Barry DePaoli looking forward to free time in retirement

ERIN MULLINS, STAFF WRITER

CHELAN - Barry DePaoli, former superintendent of the Lake Chelan School District, officially retired July 1. DePaoli said that he had been with the Lake Chelan School District for 22 years and taught in British Columbia for 13 years. DePaoli said that he feels that it is a good time for him to retire.

"I feel like it's a good time for me and the district. We're in a really good financial position. And I feel like where we are at strategically as well it is a good time to transition for the district," he said. "Some of it is me really wanting to take better care of myself and enjoy good years of retirement."

DePaoli said that he has a cabin up in British Columbia, where he grew up, and is looking forward to going up there and reconnecting with his family. He relocated from British Columbia to Chelan because his wife grew up in Chelan and she decided to make a career move to be back in the area. DePaoli worked in the hotel industry for a few years before getting back into education and working for a GED program.

From there, he took a position as an alternative education teacher, then worked as a middle school principal and then as a high school principal. After that, DePaoli finally took the superintendent position. While he had no definite plans to stay in Chelan when he first got here, he said he has certainly enjoyed it.

From time to time, DePaoli said that he receives emails from former students or sees them in town and that it is exciting to learn about what they are doing and where they are going. He said that Lake Chelan School District is special because it was ahead of its time in building relationships with students, which is still a big focus now, especially after COVID.

"I go to a lot of the senior presentations and students often comment about how fortunate they are to be able to go to our schools and really know our teachers on a personal level," he said. "So I think that is probably one of the biggest gifts that our district has, is just the relationships we have with our students."

DePaoli isn't worried about how his students will fare with him gone because he says the staff at Lake Chelan School District is very supportive of students. He said they have a good counseling department in place and that the district focuses on social and emotional learning.

Besides heading up to British Columbia, DePaoli said that he will pursue his hobbies and spend more time with his wife. He enjoys dabbling in carpentry and woodworking as well as cycling. He said that he is looking forward to having less responsibilities and isn't worried about how he will spend all his extra free time.

DePaoli has a niece in Australia that he wants to visit and plans to stay involved in the schools and community. He plans to help out with levies or anything that he can do to support the schools. In the future, he said that it is possible that he would run for school board or do consulting work, but he wants to take his first year of retirement as a complete break.

While he is looking forward to not having to come into work every Monday and having more time, DePaoli said that he will miss the students and employees of the Lake Chelan School District.

"I'm extremely grateful for the people I have worked with here. It has been a real privilege to serve the district," he said. "I just want to thank our community, there've been a lot of really great parents. I want to thank our kids. When you are around young people, you remain young."

Congresswoman Kim Schrier works to pass the Lower Food and Fuel Costs Act

BY ERIN MULLINS, STAFF WRITER

WASHINGTON, D.C. On June 16, the U.S. House of Representatives passed the Lower Food and Fuel Costs Act by a vote of 221-204. The bill assists agricultural producers with the cost of agriculture and renewable fuels infrastructure as well as creates a special investigator for meat and poultry within the USDA and authorizes the USDA to make new loans and grants for livestock processing.

The bill would also increase federal cost sharing for environmental protection activities and authorize additional funds for the Environmental Quality Incentives Program and the Conservation Stewardship Program. The bill would support increased domestic production of biofuels, lowering the cost of fuel.

Congresswoman Kim Schrier voted in support of the Lower Food and Fuel Costs Act. She is also supporting acts which help to lower consumer gas costs.

"At the same time that we are paying record gas prices, fossil fuel companies, oil, is raking in record profit. And so, I have a bill to address price gouging during the fuel emergency that we passed through the house a couple of weeks ago," Schrier said.

"I introduced a bill to take a holiday from the federal gas tax. This would be a temporary measure until January 2023 to just give people a little breathing room because everyday people are feeling the high cost of gasoline. Frankly, they're feeling it at the pump, but they are also feeling it at the grocery store and everywhere else," she continued.

Schrier said that farmers are feeling the high cost of fertilizer prices, which are correlated with fuel prices, because most of the fertilizer in the US comes from Russia. Another issue is that there are very few meat processors that control the vast majority of meat, she said. Farmers are not seeing increased profits from the higher cost of meat in the supermarket because of the monopoly that the meat processors have over meat, so increased meat processing competition is needed.

The increased costs are not only affecting farmers and consumers, they are affecting all aspects of the economy.

"We are seeing families who have to choose whether to fill up their tank or get food, so more families are reliant on food banks," Schrier said. "And then we talk to the food banks, and they are saying it is way harder for them to afford food and the transportation of the food."

Supermarkets are also making increased profits during this period of high food costs. Schrier said that Kroger, a nationwide supermarket chain, has profits which are up 338% compared to 2021, and this needs to be addressed.

Even though more families are hurting, the summer meal program will help kids in need. President Joe Biden signed the Keep Kids Fed Act on June 25, five days before it was set to expire, according to NPR. The act did not include an extension of the waivers or universal free meals in the budget, which started in March, as Senate minority leader Mitch McConnell pushed against the extension.

A bipartisan group of lawmakers worked to ensure some of the school meal waivers would be extended and a nearly $3 billion plan was passed to extend all pandemic school meal waivers through the summer and increase federal reimbursements for school lunches in the coming school year.

Before the pandemic, meals ranged from free to reduced to full price for students, depending on household income. During the pandemic, the waivers allowed all meals to be free. However, the current bill does not give every student free meals for the upcoming school year, according to NPR.

The bill allows summer meal deliveries and grab-and-go options and extends free meals through the summer. Before the pandemic, summer meals were only allowed in areas that had 50% of kids qualifying for free or reduced cost lunch and families had to meet income requirements to receive food. During the pandemic, those requirements were waived.

Schrier said that she does not know how long the food and fuel crisis will last. She said that the crisis is occurring worldwide, and that Congress is working hard to make citizens' lives easier and reduce costs. Schrier emphasized that the effort to reduce costs goes beyond just the costs of food and fuel and extends to other parts of life like childcare, preschool, and the cost of prescription drugs.

Sen. Brad Hawkins receives award from small business group

OLYMPIA - Sen. Brad Hawkins is being recognized for his efforts to help Washington small businesses.

The National Federation of Independent Business (NFIB) announced that the 12th District senator has earned the organization's Guardian of Small Business award. NFIB Washington State Director Patrick Connor, in a letter informing Hawkins that he is receiving the award, shared his support to the senator for his consistent support of Washington's small businesses. Connor wrote in his letter to Hawkins, "We are tremendously grateful that you stood with our state's small business owners' 100 percent of the time on these important issues. Thank you!"

Hawkins also stated in a current interview, "I was very honored to receive this award for my strong support of Washington's small business community. People probably think of me for my education, agriculture, hydropower, and outdoor recreation interests, but I'm also a big supporter of our business community. Washington's small businesses have survived some extremely challenging times - through the COVID pandemic - and they need our support now more than ever. With record inflation, supply chain challenges, and other economic uncertainty, lawmakers should keep our business community at the front of their minds. Small business owners are our job creators and job sustainers. They are the ones who will keep our economy advancing, which keeps sales tax revenue flowing to state government for important services. Successful small businesses keep people employed, maintain community stability, and improve state finances. Receiving this award is very humbling and sends a message back to me that Washington's small business community appreciates my efforts. That's always gratifying as a legislator. My job exists to serve the people who elect me, and I'm proud to receive this award, which is supported by many businesses locally." Hawkins has served the 12th Legislative District since 2012 when he was elected to the House of Representatives. Hawkins was elected to the Senate in 2016 and reelected in 2020.

Obituaries and Memorials need to be typed and emailed as a Word Document. They can be placed in one or more papers - all publish weekly on Wednesday.

Obituaries are priced by the number of words and include one color photo and go online at no extra charge. Memorials are priced per column inch. THE WASHINGTON OUTDOOR REPORT

Treasure Hunting

BY JOHN KRUSE, THE WASHINGTON OUTDOOR REPORT

Looking for a fun hobby that will get you outside? Consider buying a metal detector and go hunt for buried treasure. Metal detectors have been around for decades but now entry level ones are lightweight, easy to use, and even give you some clues as to what you may be digging up when you hear a signal.

I recently got a Vanquish 340 metal detector from Minelab. Weighing less than three pounds, it is waterproof to 3.3 feet and has a multi-IQ sensor that detects metal through varied surfaces from the beach to a grassy park. Simply turn the detector on and slowly sweep just over the surface in front of you as you walk. When you do detect metal, you'll see a number ranging from -9 to 40. The lower numbers usually are iron based. On the other hand, a reading between 29 and 31 this usually indicates a quarter, though it can also indicate silver. A penny gives off a reading close to 10 and a reading around 20 could indicate jewelry. These metal detectors are made for beginners and available at Sportsman's Warehouse and Cabela's stores.

There are rules when it comes to taking things home you find while using a metal detector. If you are on private property (your own or someone else's land with their permission) you and the landowner are allowed to take home anything you find. The rules change on public lands though.

On National Forest and Bureau of Land Management lands you are allowed to use a metal detector to look for coins but if you are looking for silver or gold, mining laws apply. If the area you find gold in has a mining claim on it, it belongs to the person with the claim. On the other hand, if there is no claim on the land, you can keep it.

Washington State Parks allow metal detectors in portions of 54 parks, but before you go you have to fill out an online form and have that form with you while you are in the park using your detector. You can find out more about metal detectors in Washington State Parks at <https://www.parks.wa.gov/127/Metal-detecting>.

Historical sites on public lands are generally off limits and if you find something of archeological significance you should leave it where you found it and notify the nearest state or federal employee associated with the land you are treasure hunting on.

As a new user I decided to reach out to Debbie Smikoski, an avid metal detecting enthusiast who is the Business Development Manager for Minelab. I asked her how popular this hobby is and she replied, "It's grown exponentially the last couple of years. People want to get out and do something and this is a safe thing to do with social distancing."

I also asked Smikoski about how a beginner can get the most out of their metal detector and treasure hunting experience. She said, "It's always helpful to join a local club. Not only can members tell you the rules about where you can and can't go, but they are very passionate about the sport and want to help you succeed."

Smikoski also urged beginning metal detector users to, "Just have fun. There are all sorts of treasures that can be found and you never know where they are going to be (to include silver coins). Don't give up on it and you should have a blast."

One place to go to find out about the various treasure hunting clubs in Washington State is the Metal Detectors Association of Washington. You can find them on Facebook or through their website at <https://sites.google.com/site/metaldetectwa/about-mdaw>.

Peter Flohr Memorial Salmon Derby

In other news, The North Central Washington Chapter of the Coastal Conservation Association is once again putting on the annual Peter Flohr Memorial Salmon Derby, also known as the Wenatchee Salmon Derby. The dates this year are July 15-16 and cash prizes will be given for the biggest salmon caught as well as to the boat with the heaviest amount of fish weighed in. Last year's big fish was a 21.68-pound Chinook salmon caught by Tim Davis. The boundaries for this popular tournament stretch from Rock Island Dam to Wells Dam. You can find out more information and buy a ticket to participate at www.wenatcheesalmonderby.com.

Supreme Court Narrows EPA's Ability to Regulate Carbon Dioxide Emissions

MATTHEW VADUM

The Supreme Court ruled 6–3 on June 30 that the Clean Air Act doesn't give the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) widespread power to regulate carbon dioxide emissions that a popular theory says contribute to global warming.

Chief Justice John Roberts wrote the court's majority opinion in West Virginia v. EPA, court file 20-1530. Roberts was joined by the court's other five conservatives. The court's three liberal justices dissented.

While "capping carbon dioxide emissions at a level that will force a nationwide transition away from the use of coal to generate electricity may be a sensible 'solution to the crisis of the day,'" Roberts wrote, quoting a 1992 precedent, "it is not plausible that Congress gave EPA the authority to adopt on its own such a regulatory scheme in Section 111(d)" of the Clean Air Act.

"A decision of such magnitude and consequence rests with Congress itself, or an agency acting pursuant to a clear delegation from that representative body," he wrote.

West Virginia and 18 other states challenged the authority the Clean Air Act provides the EPA.

In 2016, the Supreme Court overturned the Obama-era Clean Power Plan (CPP), which expanded controls over the industry. Next, the deregulation-minded Trump administration reversed course, easing control on the industry with its Affordable Clean Energy Rule (ACE Rule).

On Jan. 19, 2021, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit struck down the ACE Rule, restoring some of the EPA's authority in American Lung Association v. EPA. The court held that the EPA, under Trump, had misconstrued section 7411(d) of the Clean Air Act.

In the new opinion, the Supreme Court reversed the D.C. Circuit decision and remanded the case "for further proceedings consistent with this opinion."

In Justice Elena Kagan's dissent, she criticized the court majority for a decision she said "strips" the EPA of the power Congress gave it to respond to "the most pressing environmental challenge of our time," citing Massachusetts v. EPA (2007).

Supreme Court Chief Justice John Roberts

ANDREW CABALLERO-REYNOLDS/AFP VIA GETTY IMAGES

The Miller coal power plant in Adamsville, Ala., on April 13, 2021.

"Climate change's causes and dangers are no longer subject to serious doubt. Modern science is 'unequivocal that human influence'—in particular, the emission of greenhouse gases like carbon dioxide—'has warmed the atmosphere, ocean and land.'"

"Whatever else this Court may know about, it does not have a clue about how to address climate change. And let's say the obvious:

The stakes here are high. Yet the Court today prevents congressionally authorized agency action to curb power plants' carbon dioxide emissions. The Court appoints itself—instead of Congress or the expert agency—the decision maker on climate policy. I cannot think of many things more frightening."

West Virginia Attorney General Patrick Morrisey, who previously told

The Epoch Times that the EPA is trying to transform itself from "an environmental regulator into a central energy planning authority," praised the Supreme Court.

"For many years, we've argued that EPA only had a narrow bit of authority to regulate carbon emissions," Morrisey, a Republican who brought the appeal, said at a press conference.

"I think that the court today amplified that point. And once again, they also made clear that when you have something this big, something with vast economic and political significance, then that represents an extraordinary question. And that means Congress needs to step in, as opposed to the unelected bureaucrats.

"We know that over the last year and a half, the Biden administration has tried to run roughshod over the American economy with respect to its energy agenda.

"We want to make sure that the Biden agenda is limited by basis of what Congress authorized these agencies [to do]," he said.

"Our founders envisioned" that "Congress and not the unelected bureaucrats" should make decisions "about the major issues of the day."

"They didn't want to just have these unelected bureaucrats reach out and try to seize power where it didn't exist," Morrisey said.

U.S. Sen. Bob Menendez (D-N.J.) criticized the ruling and the six conservative justices.

"As the devastating impacts of climate change are becoming evermore present, it is mind boggling and deeply alarming that the Supreme Court today has decided to hamstring the EPA's authority to regulate greenhouse gases. This ruling not only restricts the agency's ability to limit air pollution from the second-largest source of emissions in America, it also undermines the landmark Clean Air Act that gave it such authority," the senator said.

"Make no mistake, with this devastating ruling in West Virginia v. EPA, the conservative majority of the Court continues to take our country backward and more worrisome, it opens the door to far-reaching implications for how other federal agencies generally create regulations to implement existing legislation moving forward."

After 53 Die in Smuggling Tragedy, Texas Governor to Start Truck Checkpoints on Highways

CHARLOTTE CUTHBERTSON

EAGLE PASS, Texas—The Texas Department of Public Safety (DPS) will be setting up random highway checkpoints to inspect trucks following the deaths of 53 illegal immigrants who were being smuggled in the back of a tractor-trailer earlier this week.

"We've seen increased brazenness by cartels that feel empowered, because we do not have a federal government that's pushing back against those cartels and their illegal activity," Gov. Greg Abbott said at a June 29 press conference in Eagle Pass, one of the busiest regions for illegal border crossings in the country.

"And of course, the worst thing of all is the catastrophic death that we have witnessed."

DPS Director Steven McCraw said state troopers will assist civilian inspectors in setting up checkpoints along the main highways running from the Texas–Mexico border to San Antonio, Houston, and other major hubs.

Often, illegal aliens wade or are rafted across the Rio Grande into Texas and, while avoiding Border Patrol, are taken to stash houses to await vehicle transport further into the United States.

McCraw said he also plans to deploy DPS special agents to identify stash houses near the border, "which is very important to disrupting Mexican cartel operations."

The truck that was carrying the illegal immigrants who died in San Antonio passed through a Border Patrol highway checkpoint 30 miles north of Laredo on Interstate Highway 35, McCraw told The Epoch Times.

The checkpoint often has two truck lanes and three car lanes operating simultaneously.

Tom Homan, the former chief of Immigration and Customs Enforcement, told The Epoch Times that smugglers will turn off the freezer unit in refrigerated trucks to give the appearance that it's an empty trailer and that there's no need for a secondary inspection.

The refrigeration was turned off in the truck in San Antonio and there was no water inside, even as the mercury topped 100 degrees.

"The truck passed through a Border Patrol checkpoint, it was not inspected. It was not inspected because the Border Patrol does not have the resources to be able to inspect all of the trucks," Abbott said.

"Many of these deaths could be prevented if Biden simply fully funded the Border Patrol operation of the United States of America and implemented the policies that the Border Patrol needs in order to do their real job. And the real job is not the paper processing work that they've been assigned to do."

President Joe Biden called the deaths in San Antonio "horrifying and heartbreaking," and he vowed to crack down on the criminal smuggling organizations.

"Exploiting vulnerable individuals for profit is shameful," he added.

White House press secretary Kar-ine Jean-Pierre told reporters on June 28, "The fact of the matter is the border is closed, which is in part why you see people trying to make this dangerous journey using smuggling networks."

Since Biden took office, the number of illegal crossings has hit multiple record highs. Border Patrol has apprehended more than 3.2 million illegal immigrants since January 2021, according to Customs and Border Protection data.

Four people have now been arrested in connection with the truck smuggling operation that resulted in the 53 deaths, according to the U.S. Department of Justice.

Homero Zamorano, the driver of the truck, was charged on June 29 with one count of alien smuggling resulting in death, and Christian Martinez, 28, was charged with one count of conspiracy to transport illegal aliens resulting in death.

If convicted, both Zamorano and Martinez face up to life in prison or potentially the death penalty.

Two Mexican nationals, Juan Francisco D'Luna-Bilbao and Juan Claudio D'Luna-Mendez, were arrested on June 27. The men have each been charged with three firearm-related offenses after exiting a San Antonio property listed as the registered address of the truck used in the smuggling operation. Both had overstayed their B-2 visas.

Keep it Blue LAKE CHELAN

Looking for Volunteers with Lake Chelan Waterfront Access
Lake Chelan Research Institute (LCRI) seeks eight to ten waterfront locations to establish long-term trends in nearshore water temperature. Changes in nearshore temperature are a key factor in growth of attached algae. We currently lack temperature trends in the nearshore environment of Lake Chelan and are initiating collection of that data so we can understand what role temperature may play regarding increased algae growth. Involvement of waterfront homeowners is crucial to the success of the work. Support for this study is provided by the Icicle Fund (see <https://iciclefund.org/> and <https://iciclefund.org/recent-awards>) The institute's mission includes collecting water quality data regularly; understanding the processes that control, and assess trends in Lake Chelan's water quality, benefiting residents, tourism, and environmental science for years to come. If interested, please contact Phil Long at 509-531-2987 or phillong@nwi.net. More information is available at <https://lakechelanresearchinstitute.com> and KeepItBlueLakeChelan.org Keep It Blue—Lake Chelan!

The Contract Unveiling the healing power of forgiveness A novel by local writer William E. Forhan. Nobel Prize winning author Gabriel Garcia Marquez was quoted as saying, "All human beings have three lives, public, private and secret." In our modern world of the Internet search engines and DNA testing, keeping our private and secret lives separate is increasingly difficult. Sometimes they can come crashing in on our public lives when we least expect it. Father Robert McCarthy is a middle-aged priest who is suddenly and unexpectedly confronted with his secret past. How he deals with the revelation of that past with his family, his congregation and the impacts of that secret life is inspirational. How McCarthy discloses the news of his college indiscretion requires him to take everyone involved on a journey of confession. That journey forces him to deal with issues of homosexuality, judgementalism, divorce and pride. His pastoring skills and the depth of support from his wife help him bring forgiveness and restoration to many broken relationships. The bonds of three families are ultimately restored through celebrations of life experiences including fishing, holiday gatherings, the discovery of unknown family connections and a wedding. Bill's Book is available online through Amazon.com, BarnesandNoble.com and Apple iBook The paperback is $16.99 and the ebook is $8.99.
