CHELAN – EMS Director Karl Jonasson has retired after 28 years of service with Chelan Emergency Medical Services (CEMS). His career was celebrated with friends and family Saturday, Sept. 16 in Chelan. The gathering filled the residential lot with joy and laughter.

Ray Eickmeyer, successor to Jonasson, began a moment of sharing by highlighting the many qualities of his predecessor, and stressing the impact he had on the community. “After 28 years,” started Eickmeyer, “by my calculations you have saved around 30,000 lives.” The impactful statement brought a moment of realization of the lives saved. Eickmeyer concluded his statements with a final tone call out. Story after story was shared on the many ways Jonasson has gone above and beyond the call, out of honor and ethic. In honor of the dedication Jonasson put into his career, Allen Anderson, along with others, presented a shadow box with uniform, stethoscope, a photograph and patches for the recent retiree.

City Council passes Sheriff’s contract, hears presentations on HDCA, Comp Plan

“I do want to accommodate tourism ... but I want to accommodate residents first.” – Councilwoman Wendy Isenhart

CHELAN – City council gathered Tuesday, Sept. 12 at City Hall for a regularly scheduled board meeting. Before commencing the special presentations on the agenda for the night, Council took a moment to hear citizen comments.

•John J Fragnito III approached the podium, requesting a moment of the Council’s time. “I just wanted to talk about my ERUs at my apartment building that I tore down,” He began, referring to the building that was located on Sanders Street, and taken down last year, “basically the way it is now is you pay your whole bill or you lose your ERUs.” He continued by requesting a discounted monthly fee for water and sewer services, without having to pay the standard amount that he was paying when the building was still standing. Fragnito left without an answer, however Mayor Mike Cooney requested that he come back later in the week to continue the discussion, and stated “I just want to put it out there that you did the right thing, we’ve worked with you to make sure this happened and will continue to do so.”

•Steve Kline representing the Friends of Lake Chelan, stood to make a brief statement of his opinion on two sections of the stated additions to the Economic Development element of the Comprehensive Plan, “we especially support the goal ED-Six ‘Enhance Chelan livability for a range of households ... and are really excited about policy ED-Five 1-2 ‘to enhance the city’s park and recreation system for residents and visitors’ ... we are extremely interested in how you intend to accomplish these policies and look forward to your progress,” concluded Kline.

•John Olson, also with the Friends of Lake Chelan, was last to take the podium during the citizen comment segment. “This is the Friends of Lake Chelan response to the Goodfellow Brothers Sept. 6 article in Go Lake Chelan,” he began. “The Lake Chelan that we know was created for public benefit ... (now) over 99% of the shoreline in Chelan is privately owned, creating immense difficulty in public access to the lake.” Olson summed up his response by questioning the Goodfellow Brothers statement on their stated endearment for Lake Chelan, “then give the property to the people, let the city buy it, or build a park and put

Port District of Chelan County discusses strategic project plans

By ERIN ROSSELL, STAFF WRITER

CHELAN – The Port District of Chelan County met Wednesday, Sept. 13 at Chelan Council Chambers to discuss the Strategic Plan draft, emphasizing goals in their three lines of business: Pangborn Airport, Commercial and Industrial Real Estate, and Economic Development. The plan outlines strategies that are intended to promote business expansion, job growth, and the overall economy within Chelan County. “We would like to get your input about our plan, what we did right, what we did wrong, and what we may have missed,” said Commission President Donn Etherington. The purpose of the meetings is to share the plan, explained Executive Director Patrick Jones, “we really want people to understand what we’re trying to do and any help with improving what we’re intending to do would be greatly appreciated.”

The meeting commenced with a brief explanation of what power and responsibilities ports have, and their importance within communities. Ports retain the power to tax and power to take imminent domain, and also maintain the ability to build commercial infrastructures and facilities. The Port District of Chelan County has an Associate Development Organization (ADO) responsibility, in which they act as partner to the state, and pursue businesses and opportunities that support the state’s activities within the county. This aspect of the port takes the place of an Economic Development board, which disbanded over a decade ago.

Several topics and goals were discussed in the three your name on it and people will love you forever," he concluded.

Historical Downtown Chelan Association

The Historical Downtown Chelan Association (HDCA) gave the first of two presentations for Councilmembers consideration. The purpose of HDCA is to "develop and promote the historic downtown core of Chelan by creating an inviting and economically vibrant community center while emphasizing enhancement and preservation of the town's historic features," as stated on their website. "We look at ourselves as the keeper of old traditions, the creator of new traditions, and having the responsibility of preserving and promoting the historical downtown area," HDCA Director Jessie Simmons emphasized. The non-profit organization is funded by membership fees, fundraisers, grants and credits, as well as the City of Chelan.

"This year the National Main Street Program commissioned a financial analysis and found that for every dollar they put in to the Main Street program, they got $12.73 in tax revenue returned ... the state said this number is generally only about $3 - 4, and this is specifically Washington's Main Streets. Chelan is one of only 16 communities in Washington that was taken into account in that analysis," she said, then added "I think this shows that the money is being put into good use." The HDCA summed up activities and accomplishments covering the last 18 months, then described some of the exciting events in the near future, one of which is a historical plaque program. The brass plated historical plaques will be placed on four historical features downtown Chelan: The Ruby Theatre, Campbell's Resort, St. Andrews Church, and the Old Bridge according to HDCA Chairmember Linda Van Lunsen, then added "Our intent with this board is to show our community how we're trying to make a difference and invest back in our community." Other upcoming features include improved holiday lighting and the additions of Festival of Trees and a Breakfast with Santa for the Christmas season. $60,000 of the requested City of Chelan pledge of $80,000 is redirected back to the City through a B&O tax credit for contributing. This leaves just a $20,000 out of pocket cost to the City of Chelan. "As you can see we are a growing organization with huge aspirations," concluded Van Lunsen after requesting the continued pledge amount.

Lake Chelan Arts Council
Barb Koenig with the Lake Chelan Arts Council requested the Council's consideration for purchase and placement of a 60-inch metal cellist sculpture. Koenig is asking for consideration to place the sculpture at the corner of E. Woodin Avenue and N. Columbia Street. The Arts Council and City of Chelan currently both contribute $600 a month to a public arts fund for purposes of purchase, placement, insurance of art pieces for public display.

Chelan County Sheriff's Office

City councilmembers passed a four-year contractual agreement with the Chelan County Sheriff's Office for law enforcement services, after presentations and meetings between the Sheriff's Office and City Council.

The current contract is set to expire on Dec. 31. "The Mayor and myself have had multiple visits with the Sheriff and staff and actually traveled to Wenatchee on August 30 to meet with the Sheriff, the city administrator to discuss all the charges and various touchups," said City Administrator Mike Jackson. "No city is getting a better deal than the City of Chelan," he said referring to the fixed percentage rate and cost for the contracted services. The variable with all of the cities is the number of full-time equivalent (FTE) hours that we contract with, but the cost per officer remains the same throughout the cities. Before agreeing to the contract, the City added language to a few areas within the agreement, including stressing an emphasis of services during tourist season from Memorial Day through Labor Day, and allowing the City the opportunity to interview and make suggestions for supervisory candidates, as well as recommendations for the potential removal of a supervisor, but the final decision will remain at the Sheriff's discretion.

Comprehensive Plan

Concluding the night's agenda was Lisa Grueter with Berk Consulting and City of Chelan Planning Director Craig Gildroy with a presentation of revisions and amendments on the proposal for the city's 2017 Comprehensive Plan. "Tonight, will start the city council's deliberation on the planning commission's recommended comprehensive plan regulations ... if you would like to add something new, then it would require a new public hearing," explained Gildroy. "City council will begin deliberations after the presentation." One of the first areas of change discussed during the presentation was the request from Clint Campbell at the Aug. 22 meeting to withdraw his rezoning request. Currently, the property is zoned single-family residential (R-L), and originally asked for a rezoning to multi-family residential (R-M). Campbell requested withdrawing the rezoning preference, and councilmembers gave consensus to approve the action. Shortly after, Councilwoman Wendy Isenhardt voiced concern on behalf of residents in the Golf Course Road/Campbell Avenue area. According to Isenhardt, there had been angst voiced at the proposal of rezoning the current residential area to tourist accommodation (T-A), "I do want to accommodate tourism," she stated, "but I want to accommodate residents first."

There are 15 areas in the Comprehensive Plan that have key changes proposed, including Urban Growth Area (UGA) reductions, added areas of R-M and T-A, Downtown Mixed Resi-

Chelan City councilmembers passed a four-year contractual agreement with the Chelan County Sheriff Department for law enforcement services, after presentations and meetings between the Sheriff's Office and City Council dential (DMR), and small additions to the Special Use District (SUD) near Lord Acres.

The presentation included bar graphs demonstrating zoning designations with R-L being the most designated at 1,674 acres, and T-A at second with 1,159 acres, as well as a separate bar graph of developable land designated as T-A (primarily the Butte) with 1,021 acres and R-L second with 910 acres. Rezoning of the area north of Apple Blossom Center from Warehouse Industrial (W-I) to R-M was proposed, as well as the Lafferty area above Lakeside where the property owners voiced preference for a T-A zoning, however the planning commission recommended R-M as a more suitable option, for year-round residential options.

One of the bigger topics discussed in the plan update, was the zoning and intent of the Butte. "Identified through visioning as an important area for community character and views," as stated in the presentation. The area has extensive steep slopes, ravines, high and moderate wildland fire risk and is lacking utilities. The proposed approach for this area would include allowing development and density comparable to Bear Mountain which includes a resort, recreational spots, vineyards and single family homes with base density at 1 density unit (du)/5 acres (ac) unclustered, 1 du/1 ac clustered, density bonus for recreation and affordable housing at 1.5/du/ac, or a resort plan for greater density by Conditional Use Permit (CUP) at 4-8.7 du/ac. "Depending on density and rate of growth, future development on Butte could add 50 percent to over 300 percent to the city's current dwelling units," explained Grueter. The presentation provided three separate examples of clustering methods. The first example was of Issaquah Highlands which is a high-density R-M zone with 490 acres in city, and when complete could contain 3,250 residential units. This example provoked an unsatisfactory reaction from both council members and the audience. Second example showed Santa Lucia Preserve, California. The 20,000 acres holds 300 home sites and offers 100 miles of hiking, biking and equestrian trails, lodging, and a golf course. The last example included Cave B out of Grant County. The spread-out resort appeared to be the lowest density option of the three, but still boasted 55 guestrooms, 15 stand-alone cliff houses, 12 cavern rooms, and 25 desert yurts.

Commercial Waterfront (C-W) Amendments were also discussed, with the addition of residential/mixed use developments including water dependent/oriented commercial uses together with single family or multi-family uses while promoting public access for significant numbers of the public and/or providing an ecological restoration. Other use changes to this category included the added allowance for parks and playgrounds and a reduction from standard height by 10 feet.

Presentation did not complete due to time, but the remaining slides were briefly skimmed over, including topics in Affordable Housing Incentives, WI Workforce Housing, Small Town Chelan: Height, Density and more. These will be covered in depth at the next public hearing on Tuesday, Sept. 26 at 6 p.m. in Council Chambers at City Hall.

Aquatic Supervisor Viki Downey shared statistics from the Learn to Swim program for this year. According to Downey, a total of 537 students and 13 adults took advantage of the free swimming lessons. The Lake Chelan Swim also produced a great turnout, despite the moderate wind in the valley. During the Chelan Swim event, Saturday Sept. 9 in Manson, 33 of the 39 participants completed the course.

Park Improvements and Manson Bay Waterfront Revitalization Project.

The parks board reviewed and discussed an interlocal agreement draft from the Port District of Chelan County. After review, it was unanimously decided that Manson Parks board members would be in attendance at the Port's Oct. 3 meeting to present the Waterfront Revitalization Project and request port support. Board members reviewed and approved an on-call contract with Pacific Engineering out of Wenatchee. The engineering group offers a multitude of services to aide in the Waterfront Revitalization project

PUD Commissioners approve Lake Chelan water rights agreement with DOE

WENATCHEE - Chelan County PUD Commissioners Tuesday approved two agreements related to the Lake Chelan water rights reserve between the Chelan PUD and the Washington State Dept. of Ecology (Ecology): (1) Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) Related to Water Rights Allocations from the Lake Chelan and Reserve Accounting, along with (2) the first Amendment Concerning Water Right Certificate #319 with Ecology. The commissioners first were briefed on the MOU and Amendment at their Aug. 7 commission meeting <<http://www.chelan-pud.org/about-us/newsroom/news/2017/08/08/two-new-power-contracts-will-add-40-million-to-pud-bottom-line>>.

Chelan County submitted public comment at the Sept. 5 Commission meeting public session in support of the Agreements. No additional public comment was received.

Commissioner Ann Congdon thanked PUD staff Marcie Clement, Michelle Smith and Karen Wiggum for their work on the agreement stating that it was an important step to move the process forward and to ensure an annual account-

The action allows Ecology and Chelan County to move ahead to begin a Cost Reimbursement program in order to begin assessing and processing long-standing water permit applications for the Lake Chelan Water Basin. The agreements between Chelan PUD and Ecology affirm and maintain Chelan PUD's commitment to provide 65,000 acre-feet of water per year from Lake Chelan (Lake Chelan Reserve) - as administered by Ecology. It also establishes business rules for identifying both surface and groundwater rights covered by the Lake Chelan Reserve; identifies the boundaries of the Lake Chelan

Water Basin where the Lake Chelan Reserve applies; and provides for a transparent ongoing accounting of water rights issued from the Lake Chelan Reserve. The agreements protect Chelan PUD's hydropower water right for the Lake Chelan Hydro Project. The agreements establish an estimated number for the remaining amount available for water rights. In addition, it establishes an annual accounting by Ecology of remaining water, based on the agreed-to methodology to update the amount available.

areas of business covered by the Port. Highlights of some of the upcoming projects and goals of the Port's 7-year project plan include:

- Economic Development Goals 1.1 To "be recognized as the 'go to' entity and reliable business partner representing greater Chelan County for business expansion and in-bound investment while investing in community infrastructure," and 1.2 to "partner with other effective regional entities in a local economic development program that results in jobs and new investment." Both goals are currently in progress, and are continuing to be expanded on. "(We are) communicating with local private businesses already established in the county or who want to relocate to the county, but the general concern is the lack of turnkey ready commercial real estate in the area," explained Jones.
- Real Estate Goal 2.1: To "maintain a "ready to go" port real property inventory to accommodate timely local and in-bound investment decisions that complement the economic development priorities of the county and region." This goal is projected to be started/completed in 2018.
- Pangborn Memorial Airport Goals 3.3: To "increase commercial flight frequency and destination selection as well as reliability for the business and pleasure traveler of Chelan County while maintaining the viability of general aviation operations." There are currently three trips to Seattle a day with Alaska Airlines, with an 85 percent load factor, meaning 85 percent of available seats are filled. The Port anticipates Alaska Airlines adding frequency, given the success of the flights, and are also looking at establishing new routes including a Pangborn to San Francisco flight.

Mayor Mike Cooney asked why people aren't contacting the Port and the city to bring their business to Chelan. Port Commissioner Rory Turner suggested a possible cause, "I think we're seeing this now Mike, and I think it has to do with the technology needed to get the folks over the pass from Seattle." Commissioner JC Baldwin then provided input on the subject, "we're talking about millennials," she said, "that have these small companies and they're tired of being over there (on the coast) ... these millennials or companies want what they have over there, but they don't want to be over there anymore, they want to be here, where they can recreate." Baldwin continued by suggested that Wenatchee appeared to be closer to what they're used to having, rather than Leavenworth or Chelan, in terms of a live, work, play area. "Part of our ADO effort, we are developing some new work elements into our plan and one of those elements includes establishing a five-industry connectivity: outdoor recreation, technology, real estate development, agriculture, and manufacturing. We want the business leadership from those sectors to tell us what we can do to help them succeed and expand, and also help us identify companies that they would like here in the community, maybe in the same sector but does not compete with them directly," explained Jones.

The Port commissioners also stated there have been previous conversations in regard to working with the city of Chelan in the build of a parking facility. It has also been working with Manson Parks and Recreation on the Waterfront Project.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Smart Meter hazards

Fair and balanced reporting is what we expect from the Mirror; however this coverage appeared one sided and failed to accurately report not only the actual reason this subject was on the City Council agenda but that other pertinent information was presented.

In fact, SmartMeterAwarenessGroup ("SMAG", a large group of community members concerned about critical impacts of SmartMeters) requested a slot on the Council agenda to present research and ultimately request the City of Chelan take actions to opt out of PUD's proposed SmartMeter installation in Chelan until they can offer an alternative that is safe/healthy for our community. In fairness, the Council subsequently invited the PUD to present an overview of their plan.

The PUD opened with a 15-minute standard presentation which was covered in detail by the Mirror; however, were readers made aware that 6 SMAG members presented over 30 minutes of documented research information? Not in the least.

The omitted presentations recited documented information on the overwhelmingly harmful effects of exposure to this technology cause:

Serious Health risks. Multitudes of symptoms/illnesses including cancer has been documented. Young and elderly are especially vulnerable.

Extreme fire hazards. To reduce costs, manufacturers of Smart Meters have removed crucial spark arresters. We cannot introduce such dangers to our extreme fire-prone area.

Detrimental effect on agriculture and environment. Wildlife and crops are affected. Bees, birds, butterflies are not surviving the EMFs from SmartMeters.

Personal privacy, security. PUD agrees overwhelming community concern exists here. Unfortunately they have no viable solution and will not guarantee our data will remain private.

The article stated there are "plenty of benefits" to SmartMeters. Without a doubt, hazards far outweigh any perceived benefits!

Also, "studies can seem somewhat intimidating". Hardly! Studies can be extremely enlightening!!

No simple answers to immigration reform

Facebook recently conducted a test to see if people on different sides of the issue could have civil discussions. The project, called "Talking Across Borders," put 60 people in a "private Facebook group" to test the ability of people to have a civil discussion about immigration.

Facebook reports that the test proved people could have a civil discussion about the issues involved, but that no minds were changed.

"The goal was not to change minds," said Eve Pearlman, co-founder of the Project. "The goal is to support people listening to and thinking about other people's views and perspectives and to do so in a way that avoids hostility, name calling and meanness that tends to dominate in online forums."

There is no doubt that our immigration laws are out of date. But failing to enforce our laws makes a mockery of our entire government and our representative democracy.

The problem is that it appears our elected representatives apparently have no desire to address the failings of our current system of immigration. Preferring instead to use the issue as a way to divide the country.

Each side of the political debate attempts to define the issue in the most divisive terms possible. For example, if you support elimination of the DACA program you are a racist and if support open borders then you hate America. Neither one of these positions is helpful in solving the problem.

First, we cannot allow just anyone to come here. It threatens our culture and in today's world the safety of our citizens.

On the other hand, opposing illegal immigration does not make you a hateful racist.

The truth is we need some immigration to help our economy thrive and grow. It doesn't matter what race the immigrant is but we do need to look at what skills and talents the immigrant brings with them. This is especially true when the labor participation rate is low as it is today. Citizens should get preference for available jobs. Immigration should be based on the skills and abilities the individual brings to our country. If citizens can't or won't do the work then we need to find carefully controlled systems that helps fill the need.

Immigration towards citizenship should be based on a merit system. Where the immigrant brings skills that are in short supply among our existing citizenry.

Low skilled immigrants should be given work visas that limit their stay and only when they have secured a job. The job would have to be reported to the Immigration Department and the employer would be required to notify Immigration when the individual's employment has ended. The worker would then have a fixed amount of time to secure an exit visa or be subject to arrest.

Chain migration must be outlawed. In other words, immigrants do not get to bring in their entire extended family. That is one of the problems with DACA. Once they are given some official status they can bring their entire families here.

All of this needs to be enforced with improved border security - including a wall in some areas.

Immigration is a difficult issue but calling each other names and ignoring the fact that there must be limits and controls placed on who, where and when someone can immigrate here must be addressed.

The problem here is if we don't think the law is fair then we need to call on our representatives to change it. Then we need to demand they do it. The current political practice of using this as a wedge issue to divide Americans must end.

Chelan High School Volleyball

An interview with Coach Jen Rainville

By ERIN ROSSELL, STAFF WRITER

Overall record last year: 9-6 Regular Season, 1-2 Post Season

Returning Players: Six overall returning players, with three key returners: Outsider Hitters Lexie Gleasman and Emma McLaren and Libero Ava Dickes.

Aging of team: Goats volleyball has four seniors with a powerhouse of experience.

Coaching Staff: Varsity Coach Jen Rainville, Junior Varsity Coach Melanie Froman, and C-Squad Coach Traci Hart.

Past and Present: "We were streaky toward the end of the season," Coach Rainville explained, "where he had some moments of great volleyball, then we would give up a few points ... we weren't consistent. So that's one thing that we're mindful of this year." Rainville expressed her eagerness and anticipation for this year's team, saying "I'm excited, we have so much potential."

Most anticipated game? "We look forward to every game, to every match," Rain-

Overall record last year: 3-7

Returning Players: Seven returning players on offense and eight returning on defense. Key returning players for the Goats includes OL/DL Hunter Lehmecker, LB/FB Matt Fitzpatrick, and WR/DB Conner Wilson.

Aging of team: Five seniors with 15 new additions to the team. One key returner, said Coach Domser, is QB/LB Quinn Stamps.

Coaching Staff: Head Coach Travis Domser, with Assistant Coaches Steve Stamps, Erik Romero, Jeff Chambers, Al Robinson, Derek Todd, and Wai Tim Peterson.

Past and Present: "Last year all of our seniors were skill kids, receivers, quarter backs, so we threw the ball a ton because we had five sophmores and a junior playing offensive line upfront ... we know that if you're going to be able to win in High School football you have to be able to run it and throw it. We've really focused on the weight room and looking at our players and what fits them best. We've had a couple tough weeks with some big 2A schools and we hang with them for a bit then they overpower us in the end. But we're excited to play Bellevue Christian this week and get back on track."

Most anticipated game? "Every single week is the most important game of the

Trojans go head to head on Goats turf

By ERIN ROSSELL, STAFF WRITER

CHELAN – The Goats hosted Manson Trojans for a start to finish battle between the local rivals Thursday, Sept. 14 at Mountain Goat Field. The Trojans brought out their defenses after allowing a goal to the Goats early in the first half. The second half brought intense defense from both Chelan and Manson, and both teams fought for control over the ball.

Chelan maintained possession of the ball for a majority of the game and defended their goal despite heavy efforts from the Trojans. The Goats took the win with a final score of 1-0.

Reclamation Seeks Comments on Middle Entiat Habitat Improvement Project

SUBMITTED BY ERIKA LOPEZ, BUREAU OF RECLAMATION

ENTIAT – The Bureau of Reclamation is seeking comments on a draft Environmental Assessment (EA) for a habitat improvement project on the Entiat River in Chelan County, Washington. The proposed project would enhance fish habitat and floodplain connection along a four-mile stretch of the river through the construction of large woody material structures, re-establishment of side channels, and removal of a levee. The project is intended to increase the amount of suitable habitat for fish and wildlife species that utilize the Entiat River with specific focus on fish listed under the Endangered Species Act.

The draft EA analyzes two actions: the Proposed Action (implementing the Project, as described above) and a No Action alternative (non-implementation). Reclamation is the lead agency for this draft EA and has prepared it in compliance with the National Environmental Policy Act.

The draft EA is available at <https://www.usbr.gov/pr/programs/ea/wash/midentiat/index.html>.

Please send written comments to Ms. Rebecca Thompson, project manager, Bureau of Reclamation, 1150 N. Curtis Road, Suite 100, Boise, ID 83706 or via email at rthompson@usbr.gov no later than Sept. 27, 2017.

If you have any questions about this project, please contact Ms. Thompson at (208) 378-5191.
