Lower water levels expected on Columbia River

SUBMITTED BY RACHEL HANSEN, CHELAN COUNTY PUD

WENATCHEE - As summer winds down, Chelan PUD is expecting river flows to reduce into the fall. In addition to the normal seasonal changes in river flows, the Western U.S. is experiencing an extended heat wave and energy demand is up throughout the region.

"We may experience more fluctuations upstream of Rock Island and Rocky Reach dams over Labor Day and into next week," said Janet Jaspers, director of energy operations planning and trading. "We try to do whatever we can within our license requirements to support electric grid reliability

CHELAN - The Union Valley Fire was called into RiverCom on Tuesday, August 30 at 2:10 p.m. The third alarm fire was fought by Chelan County Fire Districts 4, 5, 7, 6, 8, Cashmere Fire, Douglas County Fire Districts 1, 2, and 4, U.S. Forest Service, DNR and BLM crews and air support, which included two planes and two helicopters. No homes were lost in the fire, but many residents in the area were put on Level 3 and 2 evacuations, which were lifted by later in the evening. All evacuation levels were lifted on Thursday, Sept. 1.

The fire, which started out as multiple fires, is under investigation and DNR Investigators would like to talk to the driver of a dark colored SUV that was traveling up Union Valley Road at approximately 2 p.m. on August 30. If you know who the driver is or you are the driver, please contact DNR Investigator Bruce Long at Bruce.Long@dnr.wa.gov.

Residents and businesses in the valley offered space for animals and residents for those who needed to evacuate their homes and property.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Community can't let city councilmembers do all the heavy lifting as developments race into the city

To the Editor,
I attended Chelan's City Council meeting Tuesday, Aug. 23. There were 18 attendees. This meeting was to adopt, modify or reject Hearing Examiner Andrew Kottkamp's recommendation of the Apple Blossom Center Planned Development District to allow multi-family zoning as a permitted use. They voted to "Adopt the findings, conclusions and recommendations of the hearing examiner as the decision of the Council." There were four possible recommendations.

Council members put a lot of thought into their decision. There was no public comment since that time has passed for now, although I understand this will be the first of many opportunities.

Several of their comments stayed with me after the meeting.

Councilmember Chris Baker said he was "taken aback by the lack of participation" from the people in Chelan about this development. By the way, Mayor Bob Goedde has been talking about this development for months on KOZI's Second Cup of Coffee morning show and to whoever will listen when he's at the post office or his "other office" at the Apple Cup Cafe.

Councilmember Shari Dietrich said she studied this issue thoroughly, visited the developer's other projects and thought about this situation constantly. She thanked city staff for spending hours answering her questions. She said she was not excited about the project initially, but everything appears to be in the code and the developer is asking for fewer units to build, 720 when 900 are allowed. However, "our hands are tied" by the code, she said.

Longtime Councilmember Erin McCardle, had clearly spent hours of research. She went into great detail about the zoning and Comprehensive Plan which was critical to her decision. "We are bound by the code," she noted.

Councilmember John Olson, who grew up in Chelan, left during his working years, and moved back after he retired, said "change is a constant." He views the community's reaction to change this way: We are all getting on a bus; we can let it go past us; we can get in front of it; or we can get onboard and help steer it. He asked the audience to participate in the process.

Councilmember Tim Hollingsworth said he hopes the development doesn't bring in "new" residents, but rather the ones who already work in the Valley and must commute from other towns.

Councilmember Peter Jamtgaard (via remotely) said we need to work with the developer and find common ground.

I admire Chelan's city council members who studied long and hard before they voted. However, we as a community can't let them do all the heavy lifting as developments race into the city. We need to give City Council members our voices regarding the way our community changes. Please help "steer the bus" through the numerous developments entering our valley.

Chelan City Council meetings are held the second and fourth Tuesdays, 6 p.m. of each month.

Lastly, thank you to Richard Uhlhorn of All Things Lake Chelan, Ken Johansson of KOZI radio and Ruth Keys of the Lake Chelan Mirror, for reporting on this meeting. We are fortunate to have so many news sources to be informed so we can express our thoughts.

Respectfully,
Gaylen Willett,
Chelan

Steps you can take to prepare for wildfire smoke

SUBMITTED BY WASHINGTON DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH

OLYMPIA – Washington state is in the midst of wildfire season and, although it's been a mild season to date, it is important to be prepared and ready to protect yourself and your family from wildfire smoke before the smoke hits.

When it does get smoky outside, the best way to protect everyone, including pets, is to stay inside and keep indoor air as clean as possible.

- Steps you can take now to be smoke ready:
- Check current and forecasted wildfire and smoke conditions on the Washington Smoke blog, which monitors air quality across the state.
 - Buy a HEPA portable air cleaner, which will filter out smoke and help create a cleaner air room you can spend time in when it's smoky outside. You can also make a DIY box fan filter as a lower cost option. It's key to plan ahead and buy supplies in advance because they often sell out quickly when it's smoky out.

- It can be difficult to stay cool inside when windows are closed. Be prepared by learning how to cool indoor spaces without air conditioning.

Exposure to smoke from fires can cause several health problems that range from minor to severe. The worst symptoms often occur in people with pre-existing health conditions, but smoke is unhealthy for everyone. Symptoms include burning eyes, coughing, throat and nose irritation, headaches, fatigue, wheezing and shortness of breath, irregular heartbeat, and chest pain.

Check for restrictions or warnings before lighting any outdoor fires. High temperatures and dry conditions increase wildfire risk.

Obituary & Memorial Policies

NCW Media, Inc.: Leavenworth Echo, Cashmere Valley Record, Lake Chelan Mirror, Quad City Herald

An Obituary is a way for family member(s) to commemorate a loved one's life and to notify the community of the passing of the loved one. Obituaries are also used for historical and ancestral data.

Memorials are another way to let the community know about the life and memories of the person who has passed. A Memorial is different from an Obituary. An Obituary is usually current, while a Memorial can be written later.

Obituaries and Memorials need to be typed and emailed as a Word Document. They can be placed in one or more papers - all publish weekly on Wednesday.

Obituaries are priced by the number of words and include one color photo and go online at no extra charge. Memorials are priced per column inch. Please call for cost. *Payment is due at the time of placement. *Exception: Chapels, funeral homes who have an account, can be billed. There is no charge for a Death Notice - information is limited.

Deadline is 4 p.m. on Friday - some exceptions may apply.

Please call 509-682-2213 for more information

Anglers: Keep a safe distance from dams

SUBMITTED BY RACHEL HANSEN, CHELAN COUNTY PUD

WENATCHEE - The area below Rocky Reach Dam is a favorite among anglers this time of year, but please keep a safe distance away from the dam and the fish bypass outfall pipe.

By state law, boats and anglers fishing from the riverbank are not allowed within 400 feet downstream of man-made dams and structures used for fish passage - including Rocky Reach. The off-limits area is marked by no-trespassing signs and buoys. For safety reasons, all water recreation is prohibited in the off-limits area.

Information about river flows, elevation and boat launch status are available through Chelan PUD's free Current app, available at chelanpud.org/app.

THE WASHINGTON OUTDOORS REPORT

A crown jewel - Cape Disappointment State Park

By JOHN KRUSE, THE WASHINGTON OUTDOOR REPORT

One of the best parks in Washington, a crown jewel amongst the parks found in this state, is Cape Disappointment State Park. Located where the Columbia River meets the Pacific Ocean near Ilwaco, this expansive 1,882-acre park offers a healthy dose of history, a nautical setting and abundant opportunities for outdoor recreation.

My wife and daughter and I reserved a small cabin in the park months ago that sits right next to a small, lily pad lined body of water called O'Neill Lake. In addition to three cabins, several yurts and even lighthouse keeper's quarters are available for rent, there are also 220 campsites, about a third of them with full or partial hookups for RVs.

There is a lot to see and do here. If you enjoy time at the beach you can stroll to Waikiki Beach near the park entrance or walk two-mile-long Benson Beach between the North Jetty and North Head where a red and white lighthouse stands watch. Another option is to drive on the beach from Seaview north of the park south to Beard's Hollow, which offers the chance to explore rocky tidepools full of sea anemones at low tide.

At the beach you'll see people flying kites, casting for surf perch, beachcombing and just enjoying the chance to dip their toes into the surf of the Pacific Ocean. Speaking of fishing, early to mid-September offers a very good chance to chance to catch coho salmon in Baker Bay near Ilwaco, around Buoy 10 at the mouth of the Columbia, and even off the North Jetty where surefooted anglers cast big spinners or drift plug cut herring or anchovies under a slip bobber. Unfortunately, fisheries managers closed all salmon fishing on the Columbia River on September 2 due to higher-than-expected catch rates for Chinook salmon in August. This leaves jetty anglers contenting themselves jigging for rockfish and lingcod as summer transitions into fall though it is possible fishing for coho could reopen this month. Coho salmon fishing is scheduled to remain open in the ocean thru September but check the emergency regulations before going.

Something else to do? That would be crabbing. The best crabbing for keeper size Dungeness crab is from a boat in the Pacific near the mouth of the river. Land based crabbers or kayakers catch crab close to the North Jetty in the park. We tossed a crab ring and snares off the boat launch dock at the park and over the course of three afternoons literally pulled up close to 500 Dungeness crab. Unfortunately, not one of them was keeper sized. The bio mass of crab was amazing but they were all small. Hopefully by next year a lot of these crab in this area will be big enough to keep. If you like to hike, you'll be able to enjoy a trail system covering eight miles that will take you to Cape Disappointment, the North Head Lighthouse, and through forests to wetlands and to the beach. Wildlife watchers will be rewarded with the sight of black-tailed deer and raccoons in the park along with birds like kingfishers and osprey around the freshwater lakes as well. Meanwhile, there are bald eagles, cormorants, pelicans and a wide variety of shore birds on the coast off the rocky points and the beach along with the chance to see seals and the occasional whale. There is also much to see and learn here from a historical point of view. The Lewis and Clark Expedition reached Cape Disappointment as they completed their initial mission of reaching the Pacific Ocean in November of 1805. Today, a world-class interpretive center with over 200 exhibits and artifacts can be seen here. The Center is open seven days a week in the summer and has reduced hours the rest of the year.

The mouth of the Columbia is difficult to navigate, and the waters around it became known as the Graveyard of the Pacific. To help ships safely enter the river, Cape Disappointment Lighthouse was built and became active in 1856. Aaron Webster, the head Interpretive Ranger at the State Park, was asked why a second lighthouse was built just two miles north. Webster explained that initially, most shipping came from the south and San Francisco, and the light at Cape Disappointment worked fine. When rail lines reached Tacoma to the north, shipping began to come to the mouth of the Columbia that way and they could not see the light of Cape Disappointment. That's why the North Head Lighthouse was built which became operational in 1898. Today, tours are available at the North Head Lighthouse during the summer months.

This was also a military installation. Aaron Webster explained this fort along with Fort Stevens on the south side of the Columbia River mouth were built during the Civil War because of a Confederate shipping presence in the Pacific Ocean. The forts received state of the art coastal artillery pieces towards the end of the 19th Century and received more troops and artillery, along with radar stations, search lights and mines, in World War II. That's when the threat was the Imperial Japanese Navy, which did have a submarine shell nearby Fort Stevens in 1942.

After the War the fort was deactivated and Fort Canby was turned over to the Washington State Parks Commission. Today, you can walk among some of the WW II era fortifications which are located next to the Lewis & Clark Interpretive Center. You can find out more about this amazing destination and the North Head Lighthouse at <https://parks.wa.gov/486/Cape-Disappointment> and <http://northheadlighthouse.com>.

CHELAN HIGH SCHOOL FOOTBALL

BREWSTER - The Chelan High School Football team traveled to Brewster on Friday evening, Sept. 2, for the first annual Cherry Bowl. The Brewster Bears came out on top 36-34.

"Lost 36-34 in a great back and forth game. We had about a nine minute let down that really hurt us. Brewster did a great job climbing back after being down. They made one more big play then us, and one less mistake. I like the way we battled in the second half. Ryan Allen and Lance Gogal ran the ball very well tonight. Isaac Wilson threw multiple TD passes to Austin McCardle, Lance Gogal, and Grant Gogal. Our defense created 3 turnovers. 2 from Ryan Allen, one from his sophomore brother Jacob Allen. We all had our heads up leaving the locker room," said Coach Domser

Red Cross issues steps to keep students safe as they head back to school

SUBMITTED BY AMERICAN RED CROSS

NCW - School bells are calling students back to the classroom and the American Red Cross, Northwest Region, has steps everyone can take to help kids remain safe as they head back to school. As parents get ready for the start of a new school year, it's a good time to think about emergencies, such as weather-related disasters, and draw up an emergency plan for their household. Know what the emergency plan is at your child's school and develop a family emergency plan so everyone will know who to contact and where to go if something happens during the school day. Details are available at redcross.org/prepare. "There are a lot of things to think about for the start of a busy new school year, but don't forget to include safety," said Alex Dieffenbach, Northwest Region CEO. "We ask parents and guardians to consider familiarizing their children with these measures to help keep them safe as they head back to school."

CELL PHONES A DISTRACTION The National Safety Council (NSC) reports distracted walking can be dangerous, even deadly. Teach your students the following:

Don't text or talk on your phone while walking. If you must text, move out of the way of others and stop on the sidewalk.

Never cross the street while using an electronic device. Do not walk with headphones in your ears.

Drivers can be distracted too. Never use a phone while driving. Help keep children safe by eliminating all distractions.

TAKING THE BUS Students should get to their bus stop early and stand away from the curb while waiting for the bus to arrive. Young children should be supervised. Board the bus only after it has come to a complete stop and the driver or attendant instructs them to get on. They should only board their bus, never an alternate one.

All students should stay in clear view of the bus driver and never walk behind the bus.

WALKING TO SCHOOL Cross the street at the corner, obeying traffic signals and staying in the crosswalk.

Never run out into the street or cross between parked cars.

Use a route along which the school has placed crossing guards. Parents, walk with young children and those taking new routes or attending new schools, for the first week to ensure they know how to get there safely. Arrange for the kids to walk to school with a friend or classmate.

GOING BY CAR Everyone should always wear a seat belt.

Younger children should use car seats or booster seats until the lap-shoulder belt fits properly (typically for children ages 8-12 and over 4'9"), and ride in the back seat until they are at least 13 years old.

If a teenager is going to drive to school, parents should mandate that they use seat belts.

RIDING A BIKE There may be more young people on bikes as the school bells ring. They should:

Wear a properly fitted helmet and bright clothing.

Ride on the right side of the road, with traffic, in a single file.

Come to a complete stop before crossing the street; walk bikes across the street.

Stay alert and avoid distracted riding.

SLOW DOWN Drivers should slow down, especially in residential areas and school zones, and know what the yellow and red bus signals mean. Yellow flashing lights indicate the bus is getting ready to stop, that motorists should slow down and be prepared to stop. Red flashing lights and an extended stop sign indicate the bus is stopped and children are getting on or off.

Motorists must stop when they are behind a bus, meeting the bus or approaching an intersection where a bus is stopped. Motorists following or traveling alongside a school bus must also stop until the red lights have stopped flashing, the stop arm is withdrawn, and all children have reached safety. This includes two and four-lane highways. If physical barriers such as grassy medians, guide rails or concrete median barriers separate oncoming traffic from the bus, motorists in the opposing lanes may proceed without stopping.

KEEP LITTLE ONES SAFE Keeping all students safe is the primary concern for everyone, but there are special steps for parents of younger kids and those going to school for the first time:

Make sure the child knows their phone number, address, how to get in touch with their parents at work, how to get in touch with another trusted adult and how to call 911.

Teach children not to talk to strangers or accept rides from someone they don't know.

Finally, download the free Red Cross First Aid app for instant access to information on handling the most common first aid emergencies. You can find it by searching for 'American Red Cross' in your app store or at redcross.org/apps. Learn and practice First Aid and CPR/AED skills by taking a course (redcross.org/takeaclass) so you can help save a life.

About the American Red Cross: The American Red Cross shelters, feeds and provides comfort to victims of disasters; supplies about 40% of the nation's blood; teaches skills that save lives; distributes international humanitarian aid; and supports veterans, military members, and their families. The Red Cross is a nonprofit organization that depends on volunteers and the generosity of the American public to deliver its mission. 5 tips to help avoid stomach upset when taking medicine

Q: I'm taking a medicine that really upsets my stomach. Is there any way to keep it from doing that?

You are not alone if you suspect your medicine is upsetting your stomach. As a pharmacist, I hear this complaint the most: "These pills are making me sick!" In fact, the most common side effect of ANY medication is stomach upset, also called "gastrointestinal distress" or "GI distress." Symptoms of GI distress have been reported with every single prescription medication. No exceptions.

and still vomit within the first 30 minutes. When you can't keep your antibiotic or your pain medicine down, it won't be able to help you. Delaying treatment with an antibiotic can lead to severe consequences.

Do you experience nausea, vomiting, stomach cramps, burning, or intestinal cramping after taking your medicine? If you suspect one of your medicines could be making you feel sick, you are probably right.

If the medicine is for your heart, blood pressure, or anxiety, contact your doctor or pharmacist before repeating the dose. Has it been more than 30 minutes after taking your medication before you vomited? If so, you may have absorbed enough medicine to cause an overdose if you take another dose right away.

If there were a Hall of Fame of drugs that cause significant nausea and vomiting, the top three categories would be antibiotics, pain medicines, and cancer chemotherapy drugs.

Here Are 5 Tips to Help Avoid Stomach Upset When Taking Medicine:
1. Take medicines immediately after eating.

Chemotherapy drugs top the list of drugs that can cause severe nausea and vomiting. You're more likely to have stomach upset when taking a chemotherapy agent if you are younger than 50, female, prone to motion sickness, have had "morning sickness" during pregnancy, or suffered from nausea while taking other chemotherapy drugs.

If your medicine can be taken with food, take it just after finishing a meal, instead of before you eat. This way, there's more food in your stomach, helping to dilute any irritating effects on your innards. If it's time to take your medicine, but you're not ready to eat, try taking your pills with a full glass of water or juice.

Depending on the particular treatment regimen, multiple anti-nausea medicines are often used to combat the side effects of chemotherapy. They include tablets or capsules, melt-in-your-mouth tablets, skin patches, rectal suppositories, and injections.

2. Take your medicine at night.
Taking your medication at bedtime allows you to sleep through the queasiness they can cause. This is particularly helpful with oral contraceptives, pain medicines, and prenatal vitamins.

Although most medications can be taken with or without food in your stomach, there are some exceptions.

3. Split up the dose.
Ask your pharmacist if you can safely split your medicine into more than one dose and then take them several hours apart, with breakfast and dinner. Some pills can be split safely, while others need to be changed to a lower strength to be given as separate doses.

Some drugs must be taken on an empty stomach to ensure your body absorbs the entire dose. These include the thyroid supplement levothyroxine and the bone-building medicines alendronate (Fosamax®), risedronate (Actonel®), and ibandronate (Boniva®).

4. Request a long-acting or coated drug formulation.
Some antibiotics should not come in contact with certain minerals like calcium, magnesium, or iron. Common antibiotics like doxycycline, ciprofloxacin, and levofloxacin should not be taken with multivitamins with minerals. It's OK to take these antibiotics with a meal. However, because of the concentrated calcium, you should avoid drinking a full glass of milk with them. Not sure if this is an issue? Look at the label on the side of your medicine bottle or ask your pharmacist.

5. Take anti-nausea medicine ahead of time.
Don't wait until you are already queasy before taking pills for nausea. You should take motion sickness and other anti-nausea medicine at least 30 minutes before you need it, not when you're already miserable and about to hurl.

If you vomit after taking your medicine, what should you do? If it's an antibiotic or pain medicine, try it again, but make sure you take it with food, a full glass of milk, water, juice, or both.

Contact your doctor if you take the drug a second time

Americans Say Small Businesses, Middle Class Will Face More IRS Audits: Poll

ANDREW MORAN

More Americans expect the IRS to put a greater focus on low- and middle-income households and small businesses than on the wealthiest Americans and large corporations, according to a new survey.

About 36 percent of respondents think the tax collecting agency will use its 87,000 new agents to audit low-income earners, middle-class Americans, and small businesses, a recent Convention of States Action/Trafalgar Group poll reveals.

Fewer than one-third (32 percent) say the federal government will audit wealthy Americans and large corporations, while nearly 16 percent believe the agency will employ its thousands of new employees “to target the political opponents of those in power.”

A recent Morning Consult-Politico survey found that 45 percent of respondents are concerned about the IRS boosting its number of audits. Twenty-four percent reported worrying about being personally audited by the IRS, while 22 percent think middle-income earners will be heavily targeted by the tax agency.

Since the Inflation Reduction Act of 2022 was enacted, President Joe Biden and his administration have repeatedly promised that households making less than $400,000 won't face higher taxes or audit rates. Democrats also have claimed that the $80 billion in additional IRS funding will be used to improve taxpayer services.

So, are these concerns justified? The numbers within the legislation—and historical data—might support many Americans' fears.

Will IRS Audit More Middle-Class Americans?

According to the Inflation Reduction Act, $46 billion, or 58 percent of the new money, will be utilized to bolster “monitoring and compliance.” Just 4 percent, or $3.2 billion, will be spent on improving taxpayer services.

A recent analysis by House Republicans estimates that individuals earning an annual income of $75,000 or less would face close to 711,000 additional IRS audits. In addition, Americans earning more than $1 million would receive more than 52,000 audits.

“Value shoppers at Walmart and other retailers, already struggling with higher prices and more expensive fuel to drive to the store, will get hit with 710,000 additional audits thanks to the Manchin-Biden Democrat bill,” said Rep. Kevin Brady (R-Calif.), the ranking Republican on the House Ways and Means Committee, in a statement. “Every retailer in the United States who cares about their hard-hit customers should be fighting to block this unnecessary harassment of hard-working Americans.”

Last year, when the White House proposed to increase funding for the IRS by $80 billion over 10 years, the Congressional Budget Office (CBO) warned that audit rates “would rise for all taxpayers.”

The nonpartisan Joint Committee on Taxation (JCT) estimates that up to 90 percent of the revenue generated from new audits will come from taxpayers reporting less than $200,000 a year in income.

A March 2022 study by the Transactional Records Access Clearinghouse (TRAC) at Syracuse University discovered that low-income households making less than $25,000 are five times as likely to be audited by the IRS as everyone else.

“With this added force, I imagine it will be like the Wild Wild West. Taxpayers and small businesses should expect the IRS to be much more aggressive, by way of audits and other methods, in collecting tax money owed in the coming weeks, months, years,” Scott Curley, the CEO and co-founder of FinishLine Tax Solutions, told The Epoch Times.

Moving the Goal Posts?

Critics also assert that the administration is shifting the goalposts by claiming that the share of audits won't change for low- and middle-income households and small businesses.

White House press secretary Karine Jean-Pierre told reporters that there would be no new audits on anybody making under $400,000 a year. However, in an Aug. 10 letter to IRS Commissioner Charles P. Rettig, Treasury Secretary Janet Yellen referenced the share of audits compared to recorded levels.

“Specifically, I direct that any additional resources—including any new personnel or auditors that are hired—shall not be used to increase the share of small business or households below the $400,000 threshold that are audited relative to historical levels,” Yellen stated.

Rettig also reaffirmed that “audit rates” wouldn't rise relative to recent years.

“The bottom line is this: These resources are absolutely not about increasing audit scrutiny on small business or middle-income Americans,” Rettig said in an op-ed on Aug. 25. “The investment of these important resources is designed to support honest, compliant taxpayers. Our investment is designed around a Treasury directive that audit rates do not rise relative to recent years for households making under $400,000.”

But not all industry professionals believe these pledges.

“I am not suggesting that increasing the audit rates is a bad thing to do, after all, as an enrolled agent, we do make a living from representing clients before the IRS, but at least be honest about it,” Morris Armstrong, an enrolled agent and founder and owner of Morris Armstrong EA LLC, told The Epoch Times.

“It is just not those making more than $400,000 who will be impacted,” he added. “You can take that to the bank.”

Better IRS Solutions?

Are there other solutions the federal government could employ that does not involve concentrating audit efforts on middle-class Americans and small-business owners?

“Regardless of the situation, there is always a solution for taxpayers and small businesses that owe a great deal. It just comes down to understanding their options, not panicking, and figuring out what works best in their current situation,” Curley said.

“Now, with the added investment in the IRS, there isn't time to procrastinate,” he added. “It will only be a matter of time before the government takes a closer look at their taxes. It isn't a crime to owe taxes, but it is a crime not to file.”

The National Federation of Independent Business (NFIB) sent a letter to the House and Senate, outlining various concerns over components of the bill that would impact small businesses.

“This legislation's heavy focus on enforcement rather than resolving the tremendous paperwork backlog is a disservice to small businesses and taxpayers,” NFIB Vice President of Federal Government Relations Kevin Kuhlman wrote in the Key Vote letter. “The IRS is grappling with over 21 million unprocessed paper returns, an issue that is consistently reported to NFIB as a major issue for many small business owners.”

The NFIB recommended better legislative and regulatory certainty and “relief from regulations and mandates” that add to operating costs.

Sen. Mike Crapo (R-Ida.) offered an amendment to the Inflation Reduction Act that would ensure small businesses earning less than $400,000 would be protected from expensive and time-consuming audits. The proposed amendment was rejected with a 50-50 vote.

Armstrong suggested that it would be better for taxpayers if the legislation enacted “was easier to understand and that was more easily executed.”

Armstrong says customer service has also been a horrendous issue for the IRS over the last couple of years. As a result, the funding could be utilized to install “better lines of communications with not only the public but also with the professional community.”

“COVID-19 was a tipping point for the horrendous service by the IRS, but the decline was already in progress,” he said. “I hope that the additional funding will be used wisely and not just for a political agenda.”

Documents in Trump's possession already declassified by former president

EVA FU & JAN JEKIELEK

Federal authorities staged a “photo op” with the newly disclosed photograph showing documents with classified markings at former President Donald Trump's Florida resort, former White House aide Kash Patel has asserted.

The image, captured on Aug. 8 during the FBI's raid of Mar-a-Lago, shows six documents labeled as “top secret” and several marked as “secret” spread across the carpet in Trump's home.

“Certain of the documents had colored cover sheets indicating their classification status,” lawyers for the Justice Department (DOJ) said in a brief filed on Aug. 30 in which they urged against granting Trump's motion for a special master—a neutral outsider who would review the seized Mar-a-Lago materials and sift out potentially privileged documents.

The lawyers said even the FBI counterintelligence personnel and DOJ attorneys reviewing the documents had to request additional clearances to review some of the documents.

But Patel, former chief of staff for the Department of Defense during the Trump administration who has worked at the National Security Council, said merely seeing the cover sheets amounts to little significance.

“The FBI and DOJ staged a photo op with cover sheets that say material is classified or not. And the cover sheet—just so we're clear—government agencies use those all the time,” he said during a weekly appearance on EpochTV program “Kash's Corner” on Aug. 31.

“The cover sheets themselves are not classified, even when the cover sheet says top secret. It's a cover sheet. It's supposed to be on top of documents that are classified, and what the President has publicly contended is that those documents at Mar-a-Lago were already declassified by him as the president.”

Trump has repeatedly said he declassified the materials he kept, which federal authorities are disputing.

Patel also suggested that the agents “violated the basic rules of executing a search warrant.” In his days as a federal prosecutor on national security cases, they handled the documents differently when searching a venue, he said.

“We took photographs of things as they were found,” he said. “Because once you move them, you interfere with the chain of custody, and you interfere with the efficacy of their evidentiary value.”

Patel said it's similar to walking into a murder scene, and “finding the gun in the garbage can and one of the murder suspects on the ground,” then putting the gun in the man's hand and “taking a photo with him pointing it at the person that's dead.”

“You're not supposed to do that. It's literally investigatory 101,” he said.

In the same court filing, the DOJ argued that Trump lacked the legal standing to ask for a special master because the records belong not to him but to the United States under the Presidential Records Act.

The filing also states that the court lacked jurisdiction to entertain Trump's claims; and even if it did, appointing a special master was unnecessary, in part, because the government's filter team has reviewed all the materials and separated anything potentially subject to attorney-client privilege.

“They're basically telling the judge, we did the work already,” Patel said, noting that the government's opposition to appointing a special master gives him pause. “What is the DOJ's problem and the FBI's problem with having a special master look at it? What do they have to lose? They're worried about the special master coming in and saying: ‘You guys got it wrong.’”

A court hearing for Trump's special master request took place on Sept. 1 in West Palm Beach, Florida. U.S. District Judge Aileen Cannon delayed her ruling on the matter.

The FBI referred inquiries by The Epoch Times to the DOJ, which didn't respond to requests for comment by press time.
