Water pumps, roads, budget dominate council meeting

By DIANA PIÑON

CHELAN – On June 12, the Chelan City Council meeting was short and sweet compared to the last meeting in which the council met for four hours.

Before official business started, Mayor Mike Cooney, asked the attendees to give a moment of silence in memory of Steve Kline, who passed away earlier this month and who was an active community member involved in park and recreation projects.

The first thing on the agenda was a public hearing for a Six Year Transportation Improvement Plan, which will aid the local community. In charge of delivering the proposal was Jake Youngren, Public Works Director, the plan is a living document and it gets modified every year. This document is required and it helps receive state and federal funding in transportation projects. “In my tenure here I have noticed that transportation projects have been more meaningful ... they are important projects that I hope we address over time,” said Cooney.

Another important item the council touched on, was the remodeling of two booster pumps in local neighborhoods. The council approved to provide the City the sum of $53,900 to pay for the construction management and services involved with the Highlands Booster Pump Station project. The amount was accounted for and included in the city’s 2018 budget. Public Works is planning on removing the standby generator from the site. They have been communicating with the residents who live near that pump who are asking for a better water system.

The main booster pump station for the Northshore community, Darnell’s Booster Pump, will receive electrical modifications. For this project, an auxiliary generator will be added along with switch gear to easily reboot such station in case of a power outage. Darnell’s is getting such renovations due to last year’s wild fires in Chelan. Work on this pump will start in July.

Finance Director Cheryl Grant, presented the council with the 2018 summary budget. The six page report covered available funding for Capital Projects, the Woodin Avenue Bridge Project, bonding options and Real Estate Excise Tax (REET). The City’s most expensive project at the moment is the Woodin Avenue Bridge Project, which has caused a shortfall on the budget of $868,721. However an additional water cap of $184,831 and an additional bonding of $600,000 will bring the balance down to $94,090. The council is not too worried about the funds because the REET numbers look promising the next few years. “I am so thrilled about the bridge being fixed ... I can just see people walking down the bridge. It is going to make our downtown larger and more beautiful,” said Mayor Pro Tem Wendy Isenhart.

Other items covered:

- Public Records Request Policy Resolution No. 2018-1346. GovQA is an online website that allows a citizens greater access to official records.

- Sewer Lift Station Upgrades Professional Services Agreement for Construction Management - This agreement will cover the construction and management support services for the PUD Boat Launch Lift Station (Lift Station No. 16) and Lift Station No. 10. The council authorized the Mayor to finalize and execute the agreement with Gray and Osborn Engineers for the Sewer Lift Station Upgrades Project for $59,500.
- CCSO Law Enforcement Services 2018 First Quarter Report

Chris Foreman provided the council with a report for the first months of 2018.

January – A couple DUIs, Felony and 10 collisions in the city.

February – Five collisions and Walmart Shoplifting, 1 vehicle theft.

“These few months have been slow, but with summer coming around it will get busier,” Foreman said.

Currently, law enforcement is working with the Chelan School District Superintendent Barry DePaoli to figure out a solution for the Morgen Owings Elementary street crossing due to high volume traffic.

Concerns from the council included: unmuffled cars, people speeding in residential areas in South Chelan, drug houses, Marine Patrol for summer and boating.

• Towards the end of the meeting, Mike Jackson, City Administrator, mentioned to the council the retirement of Finance Director, Cheryl Grant. On August 23, Steve Thornton, will start his new position as Finance Director and Grant will help him out for a smooth transition.

The next City Council meeting will be on July 10 at 6 p.m. at Chelan City Hall, 135 E. Johnson Avenue. The June 26 council meeting has been canceled due to schedule conflicts.

Reading The Oath is the last step the 27 recruits had to complete before becoming firefighters.

Firefighter 1 Recruit Class is ready to serve our community

By DIANA PIÑON
STAFF WRITER

CHELAN – After working so hard for the past three and a half months, the 2018 firefighter recruit class graduated in front of their families, friends and colleagues at Chelan High School Performing Arts Center.

This wouldn’t have been possible without the $924,308 volunteer recruitment grant given to Chelan, Entiat and Orondo back in 2017, for a four year period. This grant was given to the agencies due to the decrease in volunteering recruitment, the grant covers all the costs for up to 80 volunteers.

The first graduating class from the academy consisted of 27 volunteers. Twenty of them were from Chelan, five from Entiat and two from Orondo.

This number exceeded expectations, the program’s goal was to have 20 volunteers per year. “We are off to a good start, I am excited for that” stated Assistant Fire Chief Brandon Asher.

Chelan Mayor Mike Cooney congratulated and thanked the recruits. “I appreciate your volunteerism, I think it is a sign of a great community when people step forward and volunteer in all manners in our town,” said the mayor.

Volunteering in the communities of North Central Washington is highly important. Volunteers in our community and all over the country save the communities over $140 billion.

Chelan Fire and Rescue adds Witherbee to commission

By DIANA PIÑON
STAFF WRITER

On Wednesday, June 13, the Chelan Fire and Rescue held its monthly meeting.

Jay Witherbee was sworn into his new position as Chelan County Fire Protection District 7 Commissioner.

Jerry Isenhart, who has been involved for years in many community committees, spoke during the public comment section of the meeting. Isenhart met countless times with previous Commissioner Tom Peters who resigned back on March 12. According to Isenhart, Peters had a lot of frustrations with meetings, laws and regulations. Due to this Isenhart was not surprised by Peters decision of leaving. Isenhart then started thinking about possible future options for District 7. One of them being changing the size of the Board of Commissioners from three to five.

In order to do so, Isenhart needs to collect 10 percent of voters’ signatures for a petition to go on the ballot. This will allow the rest of the community to vote for or against changing the number of Commissioners. Isenhart believes that people need to participate in the government.

About 100 to 120 signatures have been collected so far, according to Mike Stowe, who is helping Isenhart collecting them. “I heard just way more positive feedback, good reasons to do it ... it’s all about getting the community more involved,” Stowe added.

The Firefighters Association Report was delivered by Administrative Office Manager Carol Kibler (right), was in charge of leading the Oath of Office for Jay Witherbee (left), new District 7 Commissioner the president of the association, Dan Crandall. The treasurers report for the month of May started with a sum of $36,628, only $380 were used towards expenses, ending the month with $36,247.

The Executive Committee, lost one of their co-secretaries who resigned. The committee is currently working on hiring the temporary person who filled in at the last meeting.

The biggest takeaway from the report is the Priorities Committee’s concern on the way money is being spent. This new committee has been running for about a month or so.

The number one priority for money spending will be donations to the victims of fires and accidents of medical emergencies. Approved by the committee is the Walmart Gift Card Program, in which fire victims receive a $500 gift card to Walmart. Victims will also receive $1,500 per fire indecent and accident victims will receive $1,000 for every incident involving serious injury or loss of life. Each incident case will have to be approved by the committee first, however this helps set a standard for how much money is given away each time.

The committee will look into special equipment for the firefighters before making any purchasing decisions. Local food bank support will still be up and running, the committee will donate $500 every quarter to the food bank. Helping Chelan Valley Hope is also on their list, the committee will be there to give a hand in case of any fire disasters and during its Christmas toy drive. Orondo, Entiat and Manson will also be helped out by District 7 if needed, according to Crandall. Local youth organizations and event funding will also get their assistance.

Other items covered:

- Support Service member, Marcia Holmdahl, showed disappointment towards the Commissioners. As of right now, the Support Service department is running on 2016 budget, Holmdahl stated “if I went to car dealership or if I went to the grocery store, I am not going to get very much.” The Commissioners didn’t pass a lobby that would help with this issue. Holmdahl solution is to present the community with the safety statics, so the department could get their support.
- Fire Chief Report Tim Lemon

2018 Budget: Towing vehicles had the biggest on the budget, $63,000 were given by California, another $52,000 will reflect in May’s revenue, April was a big revenue month, Property Taxes $617,00 were received.

Chelan hospital board votes to approve affiliation agreement with University of Washington family medicine residency program, in partnership with CVCH

SUBMITTED BY LAKE CHELAN
COMMUNITY HOSPITAL
AND CLINICS

CHELAN - Lake Chelan Community Hospital (LCCH) will become the state's sixth host hospital and training site for a Family Medicine Residency Rural Program, the hospital Board voted at a special meeting Thursday, June 7. Beginning in August 2020, physician residents from the University of Washington's residency program will practice at LCCH in partnership with Columbia Valley Community Health (CVCH). There will be two physicians in Chelan the first year, followed by another two in 2021, for a total of four in the valley.

The residency doctors will spend two years in Chelan and practice primarily at CVCH, spending about a third of their time at LCCH. Each resident will have a panel of patients at CVCH and work in the hospital's emergency room, medical/surgical unit and Sanctuary addiction recovery unit. They will also deliver babies and spend a small portion of time at Confluence Health in Wenatchee finishing neurology, nephrology, cardiology and dermatology rotations.

"This program is a natural outgrowth of our two agencies' deep commitment to Chelan and to people who choose not to live in big cities," said Dr. Malcolm Butler, CVCH Chief Medical Officer. "It is a testimony to cooperation between CVCH and LCCH that our medical community can win such a coveted training program."

"What an opportunity for Lake Chelan Hospital," said Steve Patonai, LCCH interim CEO. "The community will benefit from this affiliation in many ways. Physician residents will bring new ideas, and it will raise the bar for all caregivers in the hospital, as well as improve patient access. It will also be a valuable recruiting tool."

Dr. Keri Bergeson, a family physician at CVCH will serve as the program's rural site director.

Seventy percent of residents stay within 30 miles of where they trained, explained Dr. Keri Bergeson, who will serve as the program's rural site director. Bergeson, a family physician at CVCH, developed and championed Chelan's affiliation with UW's residency rural program. She has practiced in the valley for four years and worked tirelessly on the residency project

"Our biggest goal is to increase the number of physicians we have working the valley," said Bergeson. "We are facing a critical shortage of family care providers and hope this become a solution to that problem."

Chelan's program will provide residents, new doctors who have graduated from medical school, with the necessary clinical skills and community engagement training to make a difference in the health of their local community, said Bergeson. When they finish their residency, two more will join the program, keeping a continual flow of new physicians in the valley. Other Family Medicine Residency Rural Programs in Washington state include Cle Elum, Chehalis, Colville, Ellensburg and Port Angeles.

"We are thrilled with the hospital Board's decision to partner with us," said Bergeson, who explained that a residency program in Chelan is a great fit because of the many diverse services offered here. While developing the program, CVCH engaged three nationally recognized consultants, all of whom agreed Chelan is the perfect spot for such a program.

"Practicing in a town like Chelan is night and day different than practicing in Seattle or Spokane, and the best way to train doctors for this lifestyle and practice style is to train them right here," said Butler. "Dr. Bergeson is wonderful. She brought a university to town!"

Mary Signorelli, LCCHC Board Chair expressed enthusiasm about the project. "With our Board moving forward with the UW and CVCH on this agreement, a brand-new day is dawning. All of us in the Chelan valley will, for many years, see an added dynamic to the future of medicine right here at home. This is truly an historic time for us."

In other business, the LCCHC Board also voted to approve the CEO executive position overview presented by B.E. Smith

Pasta dinner in Manson goes to the dogs (and cats)

June 23 at
Blueberry Hills

SUBMITTED BY WENATCHEE
VALLEY HUMANE SOCIETY

MANSON - The third annual Spay-ghetti and No Balls fundraiser dinner will be held Saturday, June 23, 5-8 p.m. at scenic Blueberry Hills Farm in Manson. Join Wenatchee Valley Humane Society (WVHS), as it celebrates the 3,645 community pets spayed or neutered last year, including shelter animals, community cats, barn buddies, and animals of income-qualified pet owners through WVHS's low cost programs. Dinner features salad, garlic bread, two types of pasta, four different sauces, Blueberry Hill's famous pie and ice cream from Whidbey Island Ice Cream.

This year's event is sponsored by Blueberry Hills, Hill's Science Diet, Whidbey Island

Ice Cream, Kelly Allen Insurance, Allen Construction, Gilded Lily, Melissa Knott Real Estate, The Village Veterinarian, Humane Society of the United States, Lake Chelan Physical Therapy, The Dock Company, Lake Chelan Chamber of Commerce, Pulse Barre Studio, and Patio Pools.

Whidbey Island's partnership of this event comes hand in hand with the launch of their ice cream at Blueberry Hills.

Wine is generously being provided by Benson Vineyards Estate Winery in Chelan and will be available by donation.

There will be a selection of raffle items also available, as well live music.

Spay and neutering reduces unwanted litter and overcrowding of animal shelters. Altering a pet also decreases the urge to roam which exposes pets to fights with other animals, getting struck by cars, and other mishaps. Altered pets also have a reduced risk of certain types of cancers.

Tickets to the event are just $35 and are extremely limited! They can be purchased online at <https://www.wenatcheehumane.org/spayghetti/> or in person at the shelter. Proceeds from the event benefit WVHS's Spay and Neuter fund. To learn more about the spay and neuter program or how to donate, visit www.wenatcheehumane.org.

Ninth Circuit rules in favor of common sense: wildfires are emergencies

SUBMITTED BY AMERICAN FOREST RESOURCE COUNCIL

PORTLAND, OREGON – Last week, the Ninth Circuit ruled in favor of logic and common sense: massive wildfires on public lands are emergencies that often threaten lives, property, and natural resources. The Court's ruling backed a decision by the Forest Service to build a community protection line – a fuel break – to safeguard families and homes near Lake Chelan during the Wolverine Fire.

The Wolverine Fire was a severe fire that lasted over two months, burning over 62,000 acres along Lake Chelan. The fire threatened 936 homes and structures and resulted in a series of evacuation orders. The months-long wildfire smoke choked the surrounding recreational areas.

In the interest of public safety, fire managers decided to remove vegetation along a 300-foot-wide community protection line to help stop the fire's spread. The Forest Service relied on emergency authority to construct the protection line to ensure people could get to safety if the fire continued to spread and to protect homes. The emergency authority allows the Forest Service to act when necessary before preparing lengthy and duplicative environmental paperwork. Without this authority, the Forest Service could have been forced to divert resources, personnel, money, and time away from immediately responding to the fire.

After the fire was out, the Forest Service was sued for its proactive efforts. The plaintiff, Forest Service Employees for Environmental Ethics (FSEEE), argued with a straight face that wildfire events are not "emergencies" and thus cannot enable the use of emergency authorities that explicitly allow for the Federal Government to respond quickly in times of crisis. FSEEE also argued forest fires are viewed as a common occurrence in the western United States, therefore FSEEE reasoned that they are not "unforeseen."

"First responders and firefighters deserve our thanks and appreciation for helping protect families and homes from these dangerous wildfires – not lawsuits," said AFRC president Travis Joseph. "This lawsuit was a slap in the face to the brave, hardworking women and men who face extraordinary threats in real time. Retroactively suing the Forest Service over the definition of the word 'emergency' to force the agency to do more paperwork during legitimate crises is pathetic."

The Ninth Circuit rejected FSEEE's argument and concluded, "While it is true that fires happen every year, it defies plain language and common sense to conclude that no individual fire – or its course, intensity, or duration – could be unforeseeable. It is unreasonable to argue that forest fires can never present emergency situations when viewed at the time the fire is raging."

"We are pleased that the Ninth Circuit issued its ruling acknowledging the common sense understanding that wildfires can be emergencies," stated AFRC staff attorney Sara Ghafouri, who submitted an amicus brief on behalf of Lake Wenatchee Fire & Rescue. "With the upcoming wildfire season approaching, it is critical more than ever for the Forest Service to have the ability to rely on its emergency regulation authority and act quickly when attempting to mitigate harm to vulnerable, nearby communities."

Chelan County plans to update Community Wildfire Protection Plan

SUBMITTED BY CHELAN COUNTY

WENTCHEE - Working in conjunction with Chelan County, the Washington Department of Natural Resources (DNR), and the Bureau of Land Management (BLM) have launched the process of updating the county-level Community Wildfire Protection Plan (CWPP). Local agencies and organizations in Chelan County have initiated a planning committee to complete CWPP as part of the National Fire Plan, National Cohesive Wildland Fire Management Strategy, and Healthy Forests Restoration Act as authorized by Congress and the White House. The Chelan County CWPP will include risk analyses with predictive models indicating where fires are likely to ignite and how they may impact local communities and the environment. Northwest Management, Inc. has been retained by the DNR and BLM to facilitate meetings, conduct field inspections and interviews, develop vulnerability assessments, and collaborate with the committee to delineate mitigation projects. The planning committee includes representatives from local fire districts, cities and towns, Chelan County, Washington Department of Natural Resources, National Park Service, US Forest Service, Bureau of Land Management, and others.

The intention of the project is to assess wildland fire risk in Chelan County and the local communities, then make mitigation recommendations that will not only help prevent wildfire ignitions from occurring but will also guide decision-makers towards creating a more fire-resilient Chelan County and provide for public wildfire education. Some of the goals of this project are to improve awareness of wildland fire issues locally, identify high fire risk areas and develop strategies to reduce this risk, and improve accessibility of funding assistance to achieve these goals.

The planning committee will be conducting public meetings to discuss preliminary findings and to seek public involvement during the planning process during summer of 2018. A notice of the dates and locations of these meetings will be posted in local news outlets. For more information on the Chelan County CWPP please contact Brad Tucker, Northwest Management, Inc., at 208-245-1920 or tucker@northwestmanagement.com.

The 25 instructors received a special award by Scartozzi who embraced them in a hug of gratitude, one by one.

Special recognition was given to Administrative Office Manager Carol Kibler and Administrative Assistant Faye Barker, who were in charge of putting the academy together and controlled all paperwork. Kibler and Barker received a Fire Marshall pin for all their contribution to the program.

This first time around, Chelan was the host agency for the academy. "It's a lot of work for the host and the department and it takes commitment from the Chief to have his people involved and to doing a program like this," said Scartozzi. Lemon, Deputy Fire Chief Mike Donnell and Asher were awarded not only with applause of the crowd but also with a certificate for their excellence.

Scartozzi gave the recruits one important advice before pinning of the badges; "Now when you are out there in the community, you are being looked at as a firefighter in this community. Whether you are in uniform or not in uniform ... so go forth use your training, conduct yourself properly. It is not how you conduct yourself when people aren't looking, is how you conduct yourself when people are looking, use that rule and will never go wrong."

The first one pinned from Douglas County Fire District #4 Orondo was Firefighter Ryan Knight followed by Firefighter Jason Wildeboer and Firefighter Garrett Rains, who was not present in the ceremony.

The second district to be pinned was Chelan County Fire District #8 Entiat. Starting off with Firefighter Tucker Hodd, Firefighter Autumn Doyle, next Firefighter Jody Casey and Firefighter Mike Aday. Not present due to being assigned to a fire in Colorado was Firefighter

Robert Poyner. Last but not least was the pinning for the Chelan Fire and Rescue #7 recruits; Firefighter Sam Belsky, Firefighter David Bingham, Firefighter Vanessa Calhoun, Firefighter Kevin Cox, Firefighter Luke Jahnke, Firefighter Cameron Kimbrough, Firefighter Doug Morgan, Firefighter Hunter Newmiller, Firefighter Billy Pruter, Firefighter Ismael Rodriguez, Firefighter Casey Tjeerdsma, Firefighter Jim Whipps, Firefighter Connor Wiggs and lastly Firefighter

Austin Yancey. Firefighter John Peterson is fighting the fires in Colorado, he wasn't present for the ceremony. Also not present was Firefighter Jacob Wisdom and Firefighter Johnathon Tellez, who recently became a dad. Lemon was in charge of reading the Oath, while the recruits repeated word by word after him. Donnell gave final remarks and Chaplain Ed Bleitz ended the ceremony by blessing the new 27 firefighters and their families.

Umpires know more than you think

Editor's Note: This story was written in March of 2015 and tells how Steve Kline of Chelan ended up playing for the New York Yankees right out of high school. He passed away on June 4, 2018 in Chelan. A Memorial Service will be held on Saturday, June 23, 2-5 p.m., at Chelan High School. Wes Crossley passed away in 2017.

BY VICKI OLSON CARR

CHELAN- In 1965 a Chelan High School senior and baseball player signed a contract with the New York Yankees. How did a pitcher from a small town in North Central Washington draw attention from the New York Yankees organization? Ask former Chelan, now Wenatchee resident Wes Crossley and you'll find out.

Crossley spent part of his childhood in a suburb of Detroit where he loved to play basketball and baseball. The family moved to Glendale, California when Wes was 13.

"I thought I'd died and gone to Heaven," West said, "because you could play baseball year round there!" He learned the game very well in summer leagues, and playing outfield and catcher for Glendale High School, which won the Foothill League championship. Crossley was named MVP and an all-league player. He batted .500 his senior year and led the league in homeruns. He was put on California's third string of all-state teams.

After graduation in 1950, Crossley signed a professional contract with the Pittsburgh Pirates and played four years in the minor leagues in Las Vegas, Bakersfield, and Albuquerque which won the pennant and the playoffs, then was traded to a San Antonio team in the Longhorn League. Crossley remembers there were 57 baseball leagues in the U.S. at that time.

Leg injuries and a request for a raise that was denied sent Crossley back home to California where he got a job as an umpire right away. He enjoyed the work and was soon officiating high school football, basketball and baseball games.

By 1961, Wes Crossley was a professional umpire for the Pacific Northwest League. He umpired for the Wenatchee Chiefs in 1965, the last year there was a professional baseball team in town.

Wenatchee World sports writer Dick Pieper brought the umpire up to Chelan for a golf game one day on the course adjacent to the city park. Crossley hit a wild shot which bounced over the Manson Highway onto the lawn of the Park Way Motel. He got a good look at the little motel when he retrieved his ball, and never forgot this inviting little town in such a beautiful setting, he said.

Race riots in the LA area and lung damage from working in a plastics plant had made life in southern California less than appealing. While umpiring in Eugene, Crossley glanced over a Seattle Times newspaper and noticed a for-sale ad for a small motel in Chelan. Crossley called the number in the ad, but it was the wrong motel. However, he got the news that the Park Way Motel was also for sale!

Properties were sold in short order and in April of 1966, the Crossley's were loaded up and on their way to Lake Chelan, where Crossley began umpiring Chelan High School baseball games immediately.

Steve Kline was a senior and the pitcher on the league-winning Chelan Goats baseball team. "You know, umpires see them all. We know when we see something," Crossley said, thumping the table emphatically. "When Steve began throwing pitches toward me, I thought 'This guy is a major league pitcher!'."

"Well, I knew Eddie Taylor. He was an old umpire friend and he was a scout for the New York Yankees. I called him and told him he needed to come out and have a look at this kid," Crossley said. "And that's what he did. Eddie told me, 'I like him. I'm gonna sign him.' And that's what happened, right there in Unit 3A of the motel!"

Wes Crossley estimates he officiated around 10,000 athletic contests. He and his wife Marcella managed their motel for 31 years. He also drove school bus for 25 years, making many trips to out-of-town games. Crossley also coached American Legion baseball teams for 13 summers. The kids in Chelan found out how much he knew about the game of baseball, he said.

Crossley was the instigator in teaching Cal Ripken, Sr. a lesson about openly slandering umpires in the media. He organized the six-man system that is used for World Series games to umpire a game in Pasco where Ripken was team manager.

"The sportswriters went bananas at how good we were," Crossley said proudly, "how dedicated and professional we were. Ripken told me later, and privately, that he'd gotten the message. . . so I just got along fine with him after that."

The man wears an enormous gold ring from being inducted into the State of Washington Baseball Hall of Fame in 2003. Crossley made an impact in Central Washington as an American League coach. As most coaches do, he has followed the careers of aspiring ballplayers, and watched fifteen go on to play college ball, fourteen go professional, and five athletes get signed by professional teams.

Along with Steve Kline, they have included Don McCormick of Omak (whose father played for the Wenatchee Chiefs), Jerod Riggan of Brewster, and Ryan Doumitt and Dave Haverlo both of Moses Lake.

Crossley is full of fascinating baseball stories. A loyal Detroit fan, he is proud that he got to play in Tiger Stadium for the Fireman Midgets in full uniform at age 12. A champion of young people, his voice quiets and softens as he tells of a Chelan ballplayer from a struggling family who learned the game well enough to pitch for the Goats as a senior. The man has spent his life working with underprivileged children, perhaps following the example Crossley set.

As for Steve Kline, was Crossley's assessment of a home-town boy from Chelan on the mark? Kline threw six no-hitters and two perfect games as a high school pitcher. He pitched four years for the New York Yankees with a 2.40 ERA, and threw 33 complete games in three years. Kline worked 30 years as a Portland lumber broker, has celebrated 43 anniversaries with his lovely wife Linda, and is coaching the Wenatchee Panther pitching crew. Wes Crossley knew more than most people thought.

My Great-Grandmother's Dove

BY GANNON FORSBERG

Something shook me from my slumber. I'm not sure what it was - maybe the soft cinnamon light that filled the bedroom, or the way that the blinds split the morning sunbeams into narrow slices that graced the floor. Maybe it was the gentle shh as the waves slid across the shore, tickling the sand and then drawing back into itself, or the smell of fresh grass. Whatever it was, it drew me out from under my cave of blankets and into the day. I was awake.

The carpet swallowed my footsteps as I tiptoed across the quaint attic bedroom, careful not to wake my sister, who was still asleep. I crept down the creaky, narrow staircase leading to the second floor and turned to face the windows. Outside, the sky was a pale blue, shivering with ghostly sunshine, early light that wasn't quite real. The rolling hills were still covered in shadow. I looked at the clock. 5:10.

I went outside. The chilled air held all the promise of the new day and it scampered up my arms, raising goose bumps. The grass was still wet from the morning round of sprinklers and squirmed around my toes as I walked towards the beach. Although I was already cold, I sank my feet into the frigid waters of the lake, because the moment was too perfect not to. Inspired, I turned off my cellphone and let myself fall back against the faded planks of the dock and spread my arms wide, embracing the day that was about to be reborn. Ribbons of cloud bent and twisted through the sky. The world was fixed in a magical limbo - so bursting with life, but not yet awake. No, the only voices were the whispering of the waves and the wind and the rhythmic coo of my great-grandmother's dove.

Sitting alone, on the dock, I thought of her. On lazy summer mornings she would lounge on the porch, gazing out at the shimmering blue lake and the family she began. The dove echoed, somewhere off in the treetops - cu cu, cu cu, cu cu, cu cu. And she would call back. See here, Gannon, she said, my little dove has come to visit me.

She was so old - 97 in August - and was beginning to forget.

But just as the sky gave hints at what it might become, she too told us who she once was, in subtle, but strong ways. That was her - subtle, but strong. The wife of an apple farmer, mother of four children, and baker of the best damn pie on the east side of the mountains. She was 25 years old when she started a family on the shores of Lake Chelan, planting orchards and living the small-town American dream alongside the love of her life. She was tough, and she had to be - to live through the turmoil of the 20th century, corral four rowdy children into compliance, and help run the family business. When I was younger, my sister and I would gather on the carpet around her, eager, and she told us stories of the world she had lived in; stories about raising our grandmother and surviving the war and how sometimes she would just get in her car and drive because she was so, so free. She told us about the scent of spring in the orchards and pushing her grandchildren in a wheelbarrow filled with crackling red leaves and everything that happened before we were born. Over the years, the one-story house her husband had built for her ballooned into a three-story home, filling itself with voices and with memories.

As the head of the family, she was loving and watchful; subtle, but strong. And now here she was, softening in the sun as her memory faded, calling back to a dove which she didn't really own, but which was free, free as she once was, and as we all wish to be.

I wondered what it would be like to live that long. To see your whole life, looking back, a tapestry of elation and doubt.

Somewhere in her addled mind, my great-grandma knew so much - more than anyone younger could ever know. She knew the regrets that gnaw at your conscience, the pain of watching her friends, husband, and sons die before her eyes, the strength required to do what is right, to lead, to love, and to forgive. The world she had lived in was a world long gone; it had shifted little by little, under the cover of night, until one day she opened her eyes and found herself stranded. I'm sure she thought a lot, and her wisdom-filled mind was bursting like the morning sky that yawned before me. But she couldn't let her thoughts out of her head, so I would have to find the truths of this world myself.

Just then, the first rays of dawn alighted on the mountaintops, across the waters which now were a mirror to the brightening sky.

I watched as the hills were painted in a tangerine light, and each crag and crest and canyon was filled, and their features shone and came to life. The sunrise is the death of the past and the birth of the future, but the past never really dies; it stays with you, guiding you, inspiring you, reminding you who you are.

So, as the sun rose higher, spilling over the peaks and valleys, and the world began to wake up, I made a promise - to live life to the fullest, every day that I could, so that when I sat on the porch calling to some far-off dove, I would be happy. A promise to myself, and to my great-grandmother.

Gannon Forsberg is the 16 year-old great-grandson of Helen K. Clements - a long time (+ 70 year) Chelan resident - who died recently.

Buffalo and other nonsense

There is a video making the rounds on Facebook about how the Army and white settlers once killed as many buffalo as they could in order to punish Native Americans who depended on the bison for food and clothing. There is undoubtedly some degree of truth in the story but it is entirely irrelevant to modern American life.

There are other stories about how we intentionally gave Indians blankets that were infected with smallpox in an effort to commit genocide. That one always baffles me because I am unclear how the evil white men who handled those blankets were able to escape infection themselves. This occurred before we had immunization for smallpox.

IN MY OPINION
Bill Forhan

I don't doubt that we passed smallpox and other diseases to Native Americans but it was more likely the result of ignorance about how disease was passed than an intentional plan of biological warfare.

More importantly why are these stories even important today? Have we not made progress in our efforts to become a more just and enlightened society?

It seems to be a part of our human condition that we need to wallow in guilt regardless of whether we have individual culpability or not.

In another Facebook post I saw one critic of American life challenge current immigration policy with WWJD? In other words, "What Would Jesus Do?" It's a fair question although I doubt the individual using it actually had a very deep understanding of the teachings of Jesus.

Jesus also said, "Why do you look at the speck of sawdust in your brother's eye and pay no attention to the plank in your own eye?" (Luke 6:41) In other words, make sure your own house is clean before you criticize others.

In a free society we are exposed everyday to many false and twisted premises. We must all get better at challenging these misleading and often meaningless stories. History has much to teach us but it is only useful if we can separate the evil intentions from the good ones.

Today we are often confronted with a number of media outlets and political leaders that either twist the truth to fit their own personal agenda or just don't understand the issues well enough to see the real truth.

We are also victims of our need for instant clarity. Too often complicated issues like the negotiations with North Korea are reported on by people who either have little or no understanding of the issues, or by people who have failed at successfully addressing the problem in the past.

I am hopeful that President Trump has begun a process that will ultimately make the world a safer place. I hope he has begun a process that will result in a better quality of life to the people of North Korea. Unfortunately, it will be decades before we see the true results.

Let's not focus on the mistakes and missteps of previous generations but on the successes that have resulted in improving our quality of life.

America is the shining house on the hill. The symbol of hope to many, but we cannot take on all of the world's poor and disenfranchised. We must find ways to inspire other world leaders that building a caring and tolerant society is a much better course to becoming a revered leader.

It is far past time we got over wallowing in those parts of our history that no longer define us. It is time we celebrated the contributions our free society has brought to a warring and conflicted world.

America has far more to be proud of than ashamed of.

Manson fourth graders tour Chelan County Museum and Pioneer Village in Cashmere

Photos by Kristie McClanahan

Manson fourth graders toured the Chelan County Museum and Pioneer Village in Cashmere on June 1. The upper floor of the museum, Willis Carvey Wing that was built in 1958, is dedicated to the local American artifacts that date as far back to 200 years to 9,000 years of a local tribes. The class learned the meaning of a few of the city names one is Wenatchee pronounced "with nit chee" meaning where the water gushed. Chelan- meaning deep water, and Entiat- meaning grassy water. While the class went through their tour they were also told that Cashmere fourth grade class spent the day on site in the old one room school house doing their studies for the day dressed in period clothing. BELOW: Mr. Fred Harvey, the classes tour guide through the museum, explains to the class what the pictograph on the rock means. He says it tells a story of a one family day hunt over 2,000 years ago. Harvey states that there are two adults 3 children and a dog. On this day hunt they ended up gathering one elk, a bighorn sheep and three deer. Harvey also told the class that he can speak several different languages including Lakota and Salish.
