Confluence Health cancels contract with Premera Blue Cross

By ERIN MULLINS REPORTER

WENATCHEE - Confluence Health recently announced that they will not renew their contract with Premera Blue Cross. Effective February 1, 2022 Confluence Health will no longer be an in-network provider for patients who have Premera, Lifewise, and Blue Cross insurance plans. Other plans that are affected include Regence Blue Shield and Uni-form Medical Plan.

Andrew Canning, Director of Marketing and Communications at Confluence Health said that the decision not to renew the contract will affect about 36,000 patients in Chelan, Douglas, Okanogan and Grant counties.

According to Dr. Doug Wilson, CEO-elect of Confluence Health, the rates that Premera were willing to provide as reimbursement were so low that they would not allow Confluence to continue providing medical services for everyone in the long term.

"We were worried that we would eventually have to look at trimming down services and that means people in this region would not have access to the kind of good medical care that they really deserve," he said.

On April 23, Confluence Health notified Premera that it would not renew its current contract. Wilson said that the rates that Premera was willing to provide were much different than what other commercial insurers are paying and the differential reimbursement did not seem fair.

Negotiations about the contract dispute started well before April, Wilson said. Since then, he said they have had several meetings in an attempt to come to an agreement but haven't made any significant progress.

Courtney Wallace, spokesperson for Premera Blue Cross, said in an email that Premera is paying its fair share.

"The truth is that Confluence is the largest multi-specialty health system in North Central Washington with no true competition within 100 miles. On average, Confluence Health's hospital costs are higher than all other systems in Eastern Washington," Wallace said.

Other hospitals in the region have not yet followed suit with any announcements to end their contracts with Premera.

Lake Chelan Health

Agustin Benegas, Communications Manager for Lake Chelan Health, said in an email: "Lake Chelan Health will soon receive the contract from Premera with a plan to renew; they did not change our rates."

Three Rivers Hospital

Jennifer Best, Business Development Coordinator at Three Rivers Hospital, said that Premera is an in network provider for the hospital and no decisions have been made regarding whether the contract will be renewed.

Chelan Council discusses animal control, sewage contract renewal

By ERIN MULLINS REPORTER

CHELAN - The July 27 Chelan city council meeting started with a presentation about animal control by Taylor Sharp, Executive Director of the Wenatchee Valley Humane Society.

In 2020, the number of calls that animal control received from Chelan increased exponentially, Sharp said. This year animal control received 267 calls from Chelan. Additionally, she said that trust in the badge has decreased. Officers have been confronted with knives and guns.

A council member asked if animal control officers are

The City of Chelan is holding an Open Public Forum to discuss the Parks Master Plan with the Consulting firm, GreenPlay, LLC. on Wednesday, August 25, 6:30-8 p.m. at Chelan City Hall Council Chambers, 135 E. Johnson Avenue. A quorum of Council members is expected to be in attendance but no action will be taken.

deputized. Animal Control Sergeant Ian Mallory responded that the animal control officers are not deputized and are semi-commissioned through Chelan and Douglas county superior courts.

Wages were increased for all officers, Sharp said. In the past, several qualified candidates were lost due to wage issues. Animal control officers already make more than minimum wage, but officer pay needs to go up to attract and retain qualified candidates since the minimum wage is going up, she said.

The cost of the contract for Animal Control is going to go up by 10 to 12 percent, Sharp said. In September or October when minimum wage increases have been decided the exact amount of the increase will be finalized.

The professional services agreement with Berk Consulting for planning services was presented by Planning Director Craig Gildroy. The city is requesting assistance from Berk Consulting to meet statutory deadlines for applications because of a high workload for applications for land use, Gildroy said.

$2 million for farmworker improvements

Gebbers Farms, L&I reach settlement over 2020 COVID deaths

By MIKE MALTAIS STAFF WRITER

BREWSTER - Gebbers Farms and the Washington State Department of Labor and Industries (L&I) have reached a settlement stemming from fines and citations levied by L&I last year following COVID-19-related farmworker deaths. Under terms of the mediated agreement Gebbers will invest more than $2 million for housing, health care, and safety of its farm labor force.

In the original action initiated last July 2020 L&I assessed a $2.06 million fine after two Gebbers farmworkers died from COVID-19 and cited the farm for a half dozen related violations.

Gebbers Farms spokesperson Amy Philpott of Watson Green, LLC noted in her statement that prior to the L&I action Gebbers had already implemented COVID-response protocols that it developed in consultation with an infectious disease specialist.

"Gebbers Farms has always cared deeply about the well-being and safety of its workers," said Cass Gebbers, CEO of Gebbers Farms. "Each year, Gebbers Farms makes improvements to its temporary housing facilities to enhance the safety and comfort of its workers. This mediation agreement will result in even more improvements, and it will benefit the community at large through the farm's donations to community charities and non-profits."

Under the terms of the mediation agreement, Gebbers Farms will invest approximately $1.4 million to improve workers' facilities that include:

- Entirely new farmworker housing to include demolishing and rebuilding one of the older housing camps originally built in the 1970s.

"This camp has separate sleeping, cooking, and toilet facilities and consistently requires corrective actions to meet minimum licensing requirements," said the L&I assessment. "Three new units

Public Relations at Cascade Medical, said in an email that Premera is an in-network provider at Cascade Medical and a need to discontinue the relationship with Premera has not been identified.

Since Confluence is not renewing its contract with Premera, patients with Premera insurance will be out of network at Confluence and face higher costs of medical care.

Dr. Pete Rutherford, CEO of Confluence Health, said that the costs those with Premera insurance will have to pay once the contract non-renewal is effective depend on the benefit structure that each employer has negotiated with Premera. The change could affect a patient's deductible, co-pays, or co-insurance.

Rutherford said that those with Premera insurance should talk with their employer or insurance broker to get some opinions on which other insurance companies might be able to meet their needs for care.

Because of the impacts of the nonrenewal on patients, Confluence decided to give

Dr. Pete Rutherford, CEO of Confluence
Health

six months advance notice of the change, Wilson said. The terms Premera was offering after five months of negotiation were far from where they needed to be for Confluence to serve all its patients, he said.

"It became apparent to us, especially in the last month or even back in April," Wilson said, "that it was unlikely that Premera was going to come to a place where we could, in good conscience, accept the terms."

Confluence Health is not currently planning any additional negotiating meetings with Premera and the non-renewal decision was made with full support from the Confluence Health Board of Directors.

Wallace said that she did not believe that Premera has reached an impasse in contract negotiations, but acknowledged that there is still a long way to go to make a mutually beneficial agreement. She urged Confluence to return to the negotiations table.

"Despite Confluence's decision to end the negotiation," Wallace said, "we believe it is in the best interest of our customers and the community that we continue these critical conversations as this type of discussion takes time and isn't a sprint."

Even though there are no current plans to negotiate with Premera, Rutherford said that Confluence is always willing to discuss and look at possibilities. Canning and Wilson both said that it is common for large insurance companies to have disputes with hospitals regarding insurance negotiations.

"Insurance companies do this all the time," Wilson said. "It is part of their way of doing business and we know it's hard on patients. But our responsibility as a health care provider is to think long term."

But some of the financial issues that the hospital faces go beyond the contract non-renewal. Confluence provides care for those who do not have insurance or are underinsured, which comes at a cost to the hospital. Wilson said that Medicaid rates in the region are nowhere near what they should be to cover the actual cost of care.

Rutherford said that reimbursement from commercial insurances has to help cover the cost of providing care to patients who are uninsured or underinsured. Despite the cost to the hospital, he said that Confluence is committed to not turning anyone away, regardless of their insurance situation.

Confluence Health provided $28 million in charity care last year, Wilson said. The cost of charity care is factored into the hospital's cost structure. Those costs become debt for the hospital and take away from investments the hospital could make like hiring people and buying new equipment.

Overall, the non-renewal of the Premera contract goes beyond the terms of negotiation between the two parties and reflects the larger issues that both insurance companies and hospitals face.

costs can remain low, Gildroy said. A motion was made and passed to approve the Berk Consulting professional services agreement.

Public Works Director Jake Youngren presented the Lake Chelan Sewer District agreement. The district is renewing a 40 year contract with the city, Youngren said. Council member John Olson asked why doesn't the city take ownership of the sewer system.

A commission realized that the district was not in a financial situation where it would make sense for them to take over the sewage system, Youngren said. A council member asked if such a long agreement is normal for a sewage agreement.

Youngren said that the agreement was similar to other districts but the term length could be amended if needed. Council member Peter Jamtgaard expressed concern over the district having control over both the north and south shores of the lake for such a long time and said he would vote no on the initiative.

Youngren replied that the agreement was a sewage agreement only and is set up to be equitable. A council member said that he would much rather have all of the places on the south shore hooked into a sewer than have septic tanks. He added that the contract is reviewed every five years.

Council member Ty Witt said that he wasn't aware of any alternatives for sewer control and that the agreement could be amended and will be assessed on a regular basis. Witt said that he was comfortable with the arrangement.

After further discussion, a motion was made to execute the Lake Chelan Sewer District interlocal agreement. Council member Jamtgaard rejected the motion but the other council members voted in favor and the motion was passed.

Youngren presented an amendment to the Lake Hills LLC site agreement. The company requested to push the installation of the sidewalk beyond the date that was proposed until grading work is completed. A motion was made and the amendment was passed.

The city has been awarded money that will go towards the extension of water to the Lake Chelan Municipal Airport, Youngren said. In east Chelan, a reservoir is identified to address fire flow deficiencies, but it is not sufficient for the long term needs of the city, he said.

The new plan is to have an east Chelan reservoir of greater size and a higher elevation, Youngren said. After discussion, a motion was made and the amendment passed.

Gildroy presented an updated Chelan Bay (Three Fingers) shoreline maintenance agreement.

The decision for shoreline approval requires the applicant to improve public lake access, construct the lakeside trail, install viewing platforms at each of the canals and install native plants and grass in the walking area, Gildroy said.

The proposed commercial dock will be open to the public and maintained by the property owner, Gildroy said. The city is responsible for providing water, garbage cans, and maintenance of the lakeside trail.

A council member asked if it is going to be hard to snowplow the trail since it isn't contiguous with the other areas the city maintains. Gildroy replied that it would be difficult initially for the park to maintain the 10 foot wide trail and hopefully the trail would be connected to somewhere else eventually.

Parks Recreation and Community Services Director Paul Horne presented an update on the replacement of the parking kiosks. The existing parking kiosks are becoming obsolete, Horne said. Transactions take too long, they timeout and the meters don't read a systemic magnetic stripe on a credit card, he said.

The new kiosks will have a touchscreen, a better user interface and a chip and contactless card reader, he said. The amount of money received from parking has vastly exceeded the budget and so funding will be there, he said.

A council member asked if an app based system where users reported their license would be better. Gildroy replied that the city of Leavenworth used to have a system like that and the proposed system has better functionality.

The system is working for most people, Gildroy said, but there are some cards it doesn't read. A council member asked how much the city charges for parking. The city charges $20 per day for parking, Gildroy replied. Paid parking was the last item on the agenda of the city council meeting.

worker safety programs. The safety officer will be empowered to stop any activity deemed unsafe or in violation of the safety and health rules.

The company will also donate $513,000 to area hospitals, health care centers, emergency medical services, day care and recreational centers serving the workers and their families to improve health care access for them.

"Although we are pleased this issue is resolved, we have not forgotten the thousands who lost loved ones during this pandemic," said Gebbers. "Sadly, in 2020, Gebbers Farms also lost longtime team members and familiar faces to our family.

These men, their families, and all Gebbers employees are part of the reason why we are gratified that the agreement includes our continued investment in our workers and our local communities."

An L&I media release noted the benefits of reaching the settlement.

"Because a court could not order Gebbers to make these changes, this is a better result for workers than we could have achieved through litigation," said L&I Director Joel Sacks. "Instead of possibly spending years and taxpayer resources in court to potentially collect fines, this settlement means the company will put significant money where it will help the most: improving health, safety, and quality of life for farmworkers and their families. Real, on-the-ground improvements for farmworkers and their families are a fitting way to honor the memories of the Gebbers' workers who died."

In her statement Philpott cited a CDC study that showed workers who lived in Gebbers-provided housing were three times less likely to contract COVID than workers living in the community, and the Gebbers workforce had a positive rate of only 0.7 percent.

Gebbers Farms posted copies of the agreement in common areas for employees to read. Ten days following that action the Board of Industrial and Insurance Appeals will issue an order and the agreement takes effect.

STORY BY MICHAEL GIBB, PRESIDENT, BOARD OF DIRECTORS, CHELAN VALLEY HOPE

CHELAN FALLS - On Tuesday afternoon, July 27, over 45 volunteers and guests gathered at Chelan Falls Park for the Chelan Valley Hope (CVH) Summer Event thanking and honoring their past and current volunteers for their commitment to "helping others help themselves" through this social services non-profit agency. CVH is in its 12th year of "furthering positive changes in people's lives" and assisting those in crisis and need with such things as emergency shelter, grocery and fuel vouchers, rent and utilities assistance, and referrals to other relevant regional resources.

At the Tuesday barbeque, long-time volunteer and intake specialist, Claudia Swenson, was honored with a certificate and gift for her work with CVH and also with the Seniors Tender Loving Care Program, the home visitation program affiliate of Chelan Valley Hope. Claudia is handing off her responsibilities as Program Coordinator to Sandy Zimchek. Those interested in volunteering with TLC can email Sandy at tlprogram4@gmail.com or call 509-669-9042.

Other long-time volunteers at Chelan Valley Hope that were honored included Marie Alice Hurst, Judi Stanford, Karlene Anglin, Claudia Reed, Maxine Moore, Toni House, Joanne Knott, and Joan Pierce.

Jean Gambrielle, Executive Director of CVH, thanked all volunteers, and Michael Gibb, Board President, shared how Chelan Valley Hope benefits the greater Chelan Valley including northern Douglas County. Chelan Valley Hope

"envisions a Chelan Valley where all people in need are compassionately and confidentially connected with timely relief and other relevant resources", Gibb said.

Chelan Valley Hope operates out of the Cornerstone Building at 417 South Bradley in Chelan and can be reached at 509-888-2114. Families and individuals in need and those interested in volunteering are encouraged to call.

Their website is at chelanvalleyhope.org where a Donate Button can be found. CVH can also be found on Facebook at Chelan Valley Hope.

The Lake Chelan Lions Club met on July 15, at noon at the Apple Cup Cafe for their weekly meeting. District Governor Joyce Stevens was their guest and installed the new officers. District Governor Joyce acknowledged the club for enrolling nine new members over the past two years. The club was also able to continue with fund raising to assist Senior Citizens at Christmas, sponsor children with diabetics to Camp Stix and offer $2,000 scholarships each to four graduating seniors in Chelan and Manson. Among other programs they support in the Lake Chelan Valley. Awards were given to Mike Tipton and Barbara Korando for co-chairs for the Apple Cup Golf Tournament which was held in May at the Lake Chelan Municipal Golf Course. RIGHT: Awarded Lion of the Year was Shannon Byquist-Freels (left) and Barbara Korando (right). ABOVE: New officers installed were left to right: Chuck Robinson, Board Member; Steve Shumway, Past President; Joyce Stevens, District Governor; Keith Carpenter, newly installed President; Mike Tipton, 1st Vice President; Ann Congdon, 2nd Vice President; Shannon Byquist-Freels Secretary; Barbara Korando, Treasurer; and John Page, Board Member. New Chelan County grant program awards $740,000 to local agencies

BY JILL FITZSIMMONS, CHELAN COUNTY PUBLIC INFORMATION OFFICER

WENATCHEE - The Chelan Board of County Commissioners recently awarded nearly $740,000 in grant funding to local agencies that support economic development in Chelan County.

The Cascade Public Infrastructure Fund, or CPIF, is a grant program that was created earlier this year to help finance public projects that facilitate the creation or retention of businesses and jobs in the county.

The newly established grant program had its first call for projects this spring. Commissioners awarded grants to six agencies: Chelan Douglas Regional Port Authority, Lake Chelan Reclamation District, the Peshastin Water District and the cities of Cashmere, Leavenworth and Wenatchee.

Those projects awarded grant dollars are:

City of Cashmere: The city was awarded $50,000 to help with the extension of water and wastewater services to an undeveloped lot in downtown Cashmere. In 1998, the city purchased the site on Railroad Avenue from Burlington Northern Railroad to provide parking for downtown Cashmere. The site later contained a warehouse for loading tree fruit onto trains; however, it was demolished. Development of the now vacant land in the warehouse-industry business district will provide space and an opportunity for a small business to relocate and expand. Lake Chelan Reclamation District: The reclamation district was awarded $100,000 to use toward planned improvements to its Lift Station No. 2, which provides sewer service to the entire Manson area. The reclamation district also plans to add a pump at the lift station to better service the ongoing population growth in the Manson area.

OBITUARIES

Betty Lutz

Betty Lutz lived nearly all of her amazing life in Central Washington. She passed quietly in the home of her loving daughter on July 21, 2021 at the age of 92.

Betty arrived in Wenatchee from her birthplace in Detroit, Michigan, shortly after her birth on June 15, 1929. It was the trough of the great depression and times were tough. Her mother, fleeing a troubled marriage, brought she and her brother Carlton across the country to reside with relatives in the Wenatchee Valley. In a few years her mother remarried Cleve Cross and the family moved to a farm in the town of Methow where they lived until her school years.

Betty attended and graduated from Wenatchee High School.

After high school she attended Kinman Business University in Spokane, Washington, gaining skills she would use the rest of her life. Shortly after returning to Wenatchee from Kinman she met her future husband Dick Lutz. Together they started a new journey that would carry them over the next 70 years.

Early in her career Betty worked for Wells and Wade Hardware and later the Wenatchee World. From there she took on a demanding role supporting Chester Kimm at the Chelan County Industrial Development Council. On nights and weekends she and her husband began the project of developing orchards in the Wenatchee Valley. Because Dick's job required extensive travel throughout the Northwest, Betty was not only responsible for raising the family, but also managing the orchard operations on a daily basis during Dick's absences. She proved more than capable.

Eventually, juggling the responsibilities of the orchard and those of her growing family became too much so she left her position at the Development Council. Through their marriage Betty and Dick developed apple and cherry orchards in Wenatchee, Chelan and Manson while earning multiple top grower awards from Stemilt and Trout/Blue Chelan. Farming was their passion. Ultimately, Betty managed the finances while Dick ran the farm.

In the 1970's, Betty and Dick purchased property on Lake Chelan. What started with a small 12 ft. trailer for summer camping at "the lake" eventually became their final home. Together, over 20 years, they hand built the house where together they would happily live out the remainder of their lives.

Nothing was more important to Betty and Dick than family. Their Lake Chelan home was always open to their large, extended family that included their children, grandchildren, brothers, sisters, nieces, nephews, cousins and friends. Everyone was welcome. As long as somebody wanted to ski, they were willing to drive their boat. In later years, Betty never missed a school activity, concert, or sports event that involved her grandchildren. She always wanted them to know they were most important in her world.

Betty had a well-earned reputation for her cookies and pies. Her Christmas cookies and peanut brittle are legendary in the family. As you would expect, few people could match the apple and cherry pie prowess prepared by the woman who grew the fruit.

Betty is survived by her daughter Karen Lutz McCutcheon (Don) and her son Steve Lutz (Jan), both of Wenatchee; sister, Nancy Mazna of Lodi, California; brother, Ralph Cross of Tacoma, Washington; granddaughter, Jessica McCutcheon of Los Angeles, California; grandson, Steven McCutcheon of Chicago, Illinois; grandsons, Richard Lutz and Taylor Lutz both of Seattle, Washington; grandson, Parker Lutz of East Wenatchee, as well as many nieces and nephews. She was preceded in death by her loving husband Dick, her mother Nannie Frances Cross, her brothers E. Carlton Highfill, Ivan Cross, Marvin Cross, Bert Cross, Veryl Cross and sisters Martha Olsen and Velma Guffy.

The family would like to express their thanks and sincere appreciation to Hospice, as well as the entire medical team at Confluence Health who worked tirelessly to provide exemplary care for Betty. Special thanks to Dr. Alexandra Graham and long-time physician Dr. David Houghland, who we consider to be among the "best of the best."

Plans for a memorial will be announced at a later time.

American Red Cross Blood Drive: August 18

Those donors who have received the COVID-19 vaccine will be asked which vaccine they received.

MANSON - There will be an American Red Cross Blood drive on Wednesday, August 18, 1-6 p.m. at North Shore Bible Church, 123 Wapato Point Parkway. To donate, simply download the American Red Cross Blood Donor App, visit RedCrossBlood.org, call 1-800-RED CROSS (1-800-733-2767) or enable the Blood Donor Skill on any Alexa Echo device to make an appointment or for more information. All blood types are needed to ensure a reliable supply for patients. A blood donor card or driver's license or two other forms of identification are required at check-in. Individuals who are 17 years of age in most states (16 with parental consent where allowed by state law), weigh at least 110 pounds and are in generally good health may be eligible to donate blood. High school students and other donors 18 years of age and younger also have to meet certain height and weight requirements. Blood and platelet donors can save time at their next donation by using RapidPass® to complete their pre-donation reading and health history questionnaire online, on the day of their donation, before arriving at the blood drive. To get started, follow the instructions at RedCrossBlood.org/RapidPass or use the Blood Donor App.

Back to School Fair: August 22

Volunteers needed

CHELAN - The 7th Annual Lake Chelan Valley Back to School Fair (BTSF) will be taking place on Sunday, August 22 from 1-4 p.m. at Mountain Goat Field parking lot near the Chelan Walmart. The BTSF team plans to distribute 500 backpacks filled with essential school supplies to students (PK-12th Grade) via a drive-thru distribution model. Thrive Chelan Valley is excited to collaborate with our 2021 BTSF sponsors (Coldwell Banker, CVCH Chelan, Dale and Tara Terwedo, North Cascades Bank and RealLife NCW) and our greater community to serve, empower and advocate for local youth, ensuring students have the school supplies they need as they head into another school year. The BTSF has historically been possible due to ongoing community support. Approximately 50 volunteers are needed on the day of the event to help with a variety of duties. Obituary & Memorial Policies

NCW Media, Inc.: Leavenworth Echo, Cashmere Valley Record, Lake Chelan Mirror, Quad City Herald

An Obituary is a way for family member(s) to commemorate a loved one's life and to notify the community of the passing of the loved one. Obituaries are also used for historical and ancestral data.

Memorials are another way to let the community know about the life and memories of the person who has passed. A Memorial is different from an Obituary. An Obituary is usually current, while a Memorial can be written later.

Obituaries and Memorials need to be typed and emailed as a Word Document. They can be placed in one or more papers - all publish weekly on Wednesday.

Obituaries are priced by the number of words and include one color photo and go online at no extra charge. Memorials are priced per column inch. Please call for cost. *Payment is due at the time of placement. *Exception: Chapels, funeral homes who have an account, can be billed. There is no charge for a Death Notice - information is limited.

'Preppers' Quietly Stock Up for the 'Perfect Storm'

ALLAN STEIN

A crippling ice storm that left Travis Maddox and thousands of other Missouri residents without power in 2007 had an “almost apocalyptic feel to it.”

“No one could move. It just shut the whole region down for two weeks. I wasn’t as prepared as I thought,” said Maddox, a burly man of 43, sporting a long black beard, T-shirt, cargo pants, and baseball cap, while tending his garden.

Those two weeks made Maddox realize that being prepared—“prepping,” as it’s called today—was the key to a life of self-reliance and personal freedom.

To me, the ultimate level of prepping is being self-sufficient. You’re still being modern, but you’re in control.

Travis Maddox, prepper

As an Eagle Scout, he never forgot the Boy Scout motto: Be prepared.

“To me, the ultimate level of prepping is being self-sufficient. You’re still being modern, but you’re in control,” Maddox told The Epoch Times on Aug. 5.

In 2009, Maddox launched his YouTube channel, “The Prepared Homestead,” which now has over 32,000 subscribers.

People, he said, are waking up to the worsening reality of supply chain disruptions and food shortages, and rapid political and social changes that all point toward “a perfect storm” just ahead.

The COVID-19 lockdowns and empty store shelves only served to heighten popular sentiment that the “old normal” is gone, he said.

“When the pandemic struck, we started seeing all this panic buying,” Maddox said. “What’s really increased is the number of people that contact me. These are really personal emails. They’re not crazy extremists. These are single moms, elderly people, disabled people, regular working people. They’re realizing that things are changing. They can just feel things are changing rapidly,” he said.

“The riots [of 2020] were bad. The election was bad. Now what’s happening is the whole world is starting to change.”

Talk of a global political and economic “Great Reset” and vaccine passports have done little to diminish anxiety among the unvaccinated that society is about to turn its back on them. And so they and others prepare—with food, water, alternative power sources, survival gear, and plans to leave the city if possible for the relative safety of rural areas.

Along with “The Prepared Homestead,” a host of other YouTube channels cater to seasoned and beginning preppers, including “Magic Prepper” in North Dakota, “Angry Prepper” in New York City, “Alaska Prepper,” “Ice Age Farmer,” and many others.

Maddox said “The Prepared Homestead” began as a way to share basic gardening tips that grew in scope as political and economic circumstances changed.

Now he produces at least six videos per week, touching upon such controversial topics as forced vaccination, firearms confiscation, and “cultural secession”—living apart from the government and its “woke” culture—while using careful language to avoid the YouTube censors.

“A huge portion of our country is saying you’ve gone too far,” Maddox said. “We’re seeing not just a rapid change in politics and policies and the economy, we’re seeing a rapid change in the heart and soul of America.”

While many individual preppers and prepper organizations try to remain anonymous, the number of people preparing appears to be growing. In the last year alone, roughly 45 percent of Americans, or about 116 million people, said they spent money preparing for hard times or spent money stockpiling survival goods, according to Finder.com.

Maddox, however, said there’s a big difference between prepping and “hoarding.”

“Prepping is something most people did all the time” in bygone years. “Our grandparents were preppers. I sus-

Bansemer said that being prepared isn’t about politics—it’s that ‘people just need to eat.’

pect if things continue to worsen, preppers will be made to be the bad guys,” he said.

In the months following the pandemic lockdowns, online stores that serve a growing number of preppers have experienced record-breaking sales and interest in their products.

Keith Bansemer, president of My Patriot Supply in Salt Lake City, said his business has grown exponentially amid widespread fears of a return to COVID-19 lockdowns, empty store shelves, and forced vaccinations that will limit personal freedoms.

“For those that choose not to be vaccinated, the fear is that it’s going to restrict their access to certain things,” Bansemer told The Epoch Times. In a word—food.

“Since mid-July, we have seen a [six-fold] increase in orders and are shipping several thousand orders daily from our centers in Utah, Missouri, and Ohio,” Bansemer said. “Americans are quietly preparing.”

Bansemer said My Patriot Supply has provided over 1 million families in the U.S. with emergency foods, water filtration, and other survival products since the start of the pandemic in March 2020.

“We own and operate three large warehouses covering over 500,000 square feet. We spent the last year adding 10 times the additional capacity to our operations to best serve our customers during times of crisis and emergencies during spikes in orders like we are seeing now,” Bansemer said.

“An increasing number of those new to preparing have placed orders recently. They are primarily purchasing our large food kits that average over 2,000 calories per day and last up to 25 years in storage. The most popular item right now is our 3-Month Emergency Food Kit.”

In the end, he said, being prepared isn’t about politics—it’s that “people just need to eat.”

At South Carolina-based Practical Preppers, a supplier of emergency preparing supplies, President Scott Hunt said COVID is “definitely a driver of increased demand.”

“The social and political divisions are also making people nervous,” he told The Epoch Times.

The Texas ice storm and the Colonial pipeline ransom earlier this year “really caused people everywhere to pursue independence,” he said.

“Electrical independence is very high on everyone’s list. I predict demand will outstrip supply this month or the next. Shipping difficulties play a very large role in this. Port congestion and trucking shortages are contributing to this perfect storm,” Hunt said.

As a seasoned prepper, Maddox said homesteading is the next level preparing for hard times. He lives with his wife and daughter in a family-built house tucked away in the pristine Ozarks with the goal of living off the grid.

The family raises goats, chickens, sheep, turkeys, and grows a variety of fruits and vegetables including squash, corn, and asparagus in a large garden.

American Employers Added 943,000 Jobs in July

TOM OZIMEK

America’s private employers in July added 943,000 jobs—a proxy for new hires—in a sign that the U.S. economy enjoyed a solid burst of job growth as the labor market recovery continues.

The Labor Department’s jobs report, released Aug. 6, shows that nonfarm payroll employment rose by 943,000 in July, topping the 850,000 jobs U.S. employers added in June.

Ahead of the release, economists’ estimates varied widely—from 350,000 to as much as 1.6 million, according to a Reuters review of institutional forecasts.

Driving the uncertainty are the dynamics of the pandemic, particularly the spread of the Delta variant of the CCP virus, which the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC)

The [Biden] administration must reexamine their policies holding the economy back & prioritize getting Americans back to work.

considers more transmissible and potentially more resistant to vaccines.

But while the resurgence in COVID-19 infections poses a risk to economic recovery, there’s no sign yet of any significant impact.

“While the Delta variant has sparked a rise in COVID cases, there’s scant indication this is translating to a measurable reduction in economic activity in the U.S. so far, suggesting little meaningful impact on employment,” Bankrate senior economic analyst Mark Hamrick said in an emailed statement to The Epoch Times.

While economic output has fully bounced back to its pre-pandemic levels, the labor market recovery is trailing. After shedding over 22 million jobs in the first two months of the pandemic, the U.S. economy has since recovered nearly 17 million jobs.

The Labor Department’s jobs report also showed that the unemployment rate dropped by 0.5 percentage points to 5.4 percent in July, while the total number of unemployed persons fell by 782,000 to 8.7 million.

While these measures are down considerably from their highs at the end of the February–April 2020 recession, they remain well above their pre-pandemic levels of 3.5 percent and 5.7 million in February 2020, the Labor Department said.

The brisk economic recovery has also driven down the number of American workers seeking unemployment benefits, which last week fell to a pandemic-era low, although the number remains historically elevated.

Initial filings for unemployment insurance, a proxy for layoffs, came in at 385,000 for the week ending July 31, a drop of 14,000 over the previous week’s revised level, the Labor Department said in a statement on Aug. 5.

While the drop in initial jobless claims reflects the dynamics of a rebounding economy, the number of last week’s filings is nearly twice as high as the pre-pandemic weekly average of around 220,000, suggesting the labor market still has a ways to go in its recovery.

“It was about a year ago when new claims first fell below the

1 million level for the first time after the pandemic began. In total, some 12.9 million Americans continue to receive some form of jobless assistance, which remains historically elevated,” Hamrick said.

Some Republicans and economists have blamed generous unemployment benefits—in particular, the federal pandemic jobless compensation boost—for sidelining workers by discouraging them from taking jobs.

“With jobless claims remaining high, the administration must reexamine their policies holding the economy back & prioritize getting Americans back to work,” Sen. Jim Risch (R-Idaho) said in a statement.

American businesses posted a record 9.2 million job openings in May, faster than applicants are showing up to fill them. In the face of business hiring difficulties, some two dozen states have moved to end early their participation in the extended federal unemployment programs.

NYC Restaurants Taken Aback by News of Vaccine Passport Requirement

PETR SVAB

NEW YORK CITY—Just as New York City restaurateurs thought they would perhaps see their way out of crushing COVID-19 restrictions and back to “normalcy,” the city’s government dealt another blow: Restaurants will now have to check customers for proof of vaccination, or themselves face fines.

In response, restaurant owners seem to have flocked to one of two positions. Some support the rule as long as it prevents more lockdowns, while others reject it as an unreasonable imposition on their already vulnerable operations.

Restaurants have been among the hardest hit by the lockdowns imposed amid the CCP virus pandemic. New York City boasted a flourishing restaurant scene in 2019, with more than 23,000 establishments and more than 300,000 employed, according to a state comptroller report.

The lockdowns slashed employment by about two-thirds in the sector in April 2020. It has been gradually recovering since, in major part depending on federal relief funding and the solidarity of their landlords. December 2020 sales were 50 to 100 percent lower than the year before for most restaurants and bars, according to a survey by the NYC Hospitality Alliance, an industry group. For two in five, sales were 90 to 100 percent lower. If the government stopped supports such as rent subsidies and the eviction ban, nearly half said they’d go out of business. Only 15 percent said they wouldn't. The rest weren't sure.

The vaccine requirement, announced by Mayor Bill de Blasio on Aug. 3, would apply to both staff and customers at restaurants, bars, gyms, and entertainment venues. It may be expanded to other establishments, too, a New York City Department of Health official told The Epoch Times.

Businesses will have to ask customers for their vaccination card issued by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) or vaccination confirmation on the city or state phone app. The rule goes into effect on Aug. 16 and enforcement through inspections will start Sept. 13.

More than a third of New Yorkers haven't received even the first of the two doses of the vaccine, which was developed at record speed last year and rolled out through an emergency authorization before the completion of clinical trials.

It still isn't clear how the NYC requirement will work in practice, head of the alliance Andrew Rigie told The Epoch Times.

“The city announced the policy and over the coming weeks is going to develop the guidelines, so many questions still need to be answered,” he wrote via email. “We will work to inform the guidelines to make them as clear and fair to restaurants as possible.”

Bar and restaurant owners are “very split on the issue,” he said, based on conversations the alliance has had with some of them.

“Some support it, others oppose it. All seem to agree we can't go to harsher restrictions and shutdowns again,” he said.

For Karla Martinez, manager of Chirp restaurant in Manhattan's Garment District, the rule announcement was “confusing.”

“The mayor saying one thing, the governor saying another thing, the CDC saying yet another thing,” she said.

Some people are already irked when asked to put on a mask. Asking for a vaccination card will only exacerbate the situation, she said. “They're going to get angry.”

She wasn't even sure how to enforce the rule, noting that she doesn't have the budget to have a person stand by the door checking people's vaccination papers.

The Peruvian restaurant has been around for three years, barely surviving the lockdowns and still hanging on by a thread.

“It's still rough,” she said. “Every day, it's very uncertain for us. We don't know if tomorrow we're going to be able to open the doors.”

She's hoping the rule won't cost her customers.

“But at this point, we don't know anything,” she said.

Mostafa Zouini, manager at nearby Cafe Aroma, said he would comply with the rule, but that it would make some customers unhappy.

“It's like going back to square one,” he said.

He recalled the backlash he received when the city told establishments to have customers put down their email addresses for contact tracing and even have their temperature checked before getting served.

“They used to get mad and leave,” he said.

Down the street, the manager at the Italian eatery Pomodoro opposed the new rule.

“It's stupid, because it's not our job to police people,” he said, identifying himself only by his last name, Liu.

He said he supports everybody getting vaccinated, but he's not in favor of turning away customers based on that.

“Whether you're not vaccinated or you're vaccinated, you're still my customer,” he said.

He expects businesses will ignore the rule rather than lose customers over it.

“People are not going to follow,” he said, suggesting it's the government's fault so many people aren't getting the shot.

A lack of incentives isn't the core issue holding people back, he said. The problem is that “there's no outreach.” The government should just focus on educating people, in his view.

“Instead, they're forcing these ridiculous laws on us,” he said.

Tennessee's 48-Hour Abortion Wait Period Is Legal, Federal Appeals Court Rules

IVAN PENTCHOUKOV

A federal circuit court on Aug. 5 upheld the constitutionality of a Tennessee law that requires doctors to provide pregnant women seeking an abortion with materials about the safety of the procedure and have them wait two days before performing the procedure.

“Tennessee's 48-hour abortion waiting period is facially constitutional. The law is supported by a rational basis, and it is not a substantial obstacle to abortion for a large fraction of women seeking pre-viability abortions in Tennessee,” Circuit Court Judge Amul Thapar wrote in an opinion.

The decision is the latest development in a decades-long legal saga surrounding the 48-hour rule. The state first enacted the law in 1978, but a federal court blocked it based on a case that predated Planned Parenthood v. Casey, a case in which the Supreme Court upheld a 24-hour waiting period for an abortion.

After Planned Parenthood v. Casey was decided, the Tennessee Supreme Court ruled in 2000 that the law violated the state's constitution. Tennessee voters responded to that decision by amending the state's constitution to specify that it doesn't protect the right to an abortion.

After the state constitution was amended, Tennessee again enacted a 48-hour law, which required doctors to provide pregnant mothers with certain information, including the age of the child, alternatives to abortion, and the medical risks of abortion and pregnancy. The law included an exception for medical emergencies.

A group of abortion providers sued but didn't request for the law to be suspended. The statute went into effect in 2015 and remained in force for five years. The plaintiffs alleged that the law was unconstitutional and imposed a burden on mothers seeking abortions.

Thapar noted that while the law was in effect, the level of abortions remained the same in the state, with about 10,000 unborn children aborted every year after the law was passed.

Last year, a district court held a trial and concurred with the plaintiffs, finding that the law was unconstitutional because it imposed an undue burden on women seeking abortions.

Judge Karen Nelson Moore was the only member of the 16 judges on the circuit to dissent with the Aug. 5 decision.

“An honest look at the record compels but one conclusion: a law that peddles in stigma, forces women into unnecessary and invasive surgical procedures, and forces low-income women to sacrifice basic necessities for themselves and their families in order to obtain an abortion is nothing if not an undue burden,” Moore wrote. “I dissent.”

Los Angeles City Council Proposes COVID-19 Vaccination Passports for Restaurants, Theaters

JACK PHILLIPS

Los Angeles City Council members introduced a measure on Aug. 4 that seeks to require people to show proof that they've had a COVID-19 vaccine to enter some indoor public spaces, including theaters and restaurants, following a similar mandate announced by New York City earlier this week.

In an announcement on Twitter, City Council President Nury Martinez wrote that “many Angelenos stepped up and did their part,” and “they shouldn't be penalized with closures by those unwilling to do theirs.”

The legislation would direct the city attorney to draft an ordinance requiring people aged 16 and older to have received at least one vaccine dose to gain access to indoor public spaces.

The indoor spaces include but are “not limited to restaurants, bars, retail establishments, fitness centers, spas, and entertainment centers, such as stadiums, concert venues, and movie theaters,” the text of the measure said.

Martinez, a Democrat, issued a statement alongside the proposal and effectively blamed people who aren't vaccinated for exacerbating the COVID-19 pandemic. He, along with most other officials, made no mention of “natural immunity” among people who contracted and survived COVID-19.

“We have three vaccines that

City Council President Nury Martinez has blamed people who aren't vaccinated for exacerbating the COVID-19 pandemic.

work and are readily available, so what's it going to take? Our kids are about to return to school, and the unvaccinated are putting their lives at risk every day. Ask your questions, talk to your doctor and get the vaccine. Let's put this behind us,” he said.

New York Mayor Bill de Blasio announced earlier this week that the city would roll out vaccine mandates for gyms, restaurants, theaters, and other venues starting in mid-September. It isn't clear yet how that will be enforced in the thousands and thousands of restaurants and cafes around New York City.

Some restaurant owners in New York City told local media that for them, it would be virtually impossible to enforce such a mandate.

Seongmin Jun, the manager of Dear Han Cafe in Queens, asked: “Will customers get offended for checking if they got COVID vaccinations? I mean I don't know how to do that, or even if I will have time to do that.”

And such a system and other vaccine passport-type systems have been flagged by civil liberties groups as being authoritarian and would create a segregated society. The American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU) earlier this year wrote there “is a lot that can go wrong” with vaccine passport systems.

“We don't oppose in principle the idea of requiring proof of vaccination in certain contexts. But given the enormous difficulty of creating a digital passport system, and the compromises and failures that are likely to happen along the way, we are wary about the side effects and long-term consequences it could have. We will be closely watching developments in this area,” the ACLU said.

Even some Democrat officials have rebuffed calls for vaccine passport mandates, including Boston Acting Mayor Kim Janey, who this week compared vaccine passports in New York City to slavery-era freedom papers and Jim Crow laws.

“There's a long history in this country of people needing to show their papers,” Janey told local media. The mayor then listed examples “during slavery, post-slavery, as recent as ... what [the] immigrant population has to go through here.”

“Here, we want to make sure that we are not doing anything that would further create a barrier for residents of Boston or disproportionately impact” minority groups, she added.
