the entire $13 million, and not do the full project. Regionalization might play into it. The city could dip into cash reserves to buy down the project, he said.

"There are other ways to reduce the $13 million. That can bring down those prices too. I think staff has done a good job realizing we have a certain standard of treatment plant that has to be in place. We have a collection system that has to be in place. But also, measuring in on rates is very important," Walinski said. The goal, he said, to be comfortable enough so that in late October, the city have Varella (engineers) finalize some of the engineering. Councilwoman Sharon Waters asked if regionalization would factor into any of their decisions.

Walinski does not believe the city will be far enough along to make any firm decisions on regionalization.

"But it could be by January or February, we can say, do we think that is going to influence our engineering going forward? That is going to have to be a conversation we are going to have to have. Does the regionalization look promising? Is there a piece there we can grab onto and change our overall planning process? That's going to be a January-February conversation," Walinski said.

Councilwoman Margaret Neighbors asked what happens if the RD funding does not come through. Walinski said their second plan is to apply for Ecology funding.

"That is a stripped down version, where it would just focus on the facility. You can either do collection or plant improvements. You can't combine. RD lets you combine," Walinski said. "Those applications are due Oct. 15. We're going to proceed with those in the event this doesn't come through."

Talking with RD, Walinski said they are very supportive of this program. The RD regional office is very supportive too. Councilwoman Carolyn Wilson asked how the city would qualify for poverty when the property values here are so high. Walinski said property values do not factor in.

"We use Chelan County median income. You take your rate, divide it by the median income and if its greater than 2 percent, you start the walk up the hill toward your poverty level. Definitely, if it hits 4 or 5 percent, it is poverty. Definitely, with our rate, it would be greater than 3 percent," he said.

Although it is called a poverty factor, Farivar said it might be better called a hardship factor. That is, how much more of a hardship would it be on the rate payers?

City Public Works Department relies on smart phones to track work

By IAN DUNN
EDITOR

The Public Works Department at the city of Leavenworth has gone high tech with a new smart phone based system that tracks a variety of work related issues. Public Works Director Herb Amick briefed the city council on the system at the June 13 study session.

The Mobile 311 company approached the city about purchasing a GPS based system that tracks work orders. Amick said they were looking for something simple, because he didn't want the workers in the field sitting around punching a bunch of buttons on a smart phone.

After hearing the Mobile 311 presentation, he said they looked it over and liked it so they purchased it.

"We actually introduced the guys and trained them in March. In April, we implemented the system. Each truck has a smart phone. They go to the app to see streets, water, sewer, building maintenance, sanitation, parks, signs," Amick said. "So if they see a pothole, they punch 'streets,' then select 'pothole.' Then, they can make out a work order. They can put a priority from 1-to-5, the address, comments, take photos, create a work order."

Amick said workers can look at a list of work orders in the general vicinity, finish a job or go to the next job. Mayor Cheri Kelley Farivar asked if the system can geocode, the process of converting addresses into geographic coordinates.

"It geocodes, but it doesn't work too well, because of the mountainous area, we've gotten some false addresses. We've gotten to the point where when they do the work order, they just put in an address or intersection," Amick said.

Another feature, Amick said, is that he can look at the map with work orders to be done and assign workers. On the larger desktop map, water, streets, parks, trash are different color codes.

Each crew member carries a smart phone, and if they encounter a pot hole, they can record it, said Parks Director John Schons.

"I can assign a work order to someone. Take photos. There was one for a water main freeze on Sholze Street. We put in a work order, high priority," Amick said.

There was an incident last winter with frozen pipes all over town, each with varying degrees of severity. Farivar asked if this system could be used for something like that? Amick said they can track anything and monitor the progress.

"We're putting in the pay meters. That's marked as a work in progress. They put up a status, which they can change and edit at any time. When it is done, you mark complete," Amick said.

"During that freeze we had this winter, people were so upset, calling me, Joel, Herb, talking to our guys on the street. Having a record of when somebody has been there, when it is likely to be fixed, would allow us to have a cohesive message to the community. I really like that," Farivar said.

Councilman Elmer Larsen said they can track all the water repairs during the year.

"If you do this for 5-10 years, you'll see the trends of broken water pipes. You can see where the bad pipes are or if you have a stormwater that continually keeps plugging up. Over time, we can direct some fixes toward those," Joel Walinski, Leavenworth city administrator.

Councilwoman Margaret Neighbors asked if the system could be updated. Amick said GIS (geographic information system) can be incorporated. He said they will incorporate this is getting a lot of use in the garbage system. If he sees a lid up, there is a extra charge."

Farivar wanted clarification about the charge for having garbage lid up.

"If it is full and overflowing. If he has to go to an extra pick up, he puts it on here. If he sees a broken can, he puts it on here. If the can is not out, he can put it on here. So if someone calls to say their trash was not picked, we can say the can was not out," Amick said.

A big improvement from the sticky note, Schons joked.

"This would be particularly applicable to a duplex or fourplex, where they have multiple users. They really need two containers, but they're making due with one," Farivar said.

Amick said this is mostly an issue with commercial accounts, not residents.

"I can make custom reports. I can separate costs by work type. I can do all kinds of reports. You can get an idea of where the guys are, how much time they are spending at a cold patch, how much spending on meter turn offs," Amick said. "There's one other unique thing on here called 'bread crumbs.' All the guys are colored coded. You can see everyone on the map."

Mobile 311 is the new work tracking system being used by the city.

that once he gets the GIS system where he wants it.

Councilwoman Carolyn Wilson asked Amick if his phone beeps when someone puts in a work order. Amick said he can receive an email, but he prefers just to check the list every morning.

"It shows each job and the number of hours they spend at each. We can list the hours, equipment used. I'm actually starting to put labor rates for the equipment, dollar amounts per hour for the equipment," Amick said. "You can put materials in there. We begin to track all this stuff. One way Farivar asked if the guys like being tracked. Amick said not so much, but the bread crumbs feature is not something he uses. Larsen felt this would give the city the analytical tools for vehicle replacement.

"You can imagine if we have a sewer back up and it is logged on here. Insurance wise, it gives us a huge advantage," Amick said. "This is in the working stages. The guys are using it. There are a few glitches we are working out."

The Automobile comes to Chelan County

One hundred years ago not one automobile was listed as personal property in Chelan County! Suddenly, in 1906 half a dozen could be seen maneuvering over the rough streets and byways. No one could foresee the popularity and the changed lifestyle brought about by this invention that relegated Dobbin to the back pasture and filled the air with loud noises and gasoline fumes.

Until the appearance of the automobile, ranch families usually had both saddle and buggy horses as well as work animals. Practically everyone had farm wagons, a two-seated hack, a single buggy or both. Several owned carts, pulled by a pony, that especially were enjoyed by the men.

Streams were innocent bridges, the one across the Columbia at Wenatchee being the first to span that stream anywhere. The railroad built a bridge on the Wenatchee near the mouth, but lower down than the present one.

Originally, settlers forded the river four times to reach Cashmere valley. In 1898 homesteaders got out the logs for one at Cashmere. Leavenworth folks built their own the same year. Peshastin had an early log structure and before that a ferry.

Bessie Titchenal Lawrence commented in an early interview, "The roads followed section lines, the creeks or the mountain. No special effort was made to keep them straight or level. Built by the pioneers who needed them, they were placed where it was easiest to put them. They were maintained by the ranchers, mostly by a V-scraper and team." A limited amount of attention was given them by county road departments, but it was impossible to attend to them all and with the snow and rain, the work needed to be redone each year. Snow plowing was unknown. Built with horse traffic in mind, they were only one lane long after the first automobiles appeared. According to Verne Shore, pioneer settler along the Wenatchee, "The hitching rack (where horses were tied) stood before the business section of each town. Amateur horse races and riding bucking horses in the streets were a frequent occurrence. The livery stable and blacksmith shops were both popular institutions and profitable enterprises."

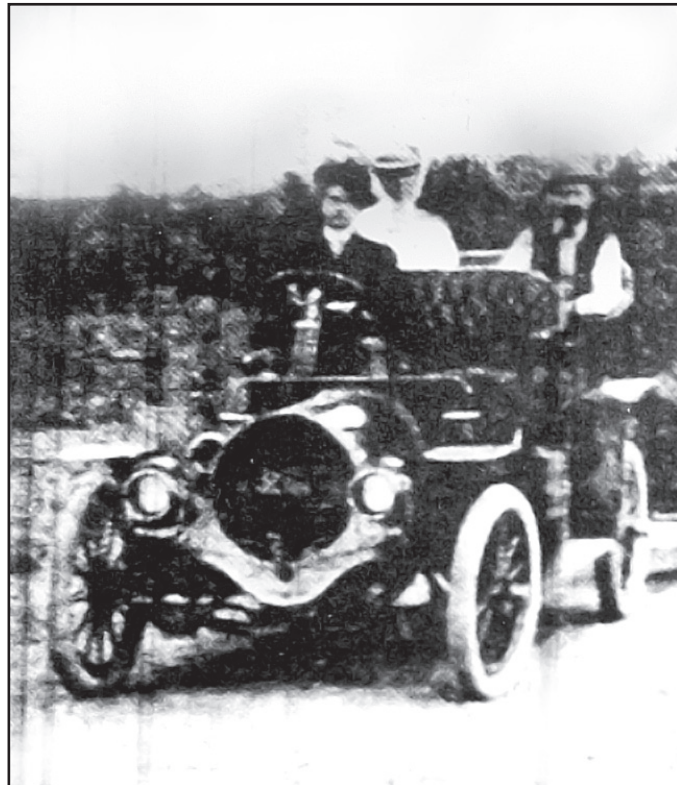

The first automobiles were more like automated buggies than cars. Most did not have steering wheels, but were guided by a "stick". Today's balloon tires had not been invented. Gasoline was shipped in by the railroad in barrels. There were no garages to service the machines. Every owner was his own mechanic; dealing with troubles soon made an expert out of the driver, if he wished to reach his destination.

Cars without tops or sides meant that inclement weather was a problem. Summer dust caused those who chose to travel in one to don special robes to protect their clothing and for the women, huge veils that fitted over the head and down the shoulders.

Winter weather could be a problem. The advice of a woman, "who had toured much in cold weather" was carried by a local paper: "The outfit I designed proved entirely satisfactory and may prove of assistance to you. Protection from the cold being the point, I had a long serge skirt made, lined with a second material for warmth. Over this I wore a white jersey with a collar fitting well up around the neck on the style of the fisherman's knitted ones. Over this came a dark blue fur-lined coat. For headgear I wore a knitted cap with ear flaps that fastened under the chin. As a result there was no dust veil to fly away or be untidy, no risk from the chilly air, while the head gear kept my coiffure perfectly in order, whatever the speed or the amount of wind that might be blowing."

Such a remarkable happening as the appearance of the first home-owned automobile rated an item in the newspaper. At Cashmere, it was noted that D.W. Wright had purchased a Ford. Samuel Beecher of Peshastin likewise drove a Ford to be the first folks along Peshastin Creek watched delightedly. John B. Adams, popular saloonist, was Leavenworth's first car owner. His was a seven passenger Pullman.

One of the first automobiles in Chelan County appeared in 1906.

City councils soon were forced to adopt ordinances regulating the speed of such vehicles. The town marshal was saddled with the task of enforcement. About this time, Leavenworth's Marshal Mike Fitz, was faced with the need to determine if the new ordinance also applied to the speed of horses, as there had been no such regulation previously. Assuring himself that it surely did, he stopped the two young women waitresses, newly arrived from a coast town, and hailed them before Judge Grant. Commenting that they were racing their steeds down Front Street, "riding astride like men," as no lady would be caught doing, the justice assessed them $5 each and warned them to take to the roads outside of town in the future for their racing.

Probably because their orchards were returning handsome amounts, Cashmere seems to have excelled in the number of locally owned vehicles five years after the first ones appeared.

There were forty owned in the town and its vicinity, "Which is probably the greatest number in ratio to the population in the entire state," wrote a reporter. "The automobile is no longer an experiment but is now a necessity to the pursuit of business and pleasure."

There were at Cashmere Internationals, Studebakers, Locobiles, Stevens-Duryeas, Oldsmobiles, Napiers, Interstates, Fords and Brush Runabouts, according to the newsmen. In January 1912 the Cashmere Garage announced it was preparing to receive March delivery on sixteen such vehicles, two rail cars full. Other interested clients with buying in mind were expecting to order before the summer was over. "The cars are the latest 1912 pattern. They embody all the latest features and show many improvements over last year," Mr. Paton assured readers.

Wishing to set a speed record, a lumbermill owner informed the Leavenworth paper "He had went and done it!" He set out from the Club Pool and reached Wenatchee in fifty-five minutes! Doubting Thomases, and there were several, told him that less than seventy minutes was impossible. Mr. Moore, offering to bet one of the most vociferous $100 it could be done and insisting he ride along to check the time was refused by that gentleman, who replied that his life insurance wasn't paid up as yet! Mr. Moore had become known to Wenatchee constables and twice had paid for his heavy on the gas proclivities.

There were some drawbacks to owning a car then, however, as this ode to "My Auto" sets forth:

My auto, 'tis of thee,
Short cut to poverty
Of thee I chant.
I blew a pile of dough
For thee two years ago
And now you refuse to go.
Or won't or can't.
Through town and countryside
You were my joy and pride
Ah, happy day.
I loved thy gaudy hue,
Thy nice black dress, so new.
Now you're down and out for true.
In every way.
To thee, old rattle box,
Came many bumps and knocks
For thee I grieve.
Frayed are your seats and worn,
Badly thy top is torn.
Whooping cough affects thy horn,
I do believe.
The motor has the grippe.
The spark plug has the pip
And woe is thine.
I, too, have suffered chills,
Ague and kindred ills,
Endeavoring to pay my bills
Since thou wert mine.
Gone is my bank roll now.
No more would choke a cow,
As once before.
Yet, if I had the ven
So help me, John Amen.
I'd buy myself a car again
And spend some more.

Q: What are some of the considerations I should make for traveling with medicine?

It's SO exciting...you've been dreaming of going to Florence and Rome for ages, and this is the year it's going to happen. You'll fly to Rome and tour the Coliseum, Spanish Steps and Trevi Fountain, take the train to Florence and see the statue of David. Your itinerary, plane tickets and passports are ready, and it's time to start packing!

Or...maybe your dream this summer is walking along the beach, eating saltwater taffy, and feeling the waves lap over your feet as you watch the sun set over the water. Next week you'll be loading up your car with beach chairs, towels and coolers, and heading for the Oregon Coast.

After you make sure there's enough of the right type of clothes and shoes, what about your medicines? In one survey of 1016 adults interviewed nationwide, 20% admitted that they had forgotten to take their medicine with them while on vacation. And among those who did remember to take their pills, 1 in 8 people didn't pack enough to last them for entire trip. Yikes!

Planning ahead will help you avoid a panicked last minute detour to the pharmacy on the way to the airport. And if you use a mail order pharmacy, you'll need to plan even FURTHER ahead to avoid last-minute scrambling to acquire enough medicine to tide you over, creating delays that can derail your departure.

Your insurance usually keeps track of how much medicine you should use in a month and won't let you refill your prescription more than a few days earlier than the date you'll be completely out. Getting a refill earlier than that usually requires special permission from your insurance in order for it to be covered on your plan, otherwise you'll pay a separate copayment or even full price.

To refill your medicine at a pharmacy you don't normally use, the pharmacist will need to contact your physician's office to generate a new prescription. If you are in a different time zone than your doctor, this can cause delays.

Traveling through different time zones affects more than just your meals and sleep. Some medicines need consistent levels in your body to function best. Heart medicine, blood thinners and insulin taken by diabetics can be particularly dangerous if their doses overlap or if you skip too many hours between doses.

Before you leave, it's a good idea to review your medicines with your pharmacist or doctor about what to do when crossing several time zones, not only on the way to your destination but also on the way back home.

PARTNERS IN YOUR HEALTH

Here are seven tips for traveling with medicines:

1. Figure out how much medicine you will need to have, plus a couple of days just in case your return plans go awry. After all, flights NEVER get delayed, right?

2. Call in your refills with enough lead time for mail order medicines to arrive at your door before you have to leave. This avoids having them sit for days on your porch or in your mailbox, exposed to the heat or the risk of being stolen.

3. Pack a current list of all the medicines that you take along with who prescribes them, in the event you need medical care or if your medicines are lost or stolen.

4. Consider getting a medication ID bracelet if you have a chronic or life-threatening condition.

5. Are you crossing time zones? If so, review the dosage schedules of your medicines with your pharmacist or physician to make sure you don't miss doses or accidentally overlap your medicines. When in doubt, it's usually better to skip or delay a medicine rather than double up.

6. Will you be relaxing on the beach or outside more than usual? Review your medicines with your pharmacist for the potential impact of being out in the sun, in case any of them could cause photosensitivity. If in doubt, always pack and apply sunscreen.

7. Keep your medicines easily accessible so you can remember to take them regularly. Avoid putting them in a suitcase that will be buried at the bottom of the camping gear or in a checked bag that could be delayed or lost by the airline.

Wherever your dreams lead you, don't let missed pills mess up your vacation. With a just little preparation, you and your medications can be ready for your next adventure.

Standing water in tarps, tires and buckets breeds mosquitoes! Drain them!

Marliese "Molly" Crean-Smithson

Marliese "Molly" Crean-Smithson, 88, passed away peacefully in her home on Friday, July 28, 2017, an angel among us that went up to heaven to join her "Snow Drop" (an affectionate name that she called the love of her life, Al Smithson, Jr.)

Molly was born on Dec. 7, 1928 in Tiefenlauter, Germany to Karl Fritz and Gertrude Scheler. She grew up in Coburg, Germany. In 1960, she married Sgt. Alban Crean in Frankfurt, Germany and then moved to the United States that same year. Alban preceded her in death on April 4, 1975. In 1977, she met Al Smithson, Jr. and spent the next 39 beautiful years together with him.

The Leavenworth area was a fitting place for her to settle, because it reminded her of her hometown in Germany. Molly was a fixture around town and active in the community, American Legion Women's Auxiliary, selling poppies to help raise money for the Peshastin American Legion, supporting the Fourth of July Lions Club pancake breakfast every year with family, and attending Applesox baseball games. Her biggest love was spending time with Al and family and taking care of the home that she loved, cooking, gardening, and bird-watching. She enjoyed camping, going on road trips, attending grandkids' school choir programs, ball games, and organizing the annual Smithson family reunion. She was most proud to be a part of the Blue Bird family, working at the Blue Bird Warehouse from April 1990-January 2012. She loved working there and socializing during the coffee breaks, making many friends along the way.

Molly is survived by a sister, Gerlinde Wolf of Lautertal, Germany; daughters: Patty Smith (Mark) of Edmonds; Kathy Smithson of Tonasket; daughter-in-law Amy Lindley of Tacoma; sons: Peter Crean (Jean) of Wade, North Carolina; Thomas Crean (Leslie) of Omaha, Nebraska; Tom Smithson (Kathy) of Monitor; Gary Smithson (Terry) of Peshastin, and Dick Smithson (Elaine) of Peshastin; 12 grandchildren and 21 great grandchildren.

She is preceded in death by Al Smithson, Jr., the love of her life; Gunter Scheler (brother); and William "Bill" E. Crean (son).

A Celebration of Life service at Light in the Valley Community Church, 8455 Main St. Peshastin, WA 98847 at 11 a.m. on Saturday, Aug. 12, 2017. Private family interment was held at the Peshastin Cemetery. There will be a potluck Celebration of Life at 12:00, Peshastin Memorial Hall (previously the Legion Hall), 10204 Main St, Peshastin, WA 98847.

Because Molly loved gardening, plant a rose bush in her honor. Memorial contributions may be made to the Cashmere American Legion, 401 Sunset Hwy, Cashmere, WA 98815 and support their local poppy seed program.

Arrangements are by Ward's Funeral Chapel, 303 Pine Street, Leavenworth, WA.

Mirrell H. Brewer

Mirrell H. Brewer, 79, a resident of Wenatchee, Washington, passed away peacefully on Thursday, Aug. 3, 2017, at Central Washington Hospital of Wenatchee after major health problems caused by a heart attack in January 2016. Prior to that, Mirrell lived in Leavenworth, Washington for 26 years. He was born in rural Indiana on June 20, 1938 to William Brewer and Florence Vogel Brewer. He was raised and educated in Seymour, Indiana. After graduation from Shields High School in Seymour, he joined the U.S. Navy. After spending some time in the Pacific Fleet, he was transferred to a new naval base at Pacific Beach, Washington. There he met and married the love of his life, Florence Petrie, on May 22, 1959, in Hoquiam, Washington.

After 20 years of honorable service in the U.S. Navy as a Senior Chief Radioman, Mirrell retired in March 1977. He later worked in finance for the city of Hoquiam and city of Okanogan and then, after nine years working for the city of Leavenworth as clerk/treasurer, he retired again in 1999. Mirrell was an active member of our Lady of the Snows Leavenworth and more recently St. Joseph's Catholic Church. Mirrell was a member of the Knights of Columbus of Leavenworth, American Legion Wenatchee, Fleet Reserve Association Tacoma, and Non-Com-Association (NCOA).

Mirrell is survived by his loving wife, Florence. Together they have five children: Tim and his wife, Carole, of Tumwater, Washington; Jim and his wife, Ann, and their children, Joshua, Jed and Ariel, of Olympia, Washington; Cyndi and her husband, Byron, and their sons, Nicolas (deceased) and Jordan, of Tumwater, Washington; Karen and her husband, Dave, and their sons, Nathan and Payton, of Wenatchee, Washington; and Steve of Pasco, Washington. He is also survived by his sister, Mary Evanoff, and brother, Steve Brewer, and many nieces and nephews.

A funeral mass will be celebrated on Thursday, Aug. 10 at 2 p.m. at St. Joseph's Catholic Church in Wenatchee, Washington, with a reception to follow. Interment will be Friday, Aug. 11 at 2 p.m. at Tahoma National Cemetery in Kent, Washington.

Please express your thoughts and memories on the online guestbook at jonesjonesbetts.com. Funeral arrangements are being made by Jones and Jones-Betts Funeral Home, Wenatchee, WA.

Matthew Lawrence Folden

Matthew Lawrence Folden was born in Pullman, Washington, on Nov. 27, 1985; after turning the hospital on its ear in the middle of a fierce snowstorm, the day before Thanksgiving. Matthew passed on to the great big punk rock show in the sky on July 27, 2017.

Matthew was a beloved and beautiful soul. He sought to find the art in every moment of life. From making music with friends to shredding the snow-covered mountains; to painting and tattooing his art on those he loved.

The light that Matthew brought to the world is inconceivably bright, his uncanny ability to make others smile was only one of the many great attributes that made his star shine so bright. His passion and enthusiasm for life, and his capacity for unconditional love, touched every life he met. His greatest desire was for everyone to be their truest self, to love each other, and be stoked on life. He will be missed by his grandmother, Carolyn Smith (Wenatchee, Washington); his grandfather, John R. Folden (Peshastin, Washington); his beloved dog, Jaxon (Leavenworth, Washington); and all of his extended Ohana, and treasured Tribes mates. Matthew was preceded in death by his grandfather, Dr. W.V. Smith, his grandmother, Esther Earlene Folden, and his aunt, Nancy Smith.

A memorial service, celebrating the life of Matthew "Crazy Legs" Folden, will be held on Sunday, Aug. 13, 2017, at the Feshalle in Leavenworth, Washington at 10:30 a.m. Attendees are encouraged to bring a favorite dish, so that all may join in a feast, as requested by Matthew's son, Travys Rion. A benevolent account has been opened at Banner Bank for the family to help offset expenses. The account is under Tori Handley FBO Matthew L. Folden.

Ward's Funeral Chapel, Leavenworth is in charge of the arrangements.

Ann G. Clark

Ann G. Clark passed away peacefully at her home in Wenatchee, Washington on Friday, July 28, 2017, surrounded by her family, after a long brave battle with cancer. Ann was born Sept. 28, 1946 in Stuttgart, Germany to Albert and Gertrude Pevarnek, two years before her family moved to the United States. She was raised with her five siblings in North Conway, New Hampshire before moving to the state of Washington in 1974 to raise a family of her own. Ann is fondly remembered for her friendly smile during her 13 years of work at the Leavenworth Safeway.

Ann was preceded in death by her parents, her brothers

Christopher Pevarnek, Eric Hutter, and sister Andrea Grey.

Ann is survived by her son Ralph Shaw and daughter-in-law Tolene Seitz, of Wenatchee, Washington; daughter Wende Clark of Wenatchee, Washington; daughter Alyse Clark, of Seattle, Washington, brothers Andrew Pevarnek of South Weymouth, Massachusetts; Albert Pevarnek of Scarborough, Massachusetts and two beloved grandchildren.

Her greatest passions were gardening, nature, and her family. True to her character, Ann lovingly tended to her garden every day up until the final days of her illness. A private service will be held and her ashes will be spread in her favorite lakes and mountain meadows. Arrangements are by Telford's Chapel of the Valley, East Wenatchee.
