Lake Chelan Food Bank celebrating 40 years of service

By MATTHEW OCKINGA CORRESPONDENT

CHELAN - In the beginning, there stood a bookcase. Set inside the door of St. Andrew's Episcopal Church parish hall in Chelan in 1982, the small set of shelves housed rice, beans and canned goods. The brainchild of Reverend Gary Jones, this humble bookcase supported the food bank that helped feed almost 1,000 local families within two years. Just five years later, Jones' efforts outgrew the bookshelf and his church bought a small building that became the Lake Chelan Food Bank.

Now, 40 years later, volunteers have invested time, food and love into the bank so that those in need can reap the generosity of others interest free. This year, the bank celebrates four decades of helping the small community nestled along Washington's biggest lake.

"We're helping the needy and serving the community and that's all about what we do," said Richard Springer, director of the LCFB.

The food bank's current "bookcase" is located on 417 South Bradley Street in Chelan and distributes food every Tuesday and Saturday morning. The ministry has been thriving. Last year, LCFB served 6,173 families and 21,175 individuals. Of those families, 372 were new clients. Over 282 tons, 566,990 pounds, were given out in a total of 8,176 boxes. The food bank serves an average of 60 families on Tuesdays and 100 families on Saturdays.

"The food prices are what's driving the people in. I get reports from all across the United States," Springer said, referencing data from sources including Food Lifeline, the Washington State Department of Agriculture and the United States Department of Agriculture. "With food prices being up and gas prices, you can afford one or the other."

Firey helicopter crash injuries two men

By MATTHEW OCKINGA CORRESPONDENT

ORONDO - A helicopter crashed in a cherry orchard on Wednesday, July 6 five miles south of Orondo injured two men and igniting a small fire around 9:20 a.m. On its descent, the aircraft struck a high voltage powerline before landing on an orchard sprayer being driven by an 18-year-old orchard worker. Both men were transported by ambulance to Central Washington Hospital shortly after the incident. According to Kay McKellar, Douglas County Fire District 4 public information officer, the pilot, a 39-year-old man from Kuna, Idaho, broke his arm while the orchardist suffered non-life threatening injuries.

The accident occurred close to the intersection of Longview Road and Weaver Road, about 12 miles north of East Wenatchee. Douglas County PUD officials said the chopper's collision with the powerlines caused a brief power outage resulting in over 1400 residents between north of Orondo to the Waterville Plateau losing power.

The small blaze caused a tower of black smoke to rise from the orchard. Upon arrival, District 4 firefighters needed to wait for the powerlines to be disconnected before tackling the flames. The crew extinguished the fire around 10:09 a.m. Power was restored roughly 30 minutes later. The crash and ensuing fire destroyed the helicopter.

As of Friday, McKellar said there were not updates to the incident.

Firefighters initial efforts were hindered by difficult access and high voltage power lines. Once the power lines were de-energized firefighters extinguished the fire on both the tractor and helicopter. The initial investigation showed the helicopter struck high voltage power lines careening into a cherry orchard where it struck a tractor and sprayer upon impact that were operating in the orchard. Emergency responders where on scene from Orondo Fire Department, Ballard Ambulance and the Douglas County Sheriff department. Additional photo at lakechelanmirror.com the food to Wenatchee and from there it is distributed to 22 food banks between Chelan and Douglas counties.

Karen Jeffries, Tracy Shaw, Adrienne Carpenter,

Many other different sources supplement the food bank's coffers to keep them full. People make cash donations so Springer can buy any needed items. Large grocery stores such as Safeway and Walmart donate excess food to the effort including chicken, salads, breads, meats and frozen goods. Occasionally, Springer even receives some surprises.

"One time after one of the holidays (Safeway) sent us all these pots and Easter decorations. We had bunnies and all kinds of stuff. It's just amazing what we get from them," Springer said. "It's a very symbiotic relationship."

The food distribution has changed over recent years. Prior to the COVID-19 pandemic, clients were able to enter the building and mingle with volunteers. Now, the bank has switched to a drive-thru system with cars lining up behind the building. Food distribution starts at 9 a.m., so volunteers begin filling the cardboard boxes around 8:30 a.m. Each family or individual receives one box which holds 40-50 pounds of food. On average, each box contains one can of vegetables, a can of fruit, pasta, flour, dried beans or rice, dairy, meat and other food items depending on availability.

Carriers then load the boxes on pallets to distribute to the cars. Volunteers deliver some food to nursing homes as well.

Springer ran a grocery store meat department with 27 employees in Lynwood, so managing cheerful food bank volunteers is second nature.

"This is just a small grocery store to me. I'm in my element," he said. This is easy for me. It's just directing people. A lot of these guys and gals, they're really committed to it, God bless them, and it is something they can contribute to the community."

While food is essential, the true lifeblood of the bank is those volunteers of which Nonperishable food items and monetary donations can be left at the Lake Chelan Mirror office, 9 a.m.-5 p.m., Monday-Friday. For larger quantities food donations contact the food bank at 509-368-4151.

Springer has 85 on his list. One volunteer is Ken Gross, who has spent many years helping with a food bank in Everett before moving to Manson earlier this year. As he relocated east of the Cascade Mountains, he half-expected a west side prejudice.

"You know, you say 425 on your phone number and people go 'Oh.' I've had nothing but politeness and appreciative people and plus they like seeing a couple of younger guys," he said. "I'm 62 and I'm like the babe around here, but I can yard stuff up to the top shelf."

A social creature, Gross has fit right in with the volunteers. He views the bank not only as a way to help, but also meet new people, whether they be volunteers or folks picking up food.

"My mom just was always into community service, blood bank and all that stuff," Gross said. "I just followed in her footsteps."

Community implies a reliance on one another, and Springer sees the LCFB as a key source of that support. He referenced a large banner hanging outside the bank which reads, "Helping Those in Need." The food bank can't do everything, Springer said, but it can do something.

"We are here to supplement their food budget. We are not their primary source," he said. "Everybody says, 'Thank you.'

It does warm the heart. We've actually acquired volunteers from our guests. We've had people come through and they go, 'Do you need help?'"

The answer to that question is a resounding 'yes.' Sue DeLong of Chelan Falls has volunteered with the food bank for 17 years. She sees the ministry, like that small bookshelf in Chelan from 40 years ago, as an important conduit to support others.

"You should give of your time, really. I just feel you do those kinds of things," she said. "You're helping people who need it. I mean, what more could you ask?"

If you are interested in volunteering with the Lake Chelan Food Bank, contact Richard Springer at 509-368-4151 or info@lakechelanfoodbank.org.

The spirit of rodeo comes alive in Chelan July 15-16

Rodeo parade
Thurs., July 14, 7 p.m.

SUBMITTED BY CINDY WALL,
CHELAN RUSTLERS SADDLE CLUB

CHELAN – Rodeo fans, the wait is nearly over. Chelan Rustlers Saddle Club and Aces Wild Pro Rodeo partner once again to bring another year of rodeo excitement to the Chelan Valley on July 15 and 16, 7:30 p.m., at the club grounds located at 1099 North Bradley Street in Union Valley.

This year's event will feature the Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association (PRCA) card holders, an elite group of competitors who've earned enough winnings to become a bona fide member of the PRCA.

So what can rodeo fans expect?

A bigger and better rodeo with more than 100 contestants competing in nine different events for thousands of dollars in prize money. It also means rodeo fans will see the most exciting, foot stomping, heart-pounding, rock-n-rollin' rodeo to hit the Chelan Valley in several years.

"We decided to create an all-around rodeo experience for our community and visitors by bringing the PRCA Rodeo to Chelan then follow it up with an all time family favorite, the Chelan Jr. Rodeo on July 30 and 31," said Cheyenne Stocker, Chelan Rustlers Rodeo chairwoman. "Last year was the first time in more than 10-years that we've hosted a pro rodeo here in Chelan and it was a real crowd pleaser. This year we're expecting an even bigger turnout and a lot more rodeo excitement."

These professional rodeo competitors come in from around the U.S. and Canada to showcase their gutsy style of bareback riding, steer wrestling, team roping, bull and saddle-bronc riding plus much more. Some of the champions competing in this year's rodeo may qualify for the December 2022 Wrangler National Finals Rodeo in Las Vegas, the world's premier rodeo held by the PRCA where top rodeo contestants in each category compete for the world title and their share of a multi-million dollar purse.

"Competing at this level doesn't come easy," said Lynette McMillan, co-owner of Aces Wild Pro Rodeo. "It takes guts, dedication and a passion for this time honored tradition to make it this far. It's hard work, but they don't mind because they're doing what they do best - Rodeo. And the fans love it."

Adding to this year's entertainment will be the World Famous Chicken Chase where children from toddler age to 10 years old compete for prizes by capturing one of several chickens running loose in the arena. There also will be a "Wine Relay" event sponsored by two local wineries where contestants navigate a relay obstacle course and compete for first, second or third place.

Additionally, there will be food vendors, gift tents and a beer garden.

"We're real excited for this year's rodeo season," said

Stocker. "There's a lot of fun things happening around town leading up to the pro rodeo. We've invited local businesses to help generate a little rodeo spirit by adding in some western style Americana décor in their store front. We'll be awarding free rodeo tickets to the business with the best dressed window. Plus, the Lake Chelan Rodeo Parade will be riding through town on Thursday, July 14 at 7 p.m."

At the end of Friday's performance, the PRCA will host its SLACK Barrel Racers and Ropers event where fans can watch more rodeo champions compete for buckles, titles and prize money.

"There is something for everyone this year. So bring the family. Bring the neighbors. It's rodeoing at full-throttle. And it doesn't get more exciting than that."

Chelan Jr. Rodeo to be held July 30-31

SUBMITTED BY CINDY WALL,
CHELAN RUSTLERS SADDLE CLUB

CHELAN - Each year, young rodeo hopefuls and their families come from all over Washington State and beyond to take part in the Chelan Jr. Rodeo. Children, teens and in between compete in more than 50 combined events from mutton bustin' to bareback riding, stake racing to steer wrestling, roping to barreling and much more.

Competitors ranging from 2-18 years of age and are placed in the following categories:

- Little people: 2-5 years
- Pee-wee: 6-8 years
- Juniors: 9-12
- Intermediate: 12-14 years
- Senior: 15-18 years

These youth compete year-round at junior rodeos throughout the northwest region and even parts of Canada before arriving in Chelan where they will test their skills in one, two or several of the events below:

- Mutton Bustin'

- Goat Tail Untying
- Cal Stake Race
- Barrel Racing
- Pole Bending
- Steer Daubing
- Goat Flanking
- Steer Riding
- Break Away Roping
- Goat Tying
- Calf Riding
- Steer Wrestling
- Cow Riding
- Steer Bareback

The goal: to accumulate enough year-round points in their respective categories and earn the chance to advance to the next level of competition.

Where the money comes in.

It takes money, time and a lot of volunteer labor to successfully host an event like this.

Like most junior rodeos, admission to Chelan Jr. Rodeo is free to spectators. Operating money comes from two areas: 1) Entrance fees; 2) Donations.

This means Chelan's Jr. Rodeo relies heavily on the generous donations and sponsorships of area businesses and individual supporters.

Fundraisers are held each year to help raise enough money to ensure these young rodeo champions are amply rewarded for their valiant efforts and to help pay for the livestock, equipment, judges, awards and other operational expenses typically associated with a production of this kind. Without the support of the Chelan community and surrounding businesses, the Jr. Rodeo would not be what it is today.

Coming soon to the Chelan Rodeo Grounds:

This year's Jr. Rodeo will take place on July 30 and 31, at the Chelan Rodeo Grounds, and events will kick-off at 10 a.m. both days. The Chelan Jr. Rodeo is a member of the Caribou Trails and Eastern Washington Junior Rodeo Associations. These associations coordinate competitive junior rodeos in the central and eastern Washington regions and establish the competition criteria and standards for each event. Their certified judges follow an objective scoring system to grade the proficiency of each competitor's performance. They also maintain a standings list from each junior rodeo.

Supporting youth equine activities has been part of the Saddle Club's mission since shortly after its inception in 1953. By 1957, club leaders dedicated one night a week to training and teaching youth about proper horsemanship, rigging for trail riding and better ways to maintain tack and care for their horses. Over the years, this evolved into the Jr. Saddle Club and eventually joined forces with what we know today as the Jr. Rodeo.

While hosting the junior rodeo was not an annual event in previous decades, the Chelan Rustlers Saddle Club has been a proud host of this long-standing American tradition for the past 10-years -- and is committed to supporting the next generation of rodeo champions for many more years to come.

A COWBOY'S PRAYER

Dear Our Heavenly Father,

We pause mindful of the many blessings you have bestowed upon us. We ask that you will be with us at this rodeo and thank you for living in a country where we are free to gather as we are today. We thank you for guiding us in the arena of life. We don't ask for any special favors Lord. We don't ask for all daylight runs, to draw around a chute fightin' horse or a steer that won't lay. Just help us Lord, to live our lives in a way that when we make our final run in the country up there, where the grass grows lush, green, and stirrup high and the water runs cool, clear, and deep, that you, as our final judge, will tells us, "All our entry fees are paid."

Entiat hosts B-8 Football Camp

Courtesy Wendi Crutcher

After taking a couple of years off due to Covid, Entiat Coach Brian Bailey and his team once again played host to five 8-man football teams from across the state having another successful team camp June 23-25. Teams included Quilcene, Mossyrock, St. John-Endicott-LaCrosse, Touchet, and Entiat. This was the sixth camp held in Entiat and about 90 players participated. The competition was tough. Quilcene played in the state title game last year and Coach Bailey predicts both Quilcene and Mossyrock to be high in the rankings in the pre-season. The Tiger football team had a higher than usual number of players turn out for Spring football so we look forward to some great games in the fall. Go Tigers.

THE WASHINGTON OUTDOOR REPORT

BY JOHN KRUSE, THE WASHINGTON OUTDOOR REPORT

Playing it Safe Outdoors

The wilderness and waters here in Washington offer a wonderful playground for outdoors recreation but far too many people underestimate the dangers out there, turning a fun day of enjoying nature into a crisis or tragedy.

In the past month there have been three accidents in Central Washington leading to deaths in each instance. Could some of them have been prevented? There is reason to believe so and sometimes, it really comes down to playing it safe and knowing your limitations before you put yourself into a situation you can't get out of. Here is a rundown of these recent incidents.

Climbing Accident - July 4 - Icicle Buttress near Leavenworth

A 44-year-old man from Vancouver, was climbing with a female partner when they were caught in a sudden, violent rainstorm. The two attempted to descend the rocky face but the male climber fell some 100 feet and died from the injuries he sustained when he did. Sergeant Jason Reinfeld is in charge of Emergency Management and Search and Rescue Operations for the Chelan County Sheriff's Office. He speculated the two climbers didn't anticipate the magnitude of the storm. Reinfeld also said it appeared a rope anchor appeared to have popped out of the rocks as the victim descended, leading to the fall.

Kayak Accident - June 28 - Lake Chelan

cationing with his family. He was last seen a few miles up lake from the park. His family alerted authorities when he did not return. Chelan County Sheriff's Deputies responded to the scene and searched by boat and air but could not locate the kayaker, who was diabetic. They did however, find his kayak. When they did, Sergeant Reinfeld said they found he had not taken his insulin medication with him and he was not wearing his life jacket, which was left in the boat. The young man has not been located.

Kayak Accident - June 25 - Little Wenatchee River

Two experienced kayakers put in at a bridge crossing on the Little Wenatchee River. Where they put in was relatively calm but 200 yards downstream around a corner there was a severe set of rapids and a waterfall. Both kayakers were thrown out of their kayaks. One of the men made it to shore, the other, a 41-year-old man from Des Moines, lost his life jacket and was swept over the waterfall. As of July 6, his body has not been recovered due to high flowing waters.

Sergeant Reinfeld talked about the importance of knowing the river in detail that you are going to paddle. He said this set of rapids and waterfall was not visible from the road and he does not know if they scouted the whitewater from the bank before entering it or if they entered it blind. It is always a good practice to scout rapids ahead to determine if they are passable and to formulate a plan to navigate them.

Asked about other water safety issues unrelated to this incident, Sergeant Reinfeld stressed the importance of always wearing a life jacket while in a watercraft. He also said that while being tethered to a Stand-Up-Paddleboard is a good idea on a lake, it might not be on a river if the tether or paddleboard gets hung up on a snag or structure.

Alpine Lakes/Enchantments Rescues

While I was on the phone with Sergeant Reinfeld, he was coordinating a rescue mission in the Enchantments portion of the Alpine Lakes Wilderness. A hiker had slipped on snow and slid into a tree. The hiker was unable to move and with the weather in the area bad, a ground team was hiking in with supplies to help them weather the night (the day hikers had none) until a helicopter could reach them the next day.

Reinfeld said the first year of the Covid pandemic was a record year for search and rescues and they remain very busy. He explained that almost all of those who needed to be rescued in the mountains or woods underestimated their skills, their level of fitness, and the time they needed to do the hike they were on (especially in the Enchantments). Many of them did not research the conditions in advance through websites like the Washington Trail Association's Trip Reports page and were not aware of how fast the weather can change in the Cascades.

As far as parting tips go, Reinfeld said it's always good to have a way to communicate besides a cell phone. Both Spot and Garmin make portable devices you can take with you that operate off a satellite. If you get into trouble, you can simply text the nearest 911 call center and ask for help. Sergeant Reinfeld also said hikers should be prepared to spend the night in the woods if things go wrong with the appropriate clothing and survival supplies and to always let someone know where you are going and when you expect to be back. Consider these lessons learned on the water and in the high country.

Abbott Invokes 'Invasion' Powers to Return Illegal Immigrants to Ports of Entry

CHARLOTTE CUTHBERTSON

Texas Gov. Greg Abbott took an unprecedented step on July 7 toward mitigating the border crisis, issuing an executive order that directs state law enforcement officers to apprehend illegal immigrants and return them to a port of entry at an international bridge.

"I... do hereby authorize and empower the Texas National Guard and the Texas Department of Public Safety to respond to this illegal immigration by apprehending immigrants who cross the border between ports of entry or commit other violations of federal law, and to return those illegal immigrants to the border at a port of entry," Abbott's executive order states.

The order comes two days after five Texas counties declared the crisis an "invasion" and urged Abbott to respond at the state level, using his constitutional powers.

Abbott states that the Biden administration "has abandoned the covenant, in Article IV, Section 4 of the U.S. Constitution, that '[t]he United States . . . shall protect each [State in this Union] against Invasion.'"

In response, the governor can call on state military forces under Article IV, Section 7 of the Texas Constitution, as well as relevant sections of the Texas Government Code.

"President [Joe] Biden's failure to protect our border has necessitated action by the State of Texas to ensure public safety and to defend against violations of its sovereignty and territorial integrity," Abbott stated in the order.

"The cartels have become emboldened and enriched by President Biden's open border policies, smuggling in record numbers of people, weapons, and deadly drugs like fentanyl," he said in an accompanying statement.

Border Patrol agents have apprehended more than 2 million illegal immigrants entering Texas from Mexico since Biden took office in January 2021, according to Customs and Border Protection data.

Along the whole southwest border during the same timeframe, agents have detected, but not captured, at least 850,000 illegal immigrants, known as "gotaways."

"President Biden has refused to enforce the immigration laws enacted by Congress, including statutes mandating detention of certain immigrants who have claimed asylum or committed a crime," Abbott stated in his executive order.

"President Biden's reckless refusal to secure the border will provide material support to the cartels, allow them to smuggle more dangerous people, drugs, and weapons into Texas, and embolden cartel gunmen to continue shooting at state and federal officials."

Last week, Kinney County Sheriff Brad Coe drove four illegal aliens to the international bridge in Eagle Pass, Texas, and released them back to Mexico after Border Patrol was unable to take them into custody.

Kinney County was one of the five counties to declare an invasion on July 5, along with Goliad, Terrell, Edwards, and Jeff Davis. Presidio County signed a similar declaration on July 7.

Kinney County Attorney Brent Smith said, prior to Abbott's announcement, that he expected up to 25 Texas counties to declare an invasion by the end of July.

National Border Patrol Council President Brandon Judd said in a previous interview that Abbott should "absolutely" invoke his powers under the Constitution to call the border crisis an "invasion" and respond accordingly.

"We're at a breaking point. We've got miles upon miles of border that just aren't patrolled because we have to deal with, frankly, an invasion," Judd told The Epoch Times on April 15.

"When you're dealing with over 200,000 illegal border crossings per month, I don't know how you don't call it anything but that."

Customs and Border Protection didn't respond by press time to a request for comment from The Epoch Times, or if the agency plans to support the return of illegal aliens at the international bridges.

A legal opinion published by Arizona Attorney General Mark Brnovich on Feb. 7 addresses the "invasion" question. The opinion centers around the definitions of "actually invaded" and "invasion" and whether the federal government has been derelict in its duty to protect.

"The on-the-ground violence and lawlessness at Arizona's border caused by cartels and gangs is extensive, well-documented, and persistent. It can satisfy the definition of 'actually invaded' and 'invasion' under the U.S. Constitution," the opinion reads.

Abbott's office didn't respond by press time to a question from The Epoch Times asking if he expects the executive order to be met with legal challenges from the federal government.

Chinese Communist Party Threat Is 'Massive': FBI and MI5 Directors

ANDREW THORNEBROOKE

Leaders from the UK and U.S. domestic intelligence agencies delivered a rare joint statement on July 6, warning that the Chinese Communist Party (CCP) is the greatest threat to the international order.

"The most game-changing challenge we face comes from the Chinese Communist Party," MI5 Director General Ken McCallum said. "It's covertly applying pressure across the globe. This might feel abstract. But it's real and it's pressing. We need to talk about it. We need to act."

McCallum described the CCP's aggression as a "massive shared challenge" for the UK and the United States. He said the communist regime is organizing the whole of China's state apparatus to systematically undermine the West and steal advanced technologies.

"The CCP adopts a whole-of-state approach in which businesses and individuals are forced by law to cooperate with the Party," he said. "In our free societies, we can do better. By building trusted partnerships across our national systems and, as symbolized today, internationally."

CCP Is the 'Biggest Long-Term Threat'

FBI Director Christopher Wray said the greatest challenge to the international order is the CCP, which seeks to undermine the United States, its allies, and its partners.

"We consistently see that it's the Chinese government that poses the biggest long-term threat to our economic and national security, and by 'our,' I mean both of our nations, along with our allies in Europe and elsewhere," he said.

McCallum said the purpose of the statement wasn't to demonize the Chinese people nor to cut off China's

A Chinese paramilitary soldier stands near Tiananmen Square during the Communist Party's 19th Congress in Beijing on Oct. 22, 2017.

Ken McCallum, director general, MI5 businesses from the rest of the world, but that it was designed to specifically address the many threats posed by the CCP. These included covert theft, forced technology transfers, research exploitation, and cyberattacks that target virtually every sector of society.

"The scale of ambition is huge," he said. "And it's not really a secret. Any number of public strategic plans, such as Made in China 2025, show the intent plainly."

"[They are] seeking to bend our economy, our society, our attitudes to suit the Chinese Communist Party's interests. To set standards and norms that would enable it to dominate the international order. This should make us sit up and notice."

The UK government, like others throughout the world, has been the target of high-profile espionage campaigns by the CCP. Earlier this year, MI5 warned that a Chinese spy had cultivated extensive ties throughout parliament, including through fundraising. Likewise, the UK also expelled several Chinese spies who posed as journalists.

The incidents served to underscore what McCallum presented as a harsh truth: that the West's economic liberalism had failed to result in greater freedom and transparency in China.

"The widespread Western assumption that growing prosperity within China and increasing connectivity with the West would automatically lead to greater political freedom has, I'm afraid, been shown to be plain wrong," he said. "But the Chinese Communist Party is interested in our democratic, media, and legal systems. Not to emulate them, sadly, but to use them for its gain."

CCP Targets US Economy, Politics

Wray noted that CCP espionage targeted all sectors of the economy, from aviation to agriculture, and that the CCP was engaged in aggressive activities against U.S. infrastructure, such as a massive hack that compromised roughly 100,000 servers last year, which Microsoft alleged was carried out by hackers with backing from Beijing.

He also noted that the CCP appeared to be preparing its economy for increased decoupling from the West in a potential signal that it could be prepping for an invasion of Taiwan.

"We've seen China looking for ways to insulate their economy against potential sanctions, trying to cushion themselves from harm if they do anything to draw the ire of the international behavior," Wray said. "In our world, we call that kind of behavior a clue."

As such, he encouraged business leaders to coordinate with the FBI and MI5 to protect themselves and to better prepare for the reality of increased CCP attempts to steal from, extort, and pressure businesses in the United States and the UK.

Wray said such a threat shouldn't be underestimated, as the CCP had already attempted to directly interfere in U.S. elections by plotting against a Chinese-born candidate for Congress.

"The Chinese government is trying to shape the world by interfering in our politics and those of our allies," he said. "The Chinese government went so far as directly interfering in a congressional election in New York because they did not want the candidate—a Tiananmen Square protester and critic of the Chinese government—to be elected."

The statement referenced the case of Yan Xiong, a U.S. Army veteran who was targeted by the CCP last year. The incident was one of the numerous attempts by the regime in Beijing to stalk, intimidate, harass, or otherwise silence dissidents of the regime living in the United States.

Despite those threats, the Department of Justice terminated the Trump-era China Initiative, its sweeping counter-espionage campaign, in February. The department stated that it had received numerous complaints of racial profiling and, although an internal review found no evidence of such, it would end the program to avoid a "harmful perception of bias."

Perhaps to avoid a similar outcome with ongoing FBI efforts, Wray underscored that the threat to the West wasn't those of Chinese origin, but the CCP itself.

"It is the Chinese government and the Chinese Communist Party that pose the threat we're focused on countering, not the Chinese people and certainly not Chinese immigrants in our countries who are themselves frequently victims of the Chinese government's lawless aggression."

Looking for Volunteers with Lake Chelan Waterfront Access
Lake Chelan Research Institute (LCRI) seeks eight to ten waterfront locations to establish long-term trends in nearshore water temperature. Changes in nearshore temperature are a key factor in growth of attached algae. We currently lack temperature trends in the nearshore environment of Lake Chelan and are initiating collection of that data so we can understand what role temperature may play regarding increased algae growth. Involvement of waterfront homeowners is crucial to the success of the work. Support for this study is provided by the Icicle Fund (see <https://iciclefund.org/> and <https://iciclefund.org/recent-awards>) The institute's mission includes collecting water quality data regularly; understanding the processes that control, and assess trends in Lake Chelan's water quality, benefiting residents, tourism, and environmental science for years to come.
