Asgaard Pass claims another victim

Three died in last six years while 'glissading' in same spot

EDITOR

On June 3, a 19-year old Mercer Island man was presumed killed while glissading* at Asgaard Pass. By June 5, searchers had still been unable to locate the body of Benjamin Gore. Gore was glissading down Asgaard Pass when he fell through a hole in the snow into the creek below.

This same hole, which is created by the melting snow, has claimed three lives now. One year ago, almost to the day, a 24-year old Seattle man was lost glissading with coworkers. In 2011, a 21-year old Eatonville woman was killed there.

Jeff Paton of Cashmere was part of the Chelan County Mountain Rescue team that searched for Gore and the man last

"There's a stream that comes down Asgaard Pass which is covered by snow until it starts to melt out. It's exactly in the middle of the pass. The pass is 2,200 feet from the lake to the summit. About about halfway down is a small waterfall," Paton said. "That creates a hole underneath the snow. When it first starts to open, it is only a few inches wide, then it gets wider and wider."

Paton said Gore was glissading, which is a normal procedure, but you must pick and choose your conditions and your runout. You don't just glissade anything, he said, like on ice, or a place with an unsafe runout or rocks at the bottom.

In this particular case, Gore lost control.

"If you do get out of control, then you're going to take what you get. This particular spot, whether it didn't add it up or what, but it leads you to a little waterfall about 15 feet, which pitches underneath the snow," Paton said. "Right now, there is a three or four foot hole. He went right into that hole. The water goes over the rock underneath the snow, which is water polished and very smooth. You end up going down there quite a long ways.'

The only way to get the body out at this point is to wait for the snow to melt out more, he said. Paton said they do not want to put a guy down there in a dry suit, roped or not, and have the whole top collapse on him.

Paton is confident the body will end up in the same exact place as the man from last year. "There are a couple little shelves where the water goes through there, down to a small shelf not really big enough to hang up a body, then down further to a big pool. The odds are that he will be in exactly the same place as the Chinese (tourist from Seattle) man," Paton said.

Asgaard Pass is popular glissading spot. There is a giant avalanche chute. When the trail and cliffs melt out, there is still deep snow over this hillside. There is a relatively safe runout at the bottom where the slop angle lessens.

It's a quick way to get down if you go up to climb Dragontail or the Enchantments, he said.

"As long as the conditions are something you can control on, it's no different that skiing down a steep slope. Can I glissade this safely? Can I stay in control?," Paton said. "That's a function of the snow quality, hard or soft, how steep the hill is. What is the runout? Are there hazards in the way, like a rock or tree? It's all very subjective. Some guys are going to glissade things which are pretty hairy. Others might not glissade without a completely safe runout at the bottom."

At Asgaard, the killer stream is right in the middle of the pass.

"You are on such steep snow, unless you stop and think 'is there a stream under here,' you don't know there is. You can't see an indication of it. You can't hear it," Paton said. "I don't like to be too

near Chiwaukum Rock Quarry

By Ian Dunn EDITOR

Chelan County Coroner Wayne Harris has identified the two bodies found May 23 near the Chiwaukum Rock Quarry as husband and wife Sarah Ann Pischke, 24, and Roger Marburger, 34, of Humble, Texas, a Houston suburb.

They were found in a pickup truck, adjacent to a campsite near milepost 90 off U.S. High-

Someone called the Chelan County Sheriff's office to retruck in a heavily overgrown area near the Quarry. It was noted that someone apparently attempted to conceal the truck using a blanket, duct tape and natural vegetation.

A responding deputy found the two dead bodies in the front seats of the vehicle, but Harris said the initial autopsy did not reveal any trauma.

At this point, Harris said they are awaiting the results of the toxicology test to determine the manner and cause of death. Toxicology results should come back in six to eight weeks, Harris said.

Ian Dunn can be reached port seeing a full sized pickup at 548-5286 or editor@leavenworthecho.com.

Coroner identifies bodies found | Local group raising money for Icicle Road speed signs

By Ian Dunn

A group of Icicle Road residents have come together to try and do something about the speeding on their roadway. In particular, they are concerned about speeding on the bridge over the Wenatchee Icicle Road resident Mary Carol Nelson wanted to do something about it. She lives not far from the bridge and often walks or bikes across it.

"I talked to some neighbors who were also concerned. I started going door to door. Everyone I approached agreed it was a huge concern. In November, we met. It was a consensus the bridge over the Wenatchee River lacked safety features to make it safe for the walkers and bikers,' Nelson said.

Because there is so much more traffic on Icicle Road, Nelson said the problem is only getting worse and worse. At their meetings, they invited Chelan County officials. In attendance have been Josh Patrick from the county public works, along with Chelan County Sheriff Sergeants Bruce Long and Mike Harris.

At that first meeting, Nelson said they brainstormed on what might be done on the bridge to reduce the speed-

"For the bridge, wider aprons on all for approaches, railing needs to be higher, rumble strips, motions lights, a wider sidewalk on the south side, with a pedestrian crossing on either end," Nelson said. "All of these things turned out to be pie-in-the-sky, but electronic speed signs can be effective."

The county officials agreed that electronic speed signs would be good. They encouraged the group to find places to put the signs. Several people volunteered their driveways. In the following meetings, Nelson said they realized the best they could hope for is flashing speeds signs at either end of the bridge.

The type of speed signs being considered not only flash your current speed, but also "slow down" if you are going too fast and "thank you" if you are going the speed limit.

"The county agreed to maintain it if we raised the money for it. That is what we are doing. It's $2,500 per sign. We want two signs. We have to buy the posts. We need a separate post at each end. Those signs will say something about shared roadway," Nelson said.

The plan is to put the signs just before the beginning of the curves on either side of the bridge, so drivers slow down before the bridge not on it. Nelson said they would like to install the signs as soon as

"It really is something that needs to be done. Bruce Long and Mike Harris have been really encouraging. There is a terrible amount of speeding on Icicle Road. The people that live there, it's pretty incredible," Nelson said.

The group is still raising money for the signs. To help out, you can donate to Icicle Road Concerned Citizens at Cashmere Valley Bank. Ian Dunn can be reached critical, but these guys going up, could have looked down their descent line, and would have seen that waterfall. They might have said, whatever we do, we're not going to start glissading until we get below that. That's all about experience."

Glissading deaths: The stream hazard is easy to overlook

After the accident last year, Paton said Forest Service put up a notice at the trailhead warning people to avoid the stream hazard. For Paton, an experienced mountaineer, you can't mark every hazard. There are all types of hazards, cliffs, rocks, rockfall, avalanches, crevasses.

"This is a pretty unique spot. My own personal opinion is it would be good to have a sign at the end of the trail as you go around Colchuck Lake and are looking at your ascent route. Stay left at Asgaard Pass. Fatalities have occurred over the 12hazardous stream.

This is a photo of Asgaard Pass with illustrations to show the correct route to take down the pass. A creek, which runs down one side of the pass, has claimed three lives since 2011.

That might still happen," Paton said.

The key question is, how can future tragedies be prevented at Asgaard Pass? Paton said when people are going someplace new, they'll check out guidebooks or websites, like the Washington Trails Association

There's a lot of information out there, that sometimes, might mention this hazard.

"This hazard is a temporary one. That's why it happened almost a year ago to the day.

When it is completely covered with snow, it's not a hazard because it is so deep, you are safe. But as it starts to melt out, it gets thinner and thinner, so you could walk on it and fall through or you could be glissading and, if you did lose control, it could eat you," Paton said. "The mountains are extremely variable in terms of what is safe, when and where. It's get difficult to document those individual hazards.

"It's a very strange spot. It's not very visible from above. You're over it before you know what happened, if you haven't looked at your route down. Visibility is everything."

*Glissading is the act of descending a steep snow-covered slope via a controlled slide.

The 21st annual Speechfest showcases student speakers

SUBMITTED BY MARLENE FAR-

On June 9, a group of brave sixth graders, seven boys and two girls, sat on the stage at Icicle River Middle School, looking down upon their assembled peers. They were in a row in the order of the speeches they were just about to give.

The occasion? The 21st annual Speechfest, held in the Cascade School District.

There are two competitions, one for 6th graders and one for 5th graders, both with prize money at stake. The top three speakers would receive cash awards, thanks to a continuing grant from the Captain Bly Education Foundation founded by former teacher and City Council member, Larry Meyer.

After Ian Ross, one of three judges, explained the rules, Madi Gillespie, last year's Speechfest winner, took the microphone as MC.

"This is a chance to show what you're passionate about," Gillespie advised the finalists. "Take a deep breath and think about what you want to tell the audience."

Berg Zednick went first, tackling the complex issue of Leavenworth's shortage of affordable housing. He bookended his speech with a compelling story about Henry, a boy whose family could not yet afford to buy a home.

The topics ranged from personal, like how sports help your health and grades and why homework should be reduced or eliminated, to the global challenge of climate change.

ence about why there should be more bike trails in Leavenworth with three numbers, stating, "Sixty, 174, 36." Munly went on to explain they represented the number of miles of trails in Wenatchee, Seattle and Leavenworth, respectively, and shook his head at the "measly 36" of Leavenworth.

Miles Hunt won second place for his speech promoting more technology in schools. He argued technology helps keep students engaged and helps with assignment orga-

of why music is good for the brain and the body. "I read an article about how music is being used to treat patients. It fascinated me. Music is not just a distraction but can be a tool to help us."

Zehm cited evidence that music aids memory and the auditory part of the brain as well as helps burn calories through dancing to music. She stated her arguments clearly while walking around the stage.

Zehm was aware that the speech is not just about the content, but also about audience engagement. "During my speech I look at the audience and check—Is everyone engaged? Could I up my enthusiasm?"

The Osborn Speechfest was held the day before, on June 8. Isabella Menna won 1st for her speech in support of genetically modified foods. She explained how she decided on this topic. "My friend and I did the same topic and I chose for and she did against." In preparation for her speech, Menna went beyond articles to interview farmers to get their opinions.

At the Osborn competition, Coy Latimer won 2nd and Paige Nunnally won 3rd.

This year's winners, Menna and Zehm, both have advice for those who are nervous about public speaking. "Everyone gets before-stage jitters," Zehm said. "Everyone has a knot in their stomach. You just need to push it down and focus on your topic and key points."

"Get a good night's sleep. If you're rested, you feel confident," Menna said. "And, if you do mess up, just keep going. Look around, get eye contact, but not like a staring competition. Use some hand motions and engage the audience."

These two eloquent girls embody the spirit of Speechfest. As Larry Meyer explained the importance of Speechfest, "The ability to speak to a group raises the individual's self-esteem and confidence. The ability to speak to a group, and express your thoughts clearly and concisely, is a lifelong skill."

The 15th annual Wenatchee River Bluegrass Festival comes to town

SUBMITTED BY CINDY JACKSON

Kick start your bluegrass summer with the Fifteenth Annual Wenatchee River Bluegrass Festival (WRBF), June 16, 17 and 18, featuring superstar bluegrass bands that will put the kick in your bluegrass start. The 15th annual extraordinary line up goes like this....

Balsam Range is one of the genre's most award winning artists in recent years, garnering 10 International Bluegrass Music Association Awards with five critically acclaimed albums. Balsam Range has put on live performances across the nation, including multiple Grand Old Opry appearances that have left audiences spell-

Kenny and Amanda Smith Band, the sweethearts of bluegrass, are a multi-award winning duo, with gutsy, heartfelt vocals, brilliant instrumental talents and a powerful, contemporary sense of song choice and arrangement. They are one of the most compelling sounds in bluegrass today.

Cedar Hill delivers honest, emotive original songs, soulful, heartfelt vocals and great picking with drive is what Cedar Hill is known for. Settled into their own in the mainstream of the National bluegrass scene, they have been pleasing audiences everywhere with their original, exciting brand of traditional bluegrass.

Downtown Mountain Boys, are bluegrass veterans and recording artists of the PNW music scene and wizards when it comes to picking with real firepower. "Their repertoire spans the best loved standards to their own high powered originals", with their original material rooted deep in the traditions of the bluegrass genre.

North Country is one of Seattle's premier traditional bluegrass bands. In October of 2015, they were selected to showcase at the International Bluegrass Music Association in Raleigh, North Carolina. Their individual experience and musical accomplishments coalesce into one traditional, driving bluegrass sound.

Rusty Hinges Bluegrass grew out of the bluegrass jam circles at local festivals. Their music is a blend of traditional and contemporary bluegrass and Americana. Each member is a veteran of the Pacific Northwest bluegrass scene. Their collective experience results in a musical program that is polished and entertain-

Along with our fantastic stage shows the WRBF also includes a variety of events:

For those of you not quite ready for the high speed jam sessions, heard all over the grounds, our Slow Jam is the place to practice your chops and learn how to maneuver a jam session and maximize your enjoyment picking with other folks and meeting new bluegrass friends!

Step out and experience what it's like to perform in a band in our fun and relaxed Band Scramble.

To round out the festival experience, we have a team of young performers lead by Jake Monroe and Kaiti Dewhirst, signed on to instruct our youth instrument workshops, Taylor's Camp. Taylor's Camp is designed to perpetuate the tradition of passing our bluegrass heritage to the next generation. For our Adult Instrument Workshops, learn some new tricks and tips to amuse and amaze even you, from the top notch musicians of our headliner bands!

Wake up Sunday with the Sunday Morning Gospel Show featuring Rusty Hinges Bluegrass, North Country and Cedar Hill.

We will have food and merchandise vendors available, for when you need some nourishment to keep going or a souvenir to take home with you as a reminder of all the fun and enjoyment.

Camping opens Monday, June 12 and is the best in a bluegrass community experience. Prices can be found on the website, www.wenatcheeriverbluegrass.com. Thursday campers are invited to the Meet-and-Greet Luau. Just look for the Hawaiian camp!

So go ahead, kick start your June with bluegrass delivered direct to you from the Wenatchee River Bluegrass Festival! The Wenatchee River Bluegrass Festival (WRBF) located at the Chelan County Expo Center, 5700 Wescott Ave, Cashmere is put on by the good folks of the Cashmere Community Concerts. Each year, the WRBF brings new folks over the mountains to experience the beauty of our great region. A scenic drive through some of Washington's most breathtaking areas, it encompasses everything an outdoor enthusiast could want, hiking, mountain biking, bird watching, golf (several courses), fly fishing, mountain climbing and river rafting. For information on additional events and camping call 548-1230 or visit our website.
