One injured in apartment fire flown to Harborview

SUBMITTED BY CHELAN FIRE & RESCUE CHIEF MARK DONNELL

CHELAN - On Saturday, June 11 at 11:10 p.m., crews from Chelan Fire & Rescue were dispatched to a reported structure fire at an apartment complex located at 509 E. Gibson Avenue. First arriving crew reported heavy smoke coming from front of the lower level apartment and quickly made entry. Crews encountered heavy smoke and heat and were able to quickly extinguish the fire.

The entry crew then initiated a search of the premise and located a patient inside the back bedroom. The patient was brought outside to EMS personnel who initiated patient care and transport to Lake Chelan Hospital. The patient was subsequently airlifted to Harborview Medical Center where her condition is unknown at this time.

Second alarm resources from Manson, Entiat, Orondo, and Wenatchee were called due to the size of the apartment complex and the possibility of fire extension beyond the unit involved. Crews on scene were able to contain the fire to the single unit which sustained considerable heat and smoke damage. The cause of this fire is still under investigation.

The ability to have three firefighters on the initial response to this fire made the difference in rescuing the patient and keeping the fire loss contained to the unit of origin.

Crews encountered heavy smoke and heat and were able to quickly extinguish the fire in an apartment at the Lake Chelan Community Apartments late Saturday evening, June 11. LETTER TO THE EDITOR

To the Publisher

The June 2 edition of the Echo is much appreciated. Thank you. This issue is what a community needs and wants in a hometown newspaper: good writing, a focus on local and regional news, an events calendar, and recognition of citizens of our community. The focus on our fine Cascade High School graduates is especially important and appreciated.

What we don't need or appreciate are divisive, fact-free editorials, speculative columns, and the Epoch Times, which filled the majority of pages in the past two issues of the Echo. The Epoch Times is a far right-wing multinational publication that, according to the New York Times, is a "global-scale misinformation machine," and one of Donald Trump's favorite promoters. This publication is rapidly spreading across our country and the world, from flyers handed out at Trump rallies to distribution in state capitols, universities, and local newspapers such as the Leavenworth Echo.

Please give our community more issues like the June 2 edition. Be a force to bring our community together, not an instrument to divide us.

Why I added some national news

BY BILL FORHAN, PUBLISHER

Bill Forhan

I am sure you have noticed by now that I have added some national news coverage to the pages of my weekly newspapers. Since I added the 2 pages of material from The Epoch Times, I have received a total of seven comments from subscribers. Those comments are split evenly with three supporting the move and four opposing it. Two have threatened to cancel their subscriptions if I continue. I have only received one letter to the editor. You can read it in the letters section.

Last week I pulled the two pages in a few of my newspapers because coverage of our high school graduations and a surge in advertising required more space than we had planned for on Friday before the Memorial Day Holiday and because of the holiday it was too late to change the press order.

So, the big question is why did I decide to include this coverage and why did I choose to use The Epoch Times? Those are fair questions.

I have been in the newspaper business now for 41 years.

It has gone through tremendous change over that time. Some good, but much not so good. My biggest concern is the consolidation of the news industry into the hands of corporations - large corporations. Over the last 30 years there has been a growing consolidation of family owned newspapers into the hands of a small group of publicly owned chains that are much more concerned about the price of their stock than the depth and quality of their news coverage. I began my newspaper career as a low level executive in one of those chains - LEE Enterprises, Inc. They were one of the better chains. After 11 years, I left their employ to work for a family owned newspaper in Southern California. In short, during my 41 years in this business I have seen the deterioration of newspapers across the industry.

Nearly 21 years ago I bought three struggling weekly newspapers right here in North Central Washington. My wife and I have worked hard to build them into viable local newspapers that focus on news that is most important to the communities we serve - local news.

Major newspapers across the country have been forced to cut back editions and pages as advertising revenues have dwindled because of competition from the Internet. As a result, their "news holes" have dwindled mightily and staff is continually reduced. The inevitable result is a decline in complete news coverage - what the industry now calls a growing news desert.

To make matters worse, today in this country there remains only one national news syndicate - the Associated Press. The AP collects and distributes news stories from around the country to its member news organizations. The result is that whether it is intentional or accidental the news that gets published in most larger newspapers is the same. It is filtered by journalistic competition if not outright political favoritism and tends to be the same wherever you find it.

Now I am sure that those who are reading this are asking, but what about TV, radio and the Internet? It is a fair question. I watch TV. I listen to the radio but I utilize those media differently because at heart I am a newspaper guy. The first thing I would say is TV and radio both have the same limitation - time. That limitation causes them to choose the stories they cover based on what's "breaking." More importantly, they often do not have all of the important facts and usually dismiss the background because there is just not "time" to cover the issues in depth. The other problem is they choose what are the most important stories to cover. You can't skip over the headlines to pick the ones you find most important to you.

The Internet is a completely different animal. You can search for any topic you would like to know more about - great! The problem is it is the wild, wild world of the Internet. There are credible sources but there are also all kinds of propaganda, rumor and dis-information. The Internet is not subject to the same rules of libel and slander that traditional media are bound to observe. You get to sort it out for yourself. And of course, every time you log on to a topic you can bet that someone is tracking what you read or watch.

All of this brings me back to why did I add national news. Clearly, I do not have the staff or financial resources needed to cover national news events and single handedly take on the task of trying to fix the news desert problem. But 40 years in this business has taught me there are a lot of ways newspapers could change the way they do business in order to address issues like a growing "news desert."

There are far more small towns with weekly newspapers than there are larger metro newspapers. So, I began thinking about what if those weeklies started running some quality national news. I contacted AP but the issue is I would be running essentially the same content that all of the other AP newspapers ran - at a significant increase in my cost of operations.

Then I called Epoch Times. I have been reading their stories for some time. I found their stories were well written and much more objective than most of what I read in other mainstream newspapers in this country.

I asked them if they would be interested in an experiment. What I proposed is that each week they would provide me with two complete pages of national news to run in my weekly newspapers. They could use my newspapers as a way to promote the distribution of their news to small newspapers around the country. I pay nothing for the service while they work to see if they can develop the program into a syndicated product they can sell. They loved the idea and agreed. So, each week they send me two pages formatted for our newspapers.

I have agreed to test this model for one year. That will give them time to see if it works for them and for me to test my readers interest in the additional content.

Newspapers are not produced to satisfy the interests of any single subscriber. There is always content that an individual subscriber will find offensive. They always have the option to ignore those sections. My focus will continue to be to produce a quality local newspaper that informs our communities on important local issues.

Adding this new content only costs me more for printing extra pages. I plan to continue to test this until next May. I am open to your feedback.

St. Andrew's Outreach Committee spreads aid to storm-ravaged Mississippi

Christian generosity is shown to namesake parish

BY TERRY LABRUE, APR, LABRUE COMMUNICATIONS

CHELAN - In a chance viewing of a recent cable news broadcast, St. Andrew's Episcopal Church outreach committee members, Kathy Nierenberg, Susan Fischer and Judy Ramos, were riveted by the devastation they witnessed in Jackson, Mississippi.

The former nurses and ex-officio member Marci Hale were simultaneously moved to add a church in the Deep South to a possible short list of large- and small-picture picture relief projects under consideration by the committee.

The Mississippi region has been slammed by severe hurricanes, tornados earlier this month, a failed municipal fresh-water system and of course the Covid-19 pandemic. It is estimated that nearly half of Jackson's residents are without fresh water causing a dramatic public-health crisis.

"We at St. Andrew's have long supported assistance movements in locations around the world," said The Rev. Linda Mayer. "This time, it seems appropriate to focus on Episcopalians closer to home, even if they are clear across the country."

The area has also been long troubled by widespread unemployment, poverty, and a lack of infrastructure investment. Committee member Judy

Ramos said "I watched the TV program and immediately thought 'What can we at St. Andrew's do? This is just so awful.'"

Ms. Nierenberg then went online and discovered that St. Andrew's Episcopal Cathedral in Jackson, the state capital, is operating a vital food bank to assist those who are affected by the natural and man-made disasters. "I took it as a sign that both the cathedral and our Chelan parish are sharing the same name and mission. Plus, we've both been serving our individual church communities for more than 110 years," Ms. Nierenberg said.

In a multi-pronged effort, the St. Andrew's committee contacted the cathedral and learned of the dire need within the church families and its neighbors. Then, the group met and quickly decided to lend a financial hand to the Mississippi food program.

Practically overnight after announcing the fund-raising effort, the parishioners at St.

Andrew's collected more than $1,000 to send off to their namesake, historic church. Ms. Ramos reported that many human efforts and contributors made the financial gift possible.

Additional tax-deductible contributions for the St. Andrew's Cathedral Food Bank can be made by sending a check addressed to: St. Andrew's Parish, P.O. Box 1226 Chelan, WA 98816.

St. Andrew's Church, built more than 110 years ago, is the oldest permanent structure in Chelan. The church became the centerpiece around which the community grew to eventually become a city. Now on the National Register of Historic Places, the venerable log church attracts many visitors and its quarter-hour chimes are an integral part of Downtown life. The public is welcome at Sunday services held at 10 a.m.

The church is located at 120 E. Woodin Avenue, Telephone: (509) 682-2851, email: main-box@standrews-chelan.org

Brush fire burns six acres

BY CHIEF JIM OATEY, DOUGLAS COUNTY FIRE DISTRICT NO.4

ORONDO - Just after 2:20 p.m. Sunday afternoon, June 6 Rivercom dispatch received report of a wildfire off Greens Canyon Road in Orondo four miles south of the Beebe Bridge. On arrival Orondo Fire Department found a one-acre fire quickly spreading up the steep hillsides of the Columbia River.

A second alarm was struck with 18 fire apparatus and 56 firefighters from agencies in Douglas, Chelan and Okanogan Counties as well as the DNR and BLM.

Steep terrain, dry grass and strong winds caused the fire to spread quickly up and across the hillside. The fire was too remote to use firehose from engines. Firefighters using hand tools for direct fire attack were able to use geographic rock screens and took advantage of some light showers to corral to fire. The fire was contained at 6-acres.

There were no injuries. The cause of the fire was a spark from target shooting. The shooters immediately reported the fire attempted to put the fire out.

Anna Georgia McCullough

Anna Georgia McCullough, 76, left us June 6, 2021 after bravely fighting cancer for one and a half years. Anna was born in Tonasket on March 24, 1945 to Woodrow and Bessie (Cline) Bailey. She married Clyde Ray McCullough on March 24, 1965, her birthday, in Bridgeport. They had three sons: Clyde Jr, Darren, and Chris. Clyde and Anna have lived in Chelan Falls for about 30 years.

Anna was retired from the Postal Service where she worked for 27 years at the Chelan Falls Post Office where she was Postmaster for the last 20 years.

Anna enjoyed sewing and quilting, reading, travelling, cake baking and cooking. Another of her passions was working at the Chelan Rustlers Saddle Club and Rodeo Grounds where she and Clyde did caretaking on the grounds and helped with events for many, years. They also cared for many horses when their owners needed help. She would love on every horse, pony or mule, give them treats, help feed and water and above all, cleaned corrals while dressed to the hilt in color coordinated outfits, always wearing color matching flip flops, and jewelry that totally matched her outfit; earrings, bracelets, and necklaces. Her hair was always done perfectly. She was the best dressed horse caregiver that has ever been and the horses loved her. This was Anna.

Anna was quite the cook and always prepared foods for the Saddle Club picnics and also for events at the Manson American Legion where Clyde is the commander. She would also make festive decorations for the events.

Anna is survived by her husband, Clyde Ray McCullough, son Clyde Junior of Chelan Falls, son Darren (wife Kim) of California, son Chris (wife Jessica) of Lake

Stevens. She also leaves her sister, Leah Thomas of Selah, sister Gwen Johnson of Bridgeport, brother Neil McKee of Bridgeport, and brother Eugene McKee of Omak. Anna leaves three granddaughters in Lake Stevens, Sophia, Olivia, and Caroline.

Anna wanted to remember her two close friends; Shirly Hammerquist of Chelan Falls and Suzanne Newby of Manson and all her close friends at the Saddle Club, all whom she would have done anything for. She will be lovingly missed by all.

Graveside service for Anna will be June 25, 2021 at 1 p.m. at Chelan Fraternal Cemetery, 815 N. Bradley St., Chelan. A Celebration of Life will be at the Chelan Rustlers Saddle Club immediately after, which is right next door.

Tributes may be as flowers, assistance with funeral expenses all directed to Precht Rose Chapel of Chelan, or a remembrance donation in Anna's name may be made to the Chelan Rustler's Junior Rodeo as well, a 501 (c4) non-profit.

Elwyn Doyle Morrison

Elwyn Doyle Morrison passed away peacefully in his home in Bonney Lake, Washington on Monday, May 24 2021; a determined fighter to the end.

He left behind his wife Michelle, daughter Sandra, son-in-law Jay, son Leonard, daughter-in-law Katherine, and his five grandchildren.

Known by many as "Muggs" or "Al", Elwyn was born to Vera DeKay Morrison and Leonard Morrison in Chelan County, Washington on January 31, 1939. He spent his childhood and young adult years in Manson, Washington alongside his brothers Robert, Willard, Eugene, Kenneth and sister, Karen, and later their many kids whom he called nieces and nephews. There he met his wife of 55 years, Michelle Russell Morrison, whom he married on October 16, 1965.

Following his many years in Manson, Elwyn and his wife moved to Kirkland, Washington, where Elwyn began working as a Journeyman Power Lineman. He amassed an impressive 55 years in the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers Union, belonging to both Puget Sound Energy and Potelco Inc. In October of 2013, Elwyn and his wife moved to Bonney Lake, Washington.

His most frequent visitors consisted of his grandchildren: Zachary Lewandowski, Hannah Lewandowski, Nicholas Lewandowski, Liam Morrison, and Logan Morrison.

Elwyn spent his days devoted to his trade, his family, tending to his garden, trying to catch big fish, coaching a variety of sports, harassing countless umpires, and singing along to various Blake Shelton tunes. Elwyn will be dearly missed by his wife, children, grandchildren, IBEW brothers and sisters, and so many more friends and family members.

Due to the fact that Elwyn spent his most fond years in Kirkland at the Lee Johnson baseball field and Everest field, cheering from the stands and coaching on the field, we would like to construct two park benches to continue his remembrance for years to come. If you would like to make a donation, please venmo Michelle Morrison @ NanaMorrison. We will also be celebrating Elwyn's life on July 10 and will be taking donations there as well.

CHELAN GIRLS BASKETBALL

By Coach Nick Longmire,
Chelan Girls Basketball

*Chelan Girls Varsity vs
Brewster - June 10
Chelan 57-Brewster 27*

CHELAN - The Chelan Goats came out of the shoot a little flat to start the game. One of our biggest battles we have been working on is how to play at an intensity level that is Chelan Girls Basketball rather than playing down to or up to the level of our opponents. We didn't do that well in the first half. We have also had several games where we haven't finished offensively like we have wanted.

Last Saturday (June 5) against Omak it was from the free throw line as we missed 18 in the second half alone. Tonight against Brewster it was a lack of finishing point blank lay ups as we missed 12 uncontested in the first half.

Finally in the second half we played a little better as a team. Its nice that we have many different athletes that can score so we can typically find someone who can put the ball in the hoop.

Tonight Senior Booh Huddleston finished with 14 points which included 4 beyond the perimeter. Senior, Katie Rainville finished with 12 with 10 of those coming in the second half. Kira Sandoval added 11 and Aliyah Finch with 9. Morgyn Harrison 5, Beau Nordby, 4 and Hayley Watson 2.

Final score Chelan-57 Brewster-27

THE WASHINGTON OUTDOOR REPORT

Oh Shad

By John Kruse, The Washington Outdoors Report

It's primetime for shad fishing on the Columbia River! This year's run is about a third less in size so far than the mammoth runs we've seen in recent years but with 40,000 plus shad crossing Bonneville Dam on June 2nd alone, the big push is definitely on and should continue into July.

The American shad is historically a popular food fish along the east coast and was introduced into California's Sacramento River in 1871. Within five years shad, which look like overgrown herring weighing anywhere from one to five pounds, began showing up in the Columbia River. Today, shad numbers in the Columbia have exploded. The ten-year average run is over three million fish and last year some six million shad came back to the Columbia River to spawn.

Shad are scrappy fighters and ready biters, and it's not uncommon to catch a couple dozen in a morning of fishing. Because of their fighting quality and relatively large size compared to trout and panfish, shad fishing can be a whole bunch of fun for kids and young at heart anglers who just like to tussle with a bunch of fish.

There are several places to cast for shad on the Columbia. During the month of May some anglers will fish off the docks at Washougal. In June and July, the river just below John Day Dam near Rufus is a great place to catch shad. However, the best (and most popular) place to get into a bunch of shad is just below Bonneville Dam. Hundreds of anglers congregate here every morning when the shad are running and the action can be fast and furious with multiple anglers hooking into shad at once.

The nice thing about shad fishing is that you can easily catch them from shore. The standard rig is to attach a sinker to a swivel or above the swivel. Depending on the current a ¼ to ¾ ounce weight will work fine. Then tie three feet of leader below the swivel and attach your lure. The most common offering is a shad dart, a uniquely shaped jig head above a hook. 1/16th ounce or 1/8th ounce jigs work best. No bait is necessary and neither are trailers. The jig head color does matter though. White and red, green and chartreuse or white and green are all effective color schemes. These darts can usually be bought in sporting goods stores or bait shops along the Columbia River. Other lures to try are Shad Killers, available at Gorge Outfitters Supply in Rufus, Oregon by the John Day Dam or Shad Slammers, from Mack's Lure.

Once you are rigged up simply cast out slightly upstream and reel slowly keeping your jig off the bottom. Often the bite will come just as the line starts swinging towards shore. If you don't get a bite, real in rapidly once the jig is directly downstream and cast again.

Quite often the shad will surge forward upstream in schools and you'll see anglers begin to hook up downstream from you. Be sure to get your line in the water in a hurry because they'll soon be swimming past you!

If you are going to fish from a boat you can launch from Beacon Rock State Park to try for the shad below Bonneville Dam or from Giles French Park on the Oregon side of the Columbia River below John Day Dam.

Marc Bush, the owner of Twisted Waters Guide Service, catches shad out of the boat by rigging up an 18-inch dropper to a Brad's Wiggler Crankbait, then tying 30 inches of leader behind that where a small Dick Nite spoon entices the shad to bite. As for where to fish, Bush recommends motoring over to the Oregon side of the river below Bonneville Dam by the Shad Rack or just look for where the boats are congregated and the anglers are reeling in the fish and you'll be in the right place.

Then there is the question of what to do with these fish. They are oily; really, really, oily, but some people do keep them to eat. Others harvest shad for sturgeon bait while still others, myself included, keep a dozen or so for crab bait. Whether you keep them or just catch and release them though you'll likely be in for a fun-filled and exciting day of fishing and catching on the Columbia River from now until mid-July!

Illegal Border Crossings Keep Climbing; 180,000 Apprehended in May

CHARLOTTE CUTHBERTSON

Customs and Border Protection (CBP) apprehended 180,034 individuals illegally entering the United States in May, the highest number seen in a single month in 21 years.

The agency said the majority, more than 112,000, were expelled under the Title 42 emergency health provision.

Former President Donald Trump implemented Title 42 in March 2020, which effectively closed the border to nonessential travel in an attempt to mitigate the spread of COVID-19.

It allowed for Border Patrol to turn back illegal border-crossers almost immediately, rather than for them to be placed in Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) custody for a more protracted process through deportation proceedings under Title 8.

The Biden administration has already exempted unaccompanied children and many family units from Title 42, whereas single adults from Spanish-speaking nations are almost all still subject to immediate expulsion, according to Troy Miller, acting commissioner for CBP. But Border Patrol is also encountering more illegal aliens from non-Spanish speaking nations, Brazil and Haiti in particular, which Miller suggested aren't being expelled.

The number of unaccompanied minors and individuals within family units dropped in May compared to April, but still made up more than 33,000 apprehensions.

Most of these individuals are released into the interior of the United States with a notice to report, meaning the individual is obliged to report to a local ICE office once settled, or a notice to appear, meaning the individual is given a date to appear in immigration court.

The Title 42 restrictions have triggered a higher than normal recidivism rate of illegal crossings as single adults repeatedly attempt to cross and evade capture, according to CBP.

During the month of May, 38 percent of Border Patrol apprehensions were individuals who had at least one prior encounter in the previous 12 months. The average one-year re-encounter rate during the previous five years was roughly 15 percent, CBP said.

In addition, Border Patrol detected, but didn't capture, more than 51,000 illegal border-crossers in May, according to statistics obtained by The Epoch Times.

The Biden administration is under pressure to end the Title 42 restrictions and has hinted it would do so. However, the head of ICE has said its removal is his biggest concern.

"Title 42 is absolutely critical," ICE Acting Director Tae Johnson said during a congressional hearing on May

13. "I don't think it's a situation where it's going to just be lifted electively—we will be mandated, through some sort of court order, to lift it."

Once Title 42 is revoked, the 3,500 to 3,800 single adults that Border Patrol is currently arresting on a daily basis will have to be processed by ICE.

At the same time, ICE has less capacity than it did during the previous border surge in 2019. ICE had approximately 55,000 detention beds in 2019. However, their capacity was reduced to 30,000 beds in the fiscal 2021 appropriations package—enough beds for less than two weeks at the current rates of alien arrivals.

Vice President Kamala Harris is currently traveling to Mexico and Guatemala on a trip that the Biden administration said was to discuss the "root causes" of the vast numbers of illegal immigrants entering the United States from that region.

"We have, and it is a legitimate correct conversation and concern, which is to address what is happening at our America's southern border, and no question about that. We cannot have that question and have that conversation without also giving equal weight and attention to what is causing that to occur," Harris said while in Guatemala on June 8.

Pressed on why she hasn't yet visited the U.S. southern border, Harris said she plans to visit the border "at some point."

Guatemalan President Alejandro Giammattei said in an interview with CBS on June 6, before Harris's visit, that he would like to see the United States impose stronger penalties on human smugglers.

Florida Board of Education Votes to Ban Critical Race Theory in Public Schools

JACK PHILLIPS

Florida's state school board on Thursday voted to ban the teaching of critical race theory in public schools amid a push from Republican Gov. Ron DeSantis to eliminate the ideology from its classrooms.

During a meeting before the State Board of Education's vote, some opponents of critical race theory said it is Marxist and should be blocked.

"We all know it's a Marxist tactic to divide our country by class and by race," said Bennett Brown, a Duval County resident and board member of the Florida Family Policy Council.

Brown said that teachers should instead teach "the truth and that the United States of America is a great and wonderful land with freedom for all."

"Telling my child that they are in a permanent oppressed status is racist," critical race theory critic Quisha King of Moms for Liberty in Jacksonville said during the meeting.

Opponents of the Board's decision said during the meeting that DeSantis and Republicans are attempting to prevent schools from using critical race theory as part of a political strategy to gain votes.

"It's an effort to whitewash, cover up and candy-coat history," said Ben Frazier, president of the Northside Coalition of Jacksonville. "Allow teachers to speak the truth."

The Florida Teacher's Union president, Andrew Spar, also said he didn't favor the move. Spar alleged that the change was not necessary because Florida teachers don't use critical race theory in their curriculum.

But DeSantis countered Spar in the meeting with three examples of what he described as "attempts to teach [critical race theory] in Florida," including one in Jacksonville, where the meeting was held.

After the Board's decision, DeSantis hailed the move.

"Florida's education system exists to create opportunity for our children. Critical Race Theory teaches kids to hate our country and to hate each other. It is state-sanctioned racism and has no place in Florida schools," he wrote on Twitter.

DeSantis also spoke to the meeting, saying that he doesn't want children to not learn about the civil rights movement or slavery, but noted that some critical race theory proponents "look back and denigrate the Founding Fathers, denigrate the American Revolution." He appeared to be citing claims made by the New York Times' controversial "1619 Project," which has been panned by historians as having false information.

Jacob Oliva, the head for K-12 education at the Florida Department of Education, said that the move to ban critical race theory is to ensure that teachers follow state academic standards.

"It's important for us, or even imperative, to teach students how to think, not specifically what to think," said Oliva.

House GOP: Facebook's Zuckerberg Needs to Surrender Communications With Fauci Over COVID-19

JACK PHILLIPS

House Republicans sent a letter to Facebook CEO Mark Zuckerberg asking that he surrender any communications the social media giant has had with Dr. Anthony Fauci and other federal officials regarding the COVID-19 pandemic.

Reps. Jim Jordan (R-Ohio) and James Comer (R-Ky.) cited recently released emails from Fauci, head of the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases (NIAID), that suggested Zuckerberg personally "communicated with [Fauci] about the COVID-19 pandemic."

"In light of Facebook's subsequent censorship of certain COVID-19 content—including content about the pandemic's origin—these communications with Dr. Fauci raise the prospect that the federal government induced Facebook to censor certain speech in violation of the First Amendment," they wrote.

Over the past year amid the pandemic, Facebook has moved to block content suggesting that the CCP virus, also known as the novel coronavirus, may have originated from the Wuhan Institute of Virology.

Jordan's and Comer's letter further stipulated that Facebook hand over "all documents and communications between or among Facebook employees and U.S. government employees," which includes Fauci, regarding the virus, treatment, and its origins. Documents regarding Facebook's policies about COVID-19 content moderation should also be surrendered, the representatives wrote.

"It also appears that you shared some of Facebook's confidential trade or commercial secrets with Dr. Fauci, as portions of your email exchange with Dr. Fauci were redacted when made publicly available," their letter stated.

Zuckerberg had sent a personal email to Fauci on March 15, 2020, in which the Facebook CEO wrote, "This isn't public yet, but we're building a coronavirus information hub that we're going to put at the top of Facebook for everyone to see" to "make sure that people can get authoritative information" and "practice social distancing." The email also asked Fauci to do a question-and-answer session for Facebook, among other requests.

Another mid-March 2020 email, titled "Offer from Mark Zuckerberg," included Fauci's response after Zuckerberg asked him to "do videos" on the pandemic. Fauci responded by saying, "I will write or call Mark to tell him I am interested in doing this."

In recent weeks, Fauci, who has given hundreds of interviews to news outlets since the pandemic started early last year, has faced significant criticism from Republicans and former White House officials, who said he gave misleading information—or that he lied—about the hypotheses of the CCP virus's origin.

EcoHealth Alliance's Peter Daszak wrote in an email to Fauci on April 19, 2020, "I just wanted to say a personal thank you on behalf of our staff and collaborators, for publicly standing up and stating that the scientific evidence supports a natural origin for COVID-19 from a bat-to-human spillover, not a lab release from the Wuhan Institute of Virology."

Daszak, a staunch opponent of the theory that the virus escaped the Wuhan lab, also told the NIAID chief, "Your comments are brave, and coming from your trusted voice, will help dispel the myths being spun around the virus's origins."

Fauci responded by writing: "Many thanks for your kind note." According to the email trove that was published, Fauci a day before had told George Gao, head of China's CDC: "We will get through this together. Thank you for your kind note. All is well despite some crazy people in this world."

In a series of media interviews this month, Fauci said the emails have been "taken out of context" and defended grants worth hundreds of thousands of dollars being given to the Wuhan Institute of Virology.

"The Wuhan lab is a very large lab, to the tune of hundreds of millions if not billions of dollars—the grant that we're talking about was $600,000 over five years," Fauci told NewsNow last week.

But on June 9 during an MSNBC interview, Fauci went a step further following recent criticism from GOP lawmakers, who called on him to step down from the NIAID position he's held since 1984.

"If you're trying to get at me as a public health official and scientist, you're not only attacking Dr. Anthony Fauci, you're attacking science," he said.

Facebook and NIAID haven't returned requests for comment.

Prices Rise at Fastest Pace in Years, Fueling More Inflation Fears

WASHINGTON—U.S. inflation in May rose 5 percent from a year ago, recording the biggest annual spike since 2008 as supply bottlenecks and surging household demand continue to push prices higher.

While transitory factors continue to lift prices, the economy sees more signs of continuing inflationary pressures, according to analysts, which may point to persistently high inflation.

The Labor Department announced that the consumer price index increased 0.6 percent in May on a monthly basis, just above the consensus forecast of 0.5 percent.

The rise in used car prices accounted for about a third of the increase in overall inflation. Prices for used cars and trucks jumped 7.3 percent in May, following a 10 percent increase in April, as global semiconductor shortages continue to affect new car production. This put “used car prices up at more than a 170 percent annualized pace over the past two months,” according to Morgan Stanley.

Airfares were also up 7 percent, and rental car prices jumped another 12 percent last month.

Food prices rose 0.4 percent and energy prices remained flat in May. Analysts, however, expect a further increase in food prices in the coming months.

Core inflation, which excludes the volatile food and energy components, is up 3.8 percent over the past year—the largest gain in 28 years.

The sharp jump in the year-over-year inflation number is partially due to the base effect, as the pandemic lockdowns and the plunging economy caused weak consumer inflation a year ago. The base effect is expected to level off in June.

In March, the central bank raised its inflation projection for 2021 to 2.4 percent, up from the 1.8 percent projected earlier. Fed officials have repeatedly said price increases are “transitory,” with the expectation that inflation will eventually return to the central bank’s 2 percent target.

Recent inflation data, however, may require the Fed to revisit its inflation forecasts.

“The outsized gains in a few select sectors support the Fed’s view that the current degree of price pressures is temporary,” Sarah House, senior economist at Wells Fargo Securities, wrote in a report. “However, we see signs of inflationary pressures broadening out, which we believe will keep monthly price gains from merely falling back to their pre-pandemic trend after the current flurry of activity.”

Restaurants and groceries have started to raise their prices as they face increasing food and labor costs. Agricultural commodity prices surged about 60 percent over the past year, reaching a decade high, according to Wells Fargo. And average hourly earnings at restaurants have increased 24.4 percent at an annualized rate in the past three months, as business owners scramble to fill open job positions.

Ellen Zentner, chief U.S. economist at Morgan Stanley, said persistent inflationary pressure could be greater than expected this year.

“What was most notable in this report is that while transitory factors did a lot of the heavy lifting driving the May upside, the more persistent components like rents and OER [owner’s equivalent rent] firmed up as well much more than expected,” she wrote in a report.

OER, which is used to estimate shelter cost (a monthly rent that would be equivalent to the monthly expenses of owning a house), rose 0.31 percent in May, the largest increase since June 2019. And rents increased 0.24 percent, the largest since March 2020, according to Morgan Stanley.

“I think it’s going to be more persistent than transitory,” Joseph Carson, a former Alliance Bernstein and Commerce Department economist, told NTD Business.

“You have a lot of factors pushing it up, like monetary policy, fiscal policy, pent up demand, worker shortage, wage increases.”

Carson also noted that the current business cycle is “quite unusual.” Unlike previous recessions, unique features of this recovery cycle include low inventory levels and wage inflation, which are driving prices higher.

I think [inflation] is going to be more persistent than transitory.

Joseph Carson, former chief economist, Alliance Bernstein

One of the world’s largest consumer goods corporations, Procter & Gamble, announced that it would raise prices for its baby, feminine, and adult care products.

David Taylor, CEO of Procter & Gamble, said at a virtual conference hosted by Fortune that inflation is “inevitable.”

“Yes, it is very real. We are seeing it across a number of products. It’s pulp, it’s paper, it’s anything involving oil. Plastic packaging is going up. Trucking costs have gone up significantly. Ocean freight has gone up significantly. You are seeing it in a wide range of cost areas.”

Biden Administration Tells Federal Agencies Not to Require Employees to Get a COVID-19 Vaccine

ZACHARY STIEBER

The Biden administration said this week that federal agencies generally shouldn’t force their employees to get a COVID-19 vaccine as a precondition for working in person.

“The Administration strongly encourages all Americans, including Federal employees and contractors, to be vaccinated,” the Safer Federal Workforce task force said in a new posting. “Employees should receive paid time off to be vaccinated and to deal with any side effects. At present, COVID-19 vaccination should generally not be a pre-condition for employees or contractors at executive departments and agencies (agencies) to work in-person in Federal buildings, on Federal lands, and in other settings as required by their job duties.

While workers and contractors may share information about whether they’ve received a vaccine, agencies “should not require federal employees or contractors to disclose such information.”

The White House didn’t immediately respond to a request by The Epoch Times for comment.

Of the 2.1 million federal employees, more than half worked from home during the pandemic, according to a 2020 survey released in April. The 59 percent who were teleworking was a jump from just 3 percent before the pandemic.

But as the pandemic subsides, more employees are returning to workplaces, underlining the importance of guidance on vaccination.

The new guidance came after the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission said companies wouldn’t run afoul of federal laws if they decided to mandate vaccinations for workers, provided they carve out exceptions for medical or religious reasons.

Federal employment “laws do not prevent an employer from requiring all employees physically entering the workplace to be vaccinated for COVID-19, so long as employers comply with the reasonable accommodation provisions” of the Americans with Disabilities Act and the Civil Rights Act, the commission said.

However, state and local laws could apply, it added.

Some private businesses have begun requiring workers to get a COVID-19 vaccine. Houston Methodist, a hospital system in Texas, this week suspended nearly 200 workers who refused to comply with the mandate and didn’t claim or were unsuccessful in claiming a medical or religious exemption.

Marc Boom, CEO of the system, said the workers “have decided not to put their patients first.” They face termination if they continue to decline to get a jab.

Matthew Staver, chairman of Liberty Counsel, a Christian organization that represents a variety of clients, told The Epoch Times that federal law does appear to bar entities from requiring workers to get vaccinated, because the vaccines currently being administered in the United States are authorized for emergency use, not approved.

“Federal law specifically says that no one can be coerced or forced to get one of these EUA-authorized drugs,” he said.

“It would be a different conversation if they’re fully approved. That, however, is focused only on the federal law, that doesn’t take into consideration the independent state law that provides additional rights for employees.”

In April, the Defense Department said in a memo that supervisors may not generally ask employees if they’ve received a COVID-19 shot. COVID-19 is the disease caused by the CCP virus.

The Biden administration’s task force previously reacted to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention’s update to its masking guidance by saying federal employees and contractors who are fully vaccinated can ditch masks and stop social distancing when working onsite. Fully vaccinated refers to a person who has at least two or more weeks prior received a Johnson & Johnson vaccine or the second dose of the Moderna or Pfizer shot.

The CDC says people who aren’t fully vaccinated should keep wearing a mask and social distancing while indoors or in crowded outdoor settings, and 25 percent occupancy limits are still in place in all federal buildings. Some Republican lawmakers have called on the administration to move back to onsite work, noting that more Americans are being vaccinated each day while COVID-19 metrics such as cases and hospitalizations have dropped sharply.

“It is time to begin transitioning to the workplace,” Rep. Jody Hice (R-Ga.) wrote in a recent letter to Kathleen McGettigan, acting director of the Office of Personnel Management. “If it is the administration’s intention to prolong remote working arrangements, then it is appropriate to hold a comprehensive policy discussion around related issues.”

‘Hundreds’ of Whistleblowers Say Military Forcing ‘Anti-American Indoctrination’ on Them: Sen. Cotton

JACK PHILLIPS

Sen. Tom Cotton (R-Ark.) told Defense Secretary Lloyd Austin on June 10 that “hundreds” of military whistleblowers have reported being forced to receive “anti-American indoctrination” training, including critical race theory (CRT).

In a Senate hearing with Austin, Cotton claimed that within the military, there’s “plummeting morale, growing mistrust between races and sexes where none existed just six months ago and unexpected retirements and separations based on these trainings alone.”

One whistleblower, Cotton alleged, said that military history training was replaced with training about police brutality, “systemic racism,” and “white privilege.” Another said that his unit had to read “White Fragility” by feminist author and critical theory proponent Robin DiAngelo, according to the senator.

In May, the Space Force confirmed it relieved Lt. Col. Matthew Lohmeier, a former instructor and fighter pilot, as commander of the 11th Space Warning Squadron. While it didn’t specifically name the reason why Lohmeier was terminated, the Space Force cited comments made by Lohmeier during a podcast in which he denounced CRT and warned about the spread of Marxism within the Space Force’s ranks.

CRT, which draws heavily upon Marxist critical theory and postmodernist writers, denounces U.S. and Western culture as oppressive, and often claims American culture and institutions are promoting “systemic racism” or “white supremacy.” Some critics have said the ideology’s proponents apply the Marxist tactic of “class struggle” to drive people along the lines of gender, race, and ethnicity, rather than between the “proletariat” and “bourgeoisie.”

In the hearing, Austin told Cotton that some training is designed to make sure that the armed forces are “welcoming to everyone who can qualify and who is fit to serve.”

“We ought to look like the America we support and defend, and senior leadership should look like what’s in the ranks,” Austin said.

But Cotton suggested that claims the military is attempting to foster diversity with such training are incorrect.

“[It’s] about a very specific kind of anti-American indoctrination that is seeping into some parts of our military, based on the whistleblower complaints we have received,” he said.

“The military for decades has been one of the institutions in society where you are most likely to get ahead based on your own performance, your own merit, irrespective of the color of your skin, where you came from, who your parents were.”

Austin agreed with Cotton’s sentiment.

“I absolutely agree with that. I am an example of that,” he said.

Austin went on to state that the military needs to be “a bit better,” be “absolutely inclusive,” and promote “equity.” The terms “inclusive” and “equity” have been used in social justice circles for years.

Austin then argued that by doing so, it’ll be the “most effective and lethal fighting force in the world.”

Don't leave home without this medicine

Could it have been was something I ate while trying to use up the food in my refrigerator before leaving for my long-awaited vacation to Italy? Did I come down with a 24-hour stomach bug? Whichever it was, I was attacked by diarrhea while driving to the airport!

After several frantic restroom stops and doses of anti-diarrheal medicine from my carry-on bag, I finally got checked in at Sea-Tac airport. With 23 hours of travel between Seattle and my final destination, I was lucky; I was able to replenish my stash of anti-diarrheal pills at one of the airport restrooms. It took several more doses and most of the trip from Seattle to Rome for my stomach to settle. Thankfully, I then could spend my vacation admiring Italian art and scenery instead of sprinting to Italian restrooms.

My go-to remedy for diarrhea is Imodium-AD® (loperamide). First introduced as a prescription medicine in 1976, loperamide has been available over the counter (OTC) for many years and has proven to be a VERY effective medicine for acute diarrhea.

During digestion, your food turns into a liquid mass of nutrients just waiting to be absorbed into your body. The muscles that line the inside of your intestines are designed to work together. They squeeze your food in a coordinated rhythm called peristalsis, moving your food through your intestines, inch by inch.

The coordinated movement of your internal intestinal muscles moves this food mass through your small intestine, large intestine, and then your colon, allowing your body to absorb its nutrients and water along the way. What is leftover is then eliminated as feces. The longer it takes the food to move through your intestine, the more water is absorbed into your body, and the firmer your feces or stool becomes. If the food moves too quickly, your body won't have time to absorb much of the liquid and nutrients, creating diarrhea. If the food mass moves too slowly, too much water can be absorbed, making the stool hard, encouraging constipation.

I experienced constipation

Ask... Dr. Louise

for the first time when given cough syrup containing the narcotic codeine to treat my severe from whooping cough. Constipation is a common side effect of pain medicines like codeine, hydrocodone, and oxycodone. These drugs cause the movement of the muscles that line your intestine to slow down. Loperamide is closely related to these powerful painkillers. It relieves diarrhea by slowing down your intestinal muscles like its more powerful cousins, helping ease intestinal cramping and diarrhea.

Loperamide doesn't relieve pain like other opioid medicines. However, some people have discovered that if you take enough loperamide, you can get "high" or stave off the misery of narcotic withdrawal. The Food and Drug Administration has reported cases of people taking 4 times the maximum dose of loperamide experiencing euphoria, confusion, and heart palpitations.

Pepto-Bismol® (bismuth subsalicylate) is another medicine that I always pack when I travel. It reduces abdominal cramping, nausea, and diarrhea but is not quite as effective in relieving diarrhea as loperamide. Available as wintergreen-flavored chewable tablets, liquid as well as regular tablets, Pepto-Bismol® will turn your stools black.

Some people recommend probiotics for diarrhea. I have found them helpful to reduce diarrhea in my dogs, but personally? I find Imodium-AD® MUCH more reliable.

Here Are 4 Tips on Treating Acute Diarrhea:

1. Be prepared. I always keep Imodium-AD® (loperamide) tablets and some Pepto-Bismol® chewable tablets on hand, both at home and on vacation. I want to meet new people and see new sights, not spend my vacation seeking out or sprinting to the nearest bathroom.
2. If the first dose doesn't work, add Pepto-Bismol.

You can take Pepto-Bismol (bismuth subsalicylate) in addition to loperamide, even at the same time. I always pack the chewable tablets, but if you hate the taste of wintergreen, buy the non-chewable pills that you swallow instead. Beware: bismuth subsalicylate will turn your stool a dramatic charcoal-black color.

3. Don't overdose on loperamide.

The maximum dose of 8 tablets of Imodium-AD (loperamide) in 24 hours should be plenty to do the job. Take 2 tablets to start after your first loose stool and one tablet after each loose stool after that. You can also take both loperamide and Pepto-Bismol® (bismuth subsalicylate) together at the same time. 4. Seek medical attention. Some types of diarrhea will need immediate medical attention instead of just an anti-diarrheal medicine. If you experience bloody diarrhea, vomiting, and diarrhea for more than 24 hours, have severe abdominal pain with diarrhea, seek medical attention right away.
