Chelan City Council moves forward with lake access project

By GARY BÉGIN,
MANAGING EDITOR

CHELAN - Unlike previous weeks, this edition (Tuesday, Oct., 22) of the lake access project drew about five people to the council chambers. Council candidate John Olson was the only speaker and former Mayor Bob Goedde sat quietly and took notes.

Jim Brennan, consultant for the project, spoke to the council and audience via conference call and explained the pros and cons of the various sites.

Before that discussion took place, City Administrator Mike Jackson announced that real estate agent Guy Evans said that his mother and land-owner of potential lake access acreage on Spader Bay, Linda Evans Parlette, had agreed on the $400,000 offer for the property located just below The Lookout subdivision.

Jackson told the council that the seller wanted to make sure the land would remain "recreational in perpetuity" as part of the deal and that road and walking path easements were also part of the contingency requests.

The council discussed ways to pay for the purchase and voted to hold a special meeting at 5 p.m., Tuesday, Oct., 29 for further discussion.

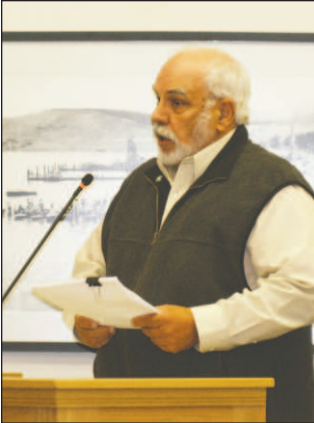

(That meeting was held after the deadline for this edition, Wednesday, Oct., 30 Lake Chelan Mirror.)

After lively talks about various sites, beach potential and parking problems, it was agreed that Brennan will send a matrix via email to each council member showing the final seven sites' standing visa-vis parking, beach quality and other amenities or lack of so that comparisons can be made in a more convenient fashion.

Better signage for all sites was also agreed upon.

Brennan pointed out that the nearly 10 acres involved with the Spader Bay acquisition was a "rare" opportunity for the city to preserve trails, wildlife habitat and other

12 new Columbia riverside view apartments available in ‘Entiaqua’

STORY AND PHOTOS
BY GARY BÉGIN

ENTIAT - The infamous housing shortage is being chipped away at again by small, but meaningful construction projects. This is one of them:

“Entiaqua” refers to “rushing water” in the original Native American (Salish) language, so developer Doug Goodell decided to name his 12-unit apartment project that name.

Adjacent to the Columbia River and near the confluence of the Entiat River, finding a waterfront view in this town is not a problem. In fact, Goodell wanted to give every tenant a spectacular view of the Columbia River so “every apartment has a large deck in the back facing the river.”

According to Goodell, part owner of the 2.6-acre parcel with Tom Andrewjeski, collectively aka Entiaqua, LLC, this project is a godsend to those who commute from various towns to and from Chelan or Wenatchee as it will save 20 minutes either way of drive time.

“This is the first phase, which will be the most expensive because it includes the infrastructure for the other phases,” he said.

The duo bought the 2.6

acres of riverfront land for $340,000 and are investing $1.8 million to construct phase 1 of what they hope will be the start of a potentially 60-unit complex.

As of November 2019 the pair plan on building one 12-unit structure each year for two more years and then assess the next phases, if any. “We have enough space to have up to 60 apartments and even a commercial spot up to 2,000 square feet,” Goodell stated.

The initial phase will consist of 6-1 bedroom, 1 bath and 6-2 bedroom, 2 bath units.

Prices will start at around $1,100 a month for the smaller units (700 sf.) and about $1,450 for the larger (1,000 sf.) and will be available for occupancy June 2020.

A main advantage of the location besides the incredible river views is immediate Highway 97A access.

Entiaqua, LLC is not currently accepting pre-construction rental applications or reservations at this time.

“We might start doing that in the late winter or spring,” concluded Goodell.

"passive" benefits such as the view.

Councilman Tim Hollingsworth pointed out that "real estate is a legacy" and that the city would have no options to do anything once the land "passed beyond control" of the city.

Other suggestions to pay for trail easements included getting a grant, paying the seller in stages over a 3-5 year period and possibly partnering with the Lake Chelan Trails Alliance (LCTA) for development of connecting existing trails to the Spader Bay land.

Guy Evans' real estate company comes into play when the LCTA is Googled. He would also stand to gain $10,000 (2.5%) in commission should the $400,000 purchase be approved. The city is being asked to pay that fee instead of the seller, apparently because the seller is Evans' mother.

Despite the fact that Councilman Servando Sobledo works for The Lookout, he continues to participate in meetings and discussions regarding Spader Bay acquisition, which if realized, would most certainly enhance the value of The Lookout and its property owners.

Evans has also been involved with selling lots and homes in The Lookout development. Despite opinions publicly expressing possible conflicts of interest between several of those named above, the council is seemingly on the path towards purchase of Spader Bay, which in the end may take place regardless of any "lake access" decisions.

Former State Senator Parlette was asked to comment from her side of the story via email, but no answer has yet been received by this reporter.

She owns the Spader Bay land along with a sister.

Any grant involving the federal government would most certainly include adherence to provisions of the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA), and therefore complicate the building of a trail for public use.

To mitigate the cost of building a trail, Hollingsworth suggested volunteers could be mobilized and, under professional guidance, construct a quality walking/biking path for public use.

CHELAN - Ginny Heintz, Certified Palliative Care and Hospice RN, Outpatient Palliative Care Coordinator for Confluence shared powerfully around life issues that we all must face at some point in life, Monday, October 14. Ginny had conversations with community members at the Senior Center and with Tender Loving Care for Seniors volunteers.

If I or a loved one cannot speak for themselves due to serious injury or illness, what would they want to done medically? What constitutes quality of life? Able to be at home, have loved ones/favorite pet close, be able to enjoy ice cream? Having a durable power of attorney for health care and having clear conversations with family members can make all the difference. Access to palliative care in life-threatening illness is available to both hospitalized and outpatients through Confluence Health. This care focuses on reducing symptoms and promoting quality of life during illness. For example, it can make the difference during cancer chemotherapy by reducing side effects so the patient who is the sole source of income provider may still be able to work part time. Hospice care is part of the continuum of care for patients who are estimated to be in the last six months of life, reducing symptoms and assisting the patient in living their last days well. If you would like further information contact Claudia Swenson, Coordinator, TLC for Seniors 360-561-6090. Some brochures and durable power of attorney documents are available at the Chelan Senior Center.

Commissioners review Chelan PUD’s budget priorities, process

SUBMITTED BY CHELAN COUNTY PUD

WENATCHEE – Chelan PUD commissioners Monday (Oct. 21) reviewed the foundation of the 2020 budget, which will be built around the utility’s strategic initiatives and business plans. Staff will bring a draft budget to the commission for review on Nov. 4.

“Our strategic plan is the cornerstone that helps guide our budgeting processes,” said General Manager Steve Wright. “Our customer-owners’ input has been invaluable as we develop a roadmap for the future.”

The budget assumes customers electric load growth of nearly 4 percent in 2020. Water use is expected to grow by 2 percent and wastewater by 1.5 percent. The PUD projects about 1,100 fiber installations next year.

The commission will consider the budget for adoption at its Dec. 2 meeting.

In other business, commissioners:

- Applauded PUD Wireman Caleb Durkee for taking personal ownership to identify bolts on lifting equipment that needed to be inspected during a turbine reassembly. His forward-thinking attitude resulted in a bolt being removed from service and an engineering review of lifting equipment.

- Heard an electric load growth update, which projects a “base case” annual growth rate of 1.3 percent for the electric system (lower growth due to energy conservation) and a record number of about 1,000 new meter installations. Commissioners also received a status update on the design and construction/upgrading of seven PUD substations, including a mobile substation.
- Received an update about proposed “fire hardening” of electrical infrastructure in the area between Chelan and Manson in anticipation of additional community outreach. Staff included information about steps the utility is taking in the area of fire resilience.
- Were briefed on recent community meetings in Leavenworth, Entiat and Manson that provided customers with information about upcoming fiber expansion plans.

Upcoming events:

- Oct. 31 – Discovery Center closes for season and renovation
- Nov. 4 – Commission meeting, 10 a.m.

The Historic Downtown Chelan Association is excited to host its second annual Día de los Muertos celebration this Saturday, Nov. 2, 12-6 p.m. Headlining will be Seattle’s longest running mariachi performing group, Bailadores de Bronce. Joining them will be Wenatchee’s Mariachi Azteca, La Brisa’s Dancing Horses and a great line up of performers. The entire community is invited to join in on this parade, with face painters ready to go at 11 a.m. Parade line up starts at 11:30 a.m. and starts at 12 p.m. A central element of the Día de los Muertos holiday is the altar, or ofrenda. Take a tour of the altars at many locations in Downtown Chelan stores and restaurants. Created and built by local students, each altar represents someone special who has passed. Learn the meaning behind the altar, the items on the altar and then head to Riverwalk Park to create your own special memorial elements for the main altar. Studded tires allowed from Nov. 1 to March 31

SUBMITTED BY WSDOT

OLYMPIA – With winter fast approaching, now is the time for travelers to make sure they’re prepared for driving in inclement weather.

The Washington State Department of Transportation urges all travelers to start preparing themselves and their vehicles before traveling on snow and ice. Drivers can check out WSDOT’s winter driving web page for tips and information. WSDOT also asks travelers to always “know before you go” and get the most up-to-date roadway information before heading out.

“Our crews are ready for winter and work hard to keep roads clear, but as last winter showed, any part of the state can experience severe weather and we need the public’s help as well,” said WSDOT Maintenance Operations Manager James Morin. “Most pass closures are due to spin outs or crashes from vehicles traveling too fast or not having proper winter equipment. Preparing early and staying informed about conditions and restrictions can help keep traffic moving during storms.”

To check conditions and prepare for winter weather:

- Download the WSDOT mobile app.

- Follow WSDOT’s regional and pass accounts on Twitter, the agency’s Facebook site and online travel alerts.
- Sign up for email and/or text updates about road conditions – including Snoqualmie Pass delay text alerts.
- Download, print and carry the WSDOT Winter Driving Guide.
- Get your vehicle ready and plan extra time to cross all mountain passes, including heavily traveled routes such as Snoqualmie Pass, Stevens Pass and White Pass.
- Carry chains and know current traction and chain requirements for mountain passes, which are also available on highway-advisory signs, highway-advisory radio and by calling 511.
- Preset your radio to 530 AM and 1610 AM for WSDOT’s traffic-information stations.

Alternatives to chains

Although some vehicle manufacturers recommend against the use of tire chains for certain models, that doesn’t excuse travelers from state traction device laws. These requirements exist to help keep all traffic moving safely during extreme winter conditions.

The Washington State Patrol provides an online list of approved, alternative-traction devices that meet state traction requirements. All travelers are reminded to carry chains or approved alternatives whenever crossing mountain passes to be prepared for changing weather conditions and avoid a costly ticket. Failure to obey a tire chains sign can mean a ticket of up to $500. Special chain enforcement patrols will be keeping an eye on mountain passes this winter.

Studded tires

By law, studded tires are legal for use in Washington state only from Nov. 1 through March 31. This applies to all vehicles in Washington, even those traveling from other states, and no personal exemptions or waivers exist.

WSDOT estimates studded tires cause between $20 million and $29 million in pavement damage to state-owned asphalt and concrete roadways each year. Motorists are encouraged to visit a tire dealer to learn more about their options, including stud-free, winter tread traction tires. These type of tires are different than all-season tires, are legal year-round and do not cause the same roadway damage as studded tires. More information about studded-tire restrictions and requirements can be found in the FAQ on the WSP website.

OBITUARIES

Karen Ann Webb

Karen Ann Webb (age 76) of Chelan went to be with her Lord and Savior Jesus Christ on October 10, 2019 at Colonial Vista in Wenatchee, Washington. She was a selfless loving woman with a warm, kind, and gentle spirit who truly loved people and gave generously of herself to all; an example of authentic Christianity. Karen enjoyed many past times, but music was an instrumental part of her life, as she enjoyed singing, playing the piano, the organ, and the bass violin, which she did at home, for her church, and for the local orchestra for several community events. Karen was always active in church. The Little Stone (now Living Stone) Church became a large part of her life and she served there in many capacities. She played the piano, the organ, and even the base violin at services. She ran the prayer chain for years and was involved in serving children through the Awana Program there. Karen served on the church board for several years as the representative of the Womens' Missionary Fellowship. Above all, Karen loved people; treasuring time with both her family and friends.

Karen was born on May 11, 1943 in Seattle and grew up in the family home of John and Adeline Halvorson in the Green Lake area of Seattle,

Washington. Karen was the first born of what would eventually become a family of seven. Karen graduated from Lincoln High School in Seattle in 1961. Karen had the desire for higher education and started in the nursing program at Pacific Lutheran University, but soon became ill and was forced to drop out of school in the spring of her first year. When her health improved, Karen enrolled in and graduated from Lutheran Bible Institute. Still desiring to pursue nursing, she enrolled in nursing school again at Edison Technical School, graduating from there in 1965 with an LPN license. While there, she made friends with two other nurses. Wanting to do something adventurous, they left the area and found employment at Stanford University hospital in California. The three girls moved into an apartment together in Palo Alto, sharing the rent three ways. One of the trio eventually left and went back home, leaving Karen and the other nurse to pay the rent. As a result, they were forced to move into a 4 plex in Mountain View, California on March 10, 1966. There was a young man living in the apartment next to the girls who had taken notice of Karen and soon introduced himself to her. That young man became her eventual husband of 52 years, Don Webb.

Karen and Don were married on January 7, 1967 at Karen's home church, Denny Park Lutheran Church in Seattle. After getting married, the two moved into their first home in Fremont, California in the South Bay Area of San Francisco, where Karen continued nursing and Don commuted to his job across the Bay. Their first child Todd was born while there in 1971. While there, Don became frustrated with the traffic and the massive growth of the region, so found a new job with the telephone company in what was then the small town of Lodi. Karen and Don moved there later on that same year, enjoying the small town and the slower pace of life. Karen wound up taking many long trips to care for Don's mom Ima May Tolerton Webb, as her health deteriorated until her passing in 1973.

In 1975, Karen and Don were blessed once again with the birth of their second child Melissa. Karen's dad started having medical problems and failing health eventually too, so Karen wanted to move back to Washington in order to help her mom with her dad.

Karen and the family relocated back to Seattle in January of 1977 and the family settled once again into living in a city environment. It was not long before they were looking for a simpler life style again though, so in August of 1977, Don was able to find a job with General Telephone Company at the satellite company COMSAT just north of Brewster, Washington. Karen and Don bought a small farm in the Elm-way area of Okanogan and the whole family enjoyed farm life with fruit trees, chickens, ducks, a goose named Charlie, dogs, and surrounding neighborhood animals. Karen went back into nursing at the local hospital in Omak while Don worked evenings and took care of the family during the daytime.

When COMSAT shut down in 1983, the company moved Karen and the family to Chelan. It was considered a down time for the nation's economy and jobs were hard for many to find, but not for Karen. She found employment at the Coast to Coast hardware store in downtown Chelan. She also worked briefly at one of the local hotels, doing maid service cleaning rooms. Another fun job she liked, though it was sometimes stressful for her, was working for The Lake Chelan Mirror. Her boss would frequently send her out delivering vacation guides in his old station wagon all over the country, which would often break down in the most remote areas.

In 1987, Karen returned to the work she enjoyed the most as a nurse at Regency Manor. She loved the people at Regency, both clients and staff alike, and with both kids in school now, she soon knew seemingly everybody in town. Karen worked at Regency Manor for over 11 years until tragedy struck in 1999. A fall left her paralyzed from the waist down, so she was forced to quit her job as a nurse. She would remain in a wheelchair for the rest of her life. Despite the constant physical limitations resulting from her unfortunate accident that served as an ever present reminder of it, Karen was always positive, hopeful, and upbeat, never choosing to wallow in self pity, or to ever harbor any ill will towards God nor anyone else. Although she could no longer serve as a nurse, Karen was never a quitter. She became a medical transcriptionist for about 5 years until that field became totally automated. Karen and Don were able to still travel and visit friends and relatives up until Karen's health started to deteriorate further. Karen was forced to enter the hospital in late 2017, where she remained till her passing.

Karen was preceded in her death by her father John Oliver Halvorson, her mother Adeline Rosella (Bergand), her two twin brothers John and Jim, Jim's wife Sue, and Karen's sister Roselyn Meyer and her husband Mike Meyer.

Karen is survived by her husband Don of Chelan, her son Todd Webb, his wife Michelle, and their boys Caleb, Joshua, and Daniel of Oak Harbor, Karen's daughter Melissa of Snohomish, Karen's only living sister Juanita Serrato of Seattle, her niece Kristen Serrato of Federal Way, niece Becky Peterson and her family of Everett, niece Alethea and her family of Lake Stevens, niece Sarah Meyer of Leavenworth, nephew Ian Meyer of Everett, nephew Eric Halvorson and his family of Monroe, nephew Brian Halvorson and his family of Henderson, Nevada, niece Jody Halvorson of Olympia, sister-in-law Debbie Halvorson of Burien, niece Kathy Halvorson Wheeler and her family of Shoreline, niece Shelley Cary of Shoreline, and adopted grandkids Eric and Ondra Crow of Chelan.

We would like to thank all the staff at both Central Washington Hospital and Colonial Vista who provided Karen such wonderful love and care. Karen will be interred at the Smith Mountain Cemetery in Dinuba, California at a later date. Any donations would be greatly appreciated and can be sent to the Alzheimer's Association.

CHELAN - Chelan had a double header today (Oct. 26) against Lakeside and Freeman. Depending on which site you look at these teams are ranked in the top six in state. The Lady Goats experienced being behind and were able to come back. The girls have great team chemistry and trust in each other. It was a fun day of volleyball. We would like to thank the community for coming out and supporting us. We travel to Okanogan on Tuesday (Oct. 29) and host Omak on Thursday (Oct. 31) for senior night.

MANSON HIGH SCHOOL FOOTBALL

By JOEY JOHANSON, MANSON HIGH SCHOOL FOOTBALL COACH

LIND-RITZVILLE - Game Recap for Oct. 25 at Lind-Ritzville. Final score: Manson 21 Lind Ritzville 25.

Manson football played an exciting game this last Friday night. The Trojans had the ball twice late in the 4th quarter to try and take the lead. Unfortunately, they could not get the ball in the end zone, but the effort by the team was very apparent. The highlight of the night was when the Trojans were down 13-25 and Tucker Flowers threw a jump ball up for Caden Beazley. Beazley went up between 2 defenders and came down with the reception and the touchdown.

He pounded in the 2-point conversion to make the game 21-25.

The defense played another amazing game and ended the game with 4 takeaways. The Trojans had 3 interceptions and 1 fumble recovery returned for a touchdown. The Trojans were led by Parker Schoenwald on defense who ended the game with 10 tackles.

On offense, the Trojans ran into a brick wall up front. They ran for 50 total yards all night, but the positive was that they were able to finally get their passing game going. Tucker Flowers threw for 150 yards and 2 touchdowns, both to Caden Beazley. Nick Strecker had 4 receptions on the night and a crucial 30 yard catch late in the game.

Manson sits at 4-4 on the season and will host the Mabton Vikings next Friday, Nov. 1 for Senior Night in a non-league matchup. On Nov. 8 the Trojans will play in a crossover playoff game on the road.

Stats:

Passing: Tucker Flowers, 12 for 22, 150 yards, 2 TD 2 INT
Rushing: Caden Beazley 9 carries for 21 yards
Jesus Portillo 1 carry for 22 yards
Receiving: Caden Beazley 6 receptions 113 yards, 2 TD
Nick Strecker 4 receptions for 32 yards Defense:

CHELAN HIGH SCHOOL FOOTBALL

CHELAN - The Mountain Goats hosted the Omak Pioneer last Friday, Oct. 25, at Sargent Field and lost to the Pioneers 41-17.

“Omak is a well coached, strong, and fast team. I’m proud that we kept fighting tonight, and the kids never gave up. We had a tough time tackling tonight, and couldn’t come up with some scores in the red zone. Those things combined don’t give you much of a chance to beat the league champions. Our passing game came back a little tonight and that was a spark for us. I look forward to see what we can do the next 2 weeks.” said Coach Travis Domser.

The Mountain Goats travel to Riverside this Friday, Nov. 1 for a non-conference game. Game time is 7 p.m.

CHELAN MIDDLE SCHOOL FOOTBALL

By CLAYTON PLUMMER, CHELAN MIDDLE SCHOOL

CHELAN - Last night (Oct. 23) the 8th grade boys football fought very hard to come back and win 30-27 against Foothills. First offensive play of scrimmage for Foothills they scored on 60 yard touch down. On our first possession we fumbled the ball and Foothills scored again and we found ourselves down 14-0 after the first quarter.

We finally found the end-zone in the 2nd quarter and made some big adjustments on defense. Foothills scored once more in the third as well as Chelan still keeping them at a one TD lead. with 4 mins on the clock we went for it on 4th down and were stopped. The very next play Foothills fumbled the ball and Bryce Hampton picked it up and ran for a Touch down followed by a field goal by Omar Magdellino to put Chelan up by 3 with 1 minute and change remaining in the 4th. Foothills drove the ball down field but were finished off by a sack by Chelan to end the game. I have never coached a team that has shown so much heart and adversity to overcome what seemed to be an inevitable loss. The worked hard, corrected mistakes and came out victorious. We you seem them in the halls please congratulate them on a great season. 5-0.

Tobacco and Vapor 21 begins Jan. 1, 2020

SUBMITTED BY WASHINGTON STATE DEPT. OF HEALTH

OLYMPIA – The Washington State Department of Health is reminding the public that Engrossed House Bill 1074 goes into effect on Jan. 1, 2020, when it will become illegal to sell tobacco and vapor products to anyone under 21. This reminder comes amid a state investigation into lung illness related to vaping – which has identified 12 cases to date – and a recent State Board of Health emergency rule banning the sale of flavored vapor products.

“Tobacco and Vapor 21 will help protect the health of our young people,” said Secretary of Health John Wiesman. “Teenagers are vaping and using nicotine at truly alarming rates. No one solution can reverse this trend, but this law is an important step that will prevent thousands of Washington kids from developing a lifelong addiction to nicotine.”

In 2018, one in five Washington 10th graders and almost one in three 12th graders reported using vapor products (Healthy Youth Survey). Nearly all people who smoke begin smoking before age 21—while their brains are particularly vulnerable to nicotine addiction. Raising the legal age of sale will help protect young people by preventing them from getting tobacco and vapor products from peers who are 18, 19, or 20 year olds.

Tobacco kills more than 8,000 Washingtonians each year. Washingtonians can get free help to quit smoking or vaping by contacting the Washington State Tobacco Quitline at 1-800-QUIT-NOW or by accessing a smartphone app at www.doh.wa.gov/quit. Parents and schools can find more information about how to address youth vaping at www.youthnow.me/schools, and the public can learn more about the new law at www.doh.wa.gov/tobacco-and-vapor-21.

Rates of sexually transmitted diseases continue to rise in Washington

SUBMITTED BY WASHINGTON STATE DEPT. OF HEALTH

OLYMPIA -- Newly released data from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention show that the rate of sexually transmitted diseases (STDs) continues to rise in Washington, and across the country.

Pregnant women experience some of the worst outcomes from untreated STDs, including from congenital syphilis, which is a growing problem in Washington. From 2014 to 2018, 23 cases of congenital syphilis were reported; this compares to only 13 cases reported from 1995 to 2013.

Rates of chlamydia, gonorrhea and syphilis have all been rising over the last few years. Chlamydia is the most commonly reported STD; the rates are highest in 20 to 24-year-old women. At any age, if you think you may have been exposed to HIV or a STD, you and your sex partner(s) should visit a health clinic or your health care provider for testing and treatment.

Early detection and treatment can interrupt the steady climb of STD rates. The Department of Health is working with local public health agencies, community partners and medical care providers to enhance their capacity to diagnose, treat and prevent STDs in order to reduce the spread of these infections.

Data show sexually transmitted disease rates are higher among gay, bisexual and other men who have sex with men. Health officials urge these people to talk to their medical provider about testing for syphilis, gonorrhea, chlamydia and HIV at least once a year.

Officials at the department are urging people who are sexually active to get tested and treated for HIV and STDs. HIV and STDs are still best prevented through consistent and correct condom use, reduction of the number of sex partners or monogamy and knowing the testing status of sex partners and choosing safer sex practices based on the partner's status.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Don't give up your health, women 50-74 get your annual mammogram, just in case

I was disturbed to see in the article in the October 23, 2019 Lake Chelan Mirror, page A5, advising women 50-74 to “undergo breast cancer screening with mammography every other year.”

Right here in Wenatchee during my times taking radiation in both 2018 and 2019, by far the most prevalent cancer for women taking radiation was breast cancer. What I noticed in 2019, over 2018, were the earlier diagnosis' that were translating into less length radiation treatment protocols and seemingly high cure rates.

One lady in particular stands out in my mind, a lady from right here in Chelan. She was 87 or 88 and had been told by her doctor it wasn't necessary to have an annual mammogram any more because of her age, but since Medicare would pay for it she decided to have it anyway, just to be sure. Good thing she did, because her cancer was found early and would have gone undetected for at least one more year if she had followed these new guidelines.

I'm not a doctor, but it seems to me the strides and successes we've have had coming from all of these new mammogram machines, like the new 3D one Chelan is scheduled to get, the annual screenings, the earlier diagnosis and treatments, at least that's what they've been telling us. It's disturbing to think women are being discouraged from getting these early screenings. In 2019 there was only myself and one other woman who I meet that was not taking radiation for breast cancer. If all of us, there were only 2 who were possibly under the age of 50.

The treatment is oh so much easier if it's caught in Stage 1 as opposed to Stage 3 or 4.

I say “Just in case” take the time to get an annual mammogram and protect your health.

Women of 50-74 or 90 are important too.

Could soy cause breast cancer? 3 tips on taking phytoestrogens safely

Q: Can phytoestrogens help relieve menopausal symptoms like hot flashes and night sweats? What about women with breast cancer?

I experienced my first hot flash standing in front of 120 pharmacy students in a large lecture hall in Pullman, Washington. While explaining how a particular weight loss medicine worked I felt the temperature in the room skyrocket and my scalp felt hot and prickly. Suddenly, sweat began shooting out of my pores front and back, showering my skin inside my shirt and leaving me damp and disoriented in front of everyone. Talk about being distracted... and embarrassed!

Can phytoestrogens relieve the physical and social discomfort of menopausal symptoms like sudden hot flashes/flushes or their night-time equivalent, night sweats?

Researchers have noticed how Asian women don't suffer as much from hot flashes during menopause as Western women do, calling it the “Japanese Effect”. They suspect the major reason for this difference is diet, because the typical Asian diet contains a lot more soy than a typical American diet, and those soy foods contain phytoestrogens: plant-based substances that can act like estrogen in your body to relieve menopausal symptoms.

Eating more soy-based foods may not be the only thing responsible for the “Japanese Effect”. Protection against hot flushes may also depend on how well you convert the phytoestrogens in soy to a more active form called equol. It's estimated that only 30-50% of women in North America can make the conversion to equol, while Asian or Hispanic women convert soy-based phytoestrogens into equol much more readily.

Phytoestrogens act by attaching or binding to the same places in your body that other estrogens do, in binding sites called estrogen receptors, or ERs. There are two main types of ERs: ER alpha and ER beta receptors. Most estrogens and phytoestrogens bind to ER alpha receptors, relieving hot flushes but possibly stimulating certain types of breast and endometrial cancers.

Phytoestrogens that bind to ER beta receptors create the opposite effect, instead they block the action of estrogen on breast tissue, much like the estrogen-blocking medicines tamoxifen and raloxifene (Evista®), which may help prevent certain types of breast cancer.

Unfortunately, it's not a predictable effect because it's very hard to pin down and study the effects of phytoestrogens on the body. One reason is that common food sources of phytoestrogens usually contain more than one phytoestrogen, and they can bind to either ER alpha or ER beta receptors, creating conflicting effects.

Plants will develop differing concentrations of phytoestrogens depending on the species and their own growing conditions. They can also act differently in your body depending on whether you are still making your own estrogens or you are menopausal or postmenopausal, with very little estrogen in your body.

How much soy does it take to reduce hot flash/hot flush symptoms? Most clinical studies use from 40 and 80 mg daily of phytoestrogens from soy-based products. Recent evidence suggests that you start with 2 servings a day of soy foods and try that for 3 months to see if your frequency of hot flashes decreases.

One serving of soy food can be 3 ounces of tofu, ½ cup of edamame, ½ cup tofu, ¼ cup soy nuts, or 1 cup of soymilk. Flaxseed, chickpeas, beans, peas, green leafy vegetables, cauliflower and nuts are also good sources of phytoestrogens. After trying soy for 3 months, if you don't notice any decrease in your hot flashes or hot flushes, you probably won't, and can stop it.

Could soy cause breast cancer? If you're not vegetarian, it's unlikely you'll get enough soy in your diet to increase your risk of breast cancer unless you also take supplements containing concentrated soy or herbal products like black cohosh marketed for “menopause support”, such as Remifem-in®.

Here Are 3 Tips on Taking Phytoestrogens Safely:

1. You CAN eat food containing soy, even if you have breast cancer. Moderation is the key. If you are vegetarian or vegan, avoid eating tofu or tempeh every day, and control your consumption of soy milk.
2. Use phytoestrogen supplements that have had their potency tested. Exact concentrations of particular phytoestrogens differ depending on growing conditions. Choose products with standardized quality control assays of each batch.
3. Be cautious with supplements for menopausal symptoms. If you have a family history or an increased risk of breast cancer, you don't have to totally avoid soy-based food, but you should avoid taking supplements containing concentrated phytoestrogens like soy concentrates or black cohosh until more is known about their long-term effects.
