Chelan City Council members hear almost unanimous opinion from community concerning Comp Plan

"We will listen and we will hear." Mayor Mike Cooney

BY ERIN ROSSELL, STAFF WRITER

CHELAN - Chelan City Council members commenced the final public hearing on the city's Comprehensive Plan amendments and updates, Tuesday, August 22 at the Chelan High School Performing Art Center. Over 200 members of the community, filled the PAC as Council began reviewing the standard agenda items prior to hearing public comment.

After nearly a year, and now 24 public meetings on the Comprehensive Plan, the community outreach and opinion segment of the process will reach completion. Mayor Mike Cooney began explaining the procedure and the expected etiquette to the attendees, "The purpose of a public hearing is to receive public comment, and we're serious about that, we want to listen tonight," he explained then continued explaining that there will be no discussions at this time, the Council may ask questions or for clarification, but, "The hearing is not meant to be a discussion."

One by one individuals began taking place in line to be heard at the podium. First at the podium was Clint Campbell of No See Um Orchard, "before we get too far into the discussion tonight," he said, "we wanted to make sure that the council understood that No See Um Orchard has withdrawn its request for a rezone from a single family to a multi-family residential." Campbell continued by explaining the reasoning behind the withdrawn request, providing more time to listen to the neighborhood and gather more project support. "As a point of clarification," he concluded to ensure understanding, "our withdrawal doesn't affect the current status of our Tourist Accommodation request in the Comp Plan amendment draft."

After a couple brief statements from members of the community, Steve Kline, took the podium with one of the most impactful speeches of the night, judging by the reaction of fellow community members in the crowd.

"I represent the Friends of Lake Chelan and the hundreds of people who have signed petitions, and who have come before you and spoken at the Comp Plans and public forums over the year regarding public access to the lake and a park at the location." Kline began. He continued by stating concerns with the Goodfellow Brothers' 2010 project plan for the Three Fingers, which was on display in the lobby. "Being complete at 170 boat slips that will generate the 54 condominiums on the fingers will service approximately 400 people. Those people won't live here, and those people won't be part of the community." He stated, then began describing another alternative, "A

Chelan County Commissioners destroy marijuana farmers with strict new regulations

Growers vow to fight back with lawsuit

By Ian Dunn and GARY BÉGIN, STAFF WRITERS

WENATCHEE -- After hearing much public testimony, Chelan County Commissioners passed new regulations regarding the growing and processing of marijuana at the August 22 Chelan Commissioner's meeting. After the vote was tallied, some of the 30 or so audience members cried "jackass!" and "shame!" to no avail.

The winners in this skirmish were the handful of complaining homeowners wno uve near marijuana growers including newly elected Commissioner Kevin Overbay, who has a marijuana grower for a neighbor in Malaga. Despite that fact, he did not recuse himself from voting against the growers who are concerned the new regulations will put nearly all of them out of business. "It's crazy. We've been in business since 2013. We followed all the rules and regulations. We built accordingly and got permitted. Now, we're just done. We have 20 full-time employees that no longer have jobs," said Josh Bitterman of Evergreen Production in Monitor. "They zoned us out. We got the building. We went into the zoning they told us we could build in. Now, we're zoned out."

NCWEDD welcomes 'creative' guests at monthly meeting

BY ERIN ROSSELL STAFF WRITER

CHELAN - The North Central Washington Economic Development District (NCWEDD) convened for a regular monthly meeting, Wednesday, August 9, at Chelan City Hall. The meeting covered several subjects including finances, upcoming meetings, and a brief mentioning without update valley. "Creative workers on Plug-In NCW, and Route 97 Tourism projects.

Joining the NCWEDD committee were special guests, Karen Dawn Dean, Scott Bailey, and Smoker Marchand. Dean, with the support of Bailey and Marchand, brought a presentation focusing on promoting creative industries, and nurturing a creative atmosphere in the in creative enterprises promotes wealth," said Dean, then added "collectively, what we're missing is an economic and cultural development agency." The intent of the presentation was to bring an awareness to the need for a common area for creative minds to gather, purchase supplies, and sell products. Following the presentation, the regular agenda began. A majority of time was spent discussing various financial information and concerns regarding the NCWEDD's status and stability. While still waiting on responses from three grants applied for between May and July, the Ameriprise, EDA, and USDA grants, it's anticipated that the results will be returned within the month. Executive Director Karen Francis-McWhite continued through the lists of expenses and revenues before briefly stopping at membership dues. "There are several towns that have not yet paid the 2017 dues," said Francis-McWhite, then proceeded to explain that these towns were waiting to ascertain the stability of the development district.

In a short interview with the Lake Chelan Mirror. Francis-McWhite clarified this situation stating "the EDD was going through a bit of a transition, I'm not too worried about it though," and reassured that the withholding of membership dues is solely a temporary situation until the towns begin to feel secure in their investment again.

Chair Doug England said he would have liked to keep the ban in place prohibiting new marijuana growing operations.

"Even though I'm not a proponent of the use of marijuana, that has not been our intent or our purpose. This regulation in no way affects the retail sale of marijuana in Chelan County. I would like to have left it just as it is, however, that is not an option," England said. "I will take only partial blame for that. The three commissioners, none of us has ever been involved in the production of marijuana. We were assured by the industry that odor would not be a problem. In fact, a comment was made they would not even know we were there."

Not every existing grow in Chelan County is going to fit these new regulations, England said.

"It would be nice to simply say we are going to ban jerks in Chelan County and anybody that is nice and respectful of neighbors can continue," England said. "That's not the way code can be written. That's not the way code can be enforced. It's also definitely a concern, but not an overriding consideration that production could be more expensive than it has been in the past, but that is a fact of business.'

When this process began, the commission made no assurances, said Commissioner Keith Goehner. Chelan County did not have regulations nor had permitted any cannabis activities before. The regulations do set parameters for what is acceptable for growing marijuana in Chelan County, he said.

"Code is put in place, but it is also amendable. As time lapses, we should be revisiting it to see if it is working," Goehner said. He said it was not an easy task to come up with regulations. There were people on both sides of the issue expressing their concerns, both for the industry and against it.

Nick Paton - head grower for Double Delicious in Malaga

"As our resolution states, it really covers a lot of the areas that was uncertainties for us as counties, not just Chelan County, but counties statewide. When we talk with our fellow commissioners. they are finding some of the same issues," Goehner said. "Dealing with Chelan County is somewhat unique because of the topography. We've made the commitment to try and do our best to come up with standards that allow for some production in appropriate places."

Overbay stated, "It's very unfortunate. It's unfortunate we had to get to a place where these regulations had to be put into place in order to conduct the businesses and make sure the quality of life in Chelan County is maintained. The whole purpose of I-502 was to decriminalize the possession and growing of marijuana. The other was to provide a tax base for services. The third was to try and diminish a black market effect that we have. I don't know if any or all of that has been achieved."

"... it's never been my intent to agree to something that would diminish an industry. It would be easy for this commission to adopt nothing, but that is nothing any of the three of us wanted to do. We wanted to see an industry be able to be here in Chelan County. Unfortunately, finding middle ground. You have very little space," Overbay said.

"My hope is, as we work through this ... rules and regulations can change," Overbay concluded.

Bitterman said they have over $1 million invested into their business. At this point, a lawsuit is their only option.

"What else can we do? There's no way to get your money back. It's not good for any of us. There's not going to be any grows left," Bitterman said.

Nick Paton is the head grower for Double Delicious in Malaga. He felt like the commission decided to listen to the small group of residential complainers.

"We're in an agricultural community. We may not be considered agriculture, but we are regulated by the U.S. Department of Agriculture. I have to have a pesticide license to use any type of chemicals at the facility," Paton said. "If they were to regulate this business the same way they do a microbrewery, what are they going to do because they smell? Neighbors don't like them, but they are still going to allow revenue on the retail side. They are still going to allow the stores.'

Not a single business would able to continue to operate under the new regulations, Paton said. He calls it spot zoning, which would put the existing 44 operations out of business. The Central Washington Grower's Association is planning to get back what's been lost, Paton said.

Lee Duncan - owner of Manna Productions

I-502 passed in 2012, including carrying a majority in Chelan County, Paton pointed out.

"The county commissioners said they would allow businesses to operate. They said they would add no extra hindrances or extra regulation. They would simply follow state law. These businesses came in and dumped fortunes, took outside investments," Paton said. "This is under a 20-year plan or longer to recoup some of these investments. A few years later, they completely flip flopped. They banned until they could figure out extensive regulation, which is what they just put forth. They will no longer allow any new businesses to come in or expansion of businesses."

Paton said the commissioners make it sound like all you have to do is follow the regulations, but it's not that simple.

"Maybe they are in the wrong zoning or they are too close to their neighbors. Maybe their building doesn't have a 35-foot setback. Our building was built in 1907 right next to the train tracks. We can't just pick up and move to meet their criteria," Paton said. "You go through the list of each producer/processors and why they would fail. There is not a single one that meets the criteria. There might be handful who would have to do extensive renovations that most can't afford."

Caitlein Ryan of Seven Hills Farm, president of the Central Washington Grower's Association, said she was not surprised at the commission's decision. She said this is what

"A few made comments about it not being okay to let the ban lapse. Essentially they've just written code that has the exact same affect in the end," Ryan said. "My feeling they wanted from the outset.

is they get to pat themselves on the back, but this has just brought us to the exact same end. All of us have put in quite a lot of work. We've been here hours and hours on end for the last two years, right along side of them, giving them lots of information to come up with a real sensible code. It all fell on deaf ears, for the most part."

A lot of other counties have grandfathered this in, she said, Snohomish, Grant, Douglas, Okanogan, counties that look very similar to Chelan County. Those counties are in a similar position, but have not decided to take similar action, Ryan noted.

Moving forward, Ryan said they have a lawsuit on the books that they have been holding off on until this new code was created. During that "holding off period" were months of meetings between the opposing sides meant to mediate the issues, but the growers feel like they got the short end of the stick.

"This code is written with lots of crazy exceptions. It will make our life easy once we get to court. That is where we are headed," Ryan said.

Lee Duncan, owner of Manna Productions, a tier one indoor grow in Malaga and vicepresident of the CWGA, said the new regulations amount to a little more than spot zoning, and more or less, a ban. Out of the 44 farms in Chelan County, only one, he figures, can meet the regulations.

One farm does not amount to an industry, Duncan said.

"I meet the zoning, but I don't meet the setback on one side. I am probably one of two farms that could get a variance. I just feel like they'll pull the rug out from under us some other way. 'Suzie' said you smell, so you're done," Duncan said. "I'll stay in the lawsuit as long as I can. We're going to move forward with it asap. It has affected me greatly over the past year-and-a-half because we do the legwork for all this "

Duncan said they've come to 90 percent of the meetings. He feels like Overbay is trying to root the industry out of the county.

"Not even the two people that spoke against us at the last meeting like the resolution. No one has said shut all the farms down, but that's exactly what they've done," Duncan said. "A dereliction of duty by all three commissioners. They are going to use taxpayer dollars to fight a fight that easily could have been resolved through cooperation, but they never allowed it. They strategically divided this community."

Lifetime friendships are forged here, and hundreds of thousands of memories are made here for locals and visitors alike, not just 400 people." Kline began describing actions taken by the Friends of Lake Chelan, in an effort to bring awareness to the "dire need for public water access." "The city Attorney ... summed it up the best 'the process to acquire the property is legal, and it can be done' the city attorney goes on to say the City Council, in order to make this happen, must exercise just two words 'political will."

Kline then tells of the seven parcels that were used to create the No See Um roundabout. "The Department of Transportation, with the help of the City of Chelan, used imminent domain on seven parcels to make the No See Um roundabout. The council has said this has to do with what the community wants, and if they fall short, two other words will be used on this property, and they're going to be these," Kline then held up a "No Trespassing" sign and displays it throughout the room, then concluded "and our opportunity for open lake access will be lost forever." As Kline left the podium to return to his seat, the audience of community members produced an exuberant round of applause in support and appreciation.

As the evening continued with more opinions and speeches, Lynette Grandy, of Chelan, took a moment at the podium. "The Comp Plan includes the city's housing plan and housing vision statement," she began, "it includes the recommendation that they city provide regulatory guidance and incentives to actively encourage the development of working class housing." Grandy continued by explaining concerns with the minimal presence of affordable housing in the community, and the hardships it is causing families and employers alike. "Even the city park's department could not fill all their slots, and at times had to have workers work overtime to get the job done because of all the tourists," Grandy stated, then concluded with "everyone knows that affordable housing is needed by no one wants it in their backyard."

Jody Reid, of Chelan, stepped up to the podium. Reid, a caretaker of the elderly, expressed her concern and the concerns of her clients in regard to the rezoning recommendations. She began by stating that a majority of the single-family residences are owned or being occupied by the elderly. "The unintended consequences of the property taxes rising when the multi-family units come in next door and across the street is going to put these people out of their homes, it's already causing a great deal of fear," she said, then added, "I just want to know ... that you really have considered everyone who lives

We have a homelessness issue," stated Reid, then concluded, "I want to see us address that first, the needs of the committed residences of this town, before we begin putting our energy into how to pack in more tourist bodies."

Chelan City Council will meet again, at City Hall, Tuesday Sept. 12 and 26 at 6 p.m.

There will be no more public comments taken in regard to the Comprehensive Plan, however the next meetings are scheduled for deliberation.

Cougar sighted near the Yacht Club, The Cove

BY RUTH KEYS, STAFF WRITER

CHELAN - A cougar killed a small dog on Tuesday, August 22, on the south side of Lake Chelan in the area between The Cove and the Lake Chelan Yacht Club. The cougar jumped over the fence into the yard to reach the dog belonging to the grandmother of Jeff Boynton who lives on South Lakeshore Road. The cougar was spotted again on Sunday, August 27 in the area where the large culvert goes under the road.

The Department of Wildlife has been notified.

Woodstock Anniversary 2017 raises funds for CVH TEE TIME

BY ERIN ROSSELL, STAFF WRITER

CHELAN - Watson's Alpenhorn Café hosted a successful fundraiser for Chelan Valley Hope (CVH), Saturday Aug. 26. CVH is funded through donations and fundraising events, and is an assistance, advocacy and referral program for individuals and families within the valley.

The 2017 Woodstock Anniversary Concert brought crowds from throughout the valley with music and attire straight from 1969. The festivities included a costume contest, silent auction, food and beverages, and live music from local artists including Waterdog, Brittany Jean, and Old Friends. Fortyeight years after the historical Woodstock performances in Bethel, New York, the mood and atmosphere was continued in the "Fun-Raiser" benefit concert for CVH. Total proceeds for the event were not available at the time of publication, however the information will be made available at lakechelanmirror. com. For more information on Chelan Valley Hope call (509) 888-2114 for ways to contribute or assistance.

August 17

CHELAN - The 2017 Ladies Club golf championship is in the books. Four good friends (two tied going into the day) vied for the title but tough and steady 2016 champ April Talley held on to become club champion for her ninth time. Congratulations to April. Runner-up honors go to Barb Rayburn. Division winners were Carol Ferguson, Div. 1; Joni Dedo, Div. 2 (scorecard playoff over Judy Johanson); and Karen Erickson, Div. 3. Gail Bender won low net of the field for the marathon three rounds of golf.

Meanwhile in Medal Play (low gross and net of the field and low net by division). April Talley claimed the low gross for the day and Gail Peterson and Alice Soma tied for low net of the field. Candace Farnsworth won 1st in Div. 1 followed by Barb Rayburn in 2nd. Susie Clausen took 1st in Div. 2 with Joni Dedo and Gail Bender tying for 2nd. Jane Storms won Div 3 Gail Peterson holed the only birdie of the day and three landed chip-ins: Gail Bender, Gail Peterson, and Maggie Stalcup. The Ladies Division thanks Joni Dedo for efficiently organizing and running the championship rounds.

although it was a hot, humid day, the team did well. The Chelan ladies maintained their first place for Net points and second in overall points. The girls are third in gross points.

The anchor team of Carol and Gail did so well that they won first place honey pot money. To clarify, when they play, all chip in $2 for the honeypot. The two-person team that wins the most points for the day wins honeypot money. To win first is a great accomplishment so kudos to Carol and Gail. Next month they play the strong Lakeview team in Leavenworth.

Play August 24 was 7 and F's (total of holes beginning with a T or an F less ¹/₂ handicap). Nineteen players competed. Janet Foyle won Div. 1 while Joan Pierce placed 1st in Div. 2. Toni Berry (welcome back, Toni!) took 2nd place with Karen Holst in 3rd. Jane Storms and Karen Erickson tied for 1st in Div. 3.

Community Voices

Colin Kaepernick has rights, but 'Black'-mail is illegal

Poor Colin Kaepernick - he hasn't been given a multi-million dollar contract yet. The NFL quarterback rocketed to fame as he knelt during the National Anthem last season to support Black Lives Matter and protest police shootings of Black men.

I applaud his civil rights stance and right of free speech, but I disagree that he used the NFL stage as his platform to stage his fealty to that cause.

My point is a simple one: Does every American (not including columnists) have the right to use their employer's business as a venue to voice their own personal opinions?

Kaepernick could easily have marched with protesters in any number of cities. He could have donated millions to support anti-poverty programs such as food banks and pre-school education to get single parents to work and give their kids a head start in school.

What he did was clever and achieved great bang for the buck, but the buck wasn't and isn't his to spend. Millions of Americans were held captive to this guy's protest and in that, he can claim a victory.

On the other hand, I equally support the right of every NFL owner to shun Kaepernick, especially if he embarrasses the fans and other players by denying the glory that is inherent whenever that flag is raised and that anthem played.

What we have here folks, is the fascism of the left. The left wing is using Kaepernick to tell millions of Americans that they are demanding their free speech or else the protests will continue, but that also means the free speech of the owners not to hire or play him is simultaneously being denied.

Left wing blackmail is nothing new. The shame of it is that many of my liberal friends don't even get the point. Owners and other fans have just as much right not to play Kaepernick or root for his team or allow him a spot on the roster.

There is no right that forces the owner of a business to hire someone they fundamentally disagree with. Perhaps Kaepernick can get a government job where an agency is forced to hire because of so-called affirmative action laws, but surprise, surprise - political speech is banned in the Civil Service.

Get yourself another venue Kaepernick and protest all you want. Run for political office or perhaps get a job in the Canadian Football League.

Get yourself a placard and march tirelessly around every stadium during every game and you will certainly be viewed on national television every Sunday, but it is not a law that a team owner must employ him. Buy a full-page ad in all the major urban dailies and make your point. Send them all an op-ed.

My boss can fire me "at will." I end every column telling readers that this column is my opinion and not representative of the ownership of the company or even my fellow employees. I am privileged to have this venue and it is something I don't take lightly.

It is ludicrous to force employers to keep those in their employ that upset them at the gut level. The left wing demands things that they themselves are unwilling to concede - the rights of the right wing to disagree.

Whether it is "global warming" or Colin Kaepernick, if I owned a company I would not allow a single employee or a collection of employees to dictate the way I run the company. What would be the point of being the boss?

Kaepernick et al, is attempting to "Black"-mail the NFL while still expecting to be employed as another spoiled millionaire quarterback. Regardless of his color, religion or opinion, it is not his place to be the chief operating officer when he signed a contract to do a specific job so very much lower on the pay chart.

If any NFL team employs him, it is because that specific owner has agreed to do so for whatever personal reasons, which may include commercial success. Whether his antics on the field continue is another story to be discovered later. Ask yourself this: Do we all have the right to say and do anything we please every weekend and still expect to punch the clock Monday morning?

Free speech doesn't mean forcing literally millions of others to bow to your will Colin - it has nothing to do with being right or wrong, that's called a hostage taking en mass.

Poor Colin Kaepernick - he hasn't been given a multi-million dollar contract yet. Perhaps he is reaping the results of his actions just as all of us "poor folk" must do on a daily basis.

I like my beer cold, my brats grilled and my football sans politics.

I will exercise my right as a fan to boycott any team that hires Kaepernick. I'm sure my absence won't even be noticed, after all, I am not a Black hellraising millionaire.

(What a great oxymoron - a rich and privileged minority athlete complaining about the White Man's law-and-order system that allows him the "sacrifice" of playing football in front of millions of other minorities and Whites to make even more millions of dollars.)

Gary Bégin's opinions are his own and do not reflect those of NCW Media management or staff. He can be reached at gary@ncwmedia. net.

What about my rights?

I am offended. I'm deeply offended and I am tired of being demeaned and harassed as being an insensitive, hateful, bigoted, intolerant, sexist, homophobe all because I am a conservative and an independent thinker.

I think that it is far past time that anyone who wields such descriptions of intolerance be hauled into court and sued for defamation of character. After all, I deserve a safe space where I can't be abused as antisocial by progressive thinkers whose only way of diminishing my opinion is to belittle and demean me.

These people don't know me. They do not know what is in my heart. They don't try to understand my point of view. They simply dismiss my point of view because it threatens their narrow-minded sense of the world.

What am I offended about? I am offended because the Federal Government is destroying the future of our children and grandchildren by allowing the deficit to spin out of control year after year. It doesn't matter what the race, religion or sex of your progeny, eventually they will have to pay for the excesses of the current generation.

I am offended that 53 years after President Johnson launched his famous "War on Poverty" we have made no progress. We have a huge bureaucracy that administers numerous programs to help but according to Wikipedia those living in poverty has grown from 30 million in 1965 to 43 million in 2015.

I am offended that despite the Civil Rights movement, Affirmative Action and eight years of the first black President race relations in this country are worse than ever. I am especially offended that progressives blame this problem on white people despite the historic efforts most white people have made attempting to end racial intolerance.

I am offended by those who would desecrate our flag in the name of free speech. They might well have the right to do it but they disrespect the sacrifice of those who have given their lives to preserve that right.

I am offended by the politicians who feel they have the right to live like royalty exempting themselves from the laws they pass for the rest of us. Social Security and Obamacare would be vastly different if they had to rely on the benefits they legislate for the rest of us.

A great American once said, "Darkness cannot drive out darkness: only light can do that. Hate cannot drive out hate: only love can do that."

America is deeply divided today because the darkness of ignorance and intolerance is trying to drive out hate.

understanding or enlightenment.

Safe spaces cannot build

Destroying the symbols and records of our history will only deepen the darkness by hiding the painful mistakes of the past.

Only the light of inspection and debate can help us to heal the wounds and build understanding.

Dr. Martin Luther King, the author of the above quote, would be deeply disappointed in the course of today's political wind.

I am also offended that we have lost our commitment to our founding principles. Principles like those found in our Declaration of Independence, "We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal..."

Today it would appear that we have not only forgotten that powerful message but we have allowed our elected representatives to create all kinds of groups whose rights and privileges are superior to the general populace. This only builds envy and ultimately divides us.

As Dr. Martin Luther King said, "..hate cannot drive out hate."

America is deeply divided today. If we hope to save it, we must all get out of our safe zones and re-examine the principles and the history that made us the envy of the world.

Some of that history is painful. We can either allow that painful history to tear us apart or we can use it to help us build a better future for all of our citizens. A future where all of us – men and women - have an equal opportunity for life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

OVOC begins rehearsals for 2017-2018 concert season

SUBMITTED BY JUDY JOHNSTON, OVOC

OMAK - Every year the participants in the orchestra and chorus for Okanogan Valley Orchestra and Chorus (OVOC) wait eagerly for Labor Day to arrive because the rehearsals for the upcoming concert season begin that first week of September.

OVOC is composed of all volunteer musicians drawing from all over Okanogan County. Many of the members drive great distances for the once per week practices. There is no audition required to participate and both the orchestra and the chorus welcome new members for each concert with enthusiasm.

"Just arrive with a desire to sing or play", says OVOC Coordinator Judy Johnston. "Reading music is necessary to be in the orchestra but many chorus members do not sight read and do just fine. We encourage all ages and all skill levels to come."

The first Chorus rehearsal under Director Jonathan McBride will be on Sept. 4 in the Omak High School Choir room at 7 p.m.

The orchestra, directed by Matt Brown, meets the next evening, Sept. 5, in the Omak High School Band room at 6:30 p.m. Contact Ms. Johnston at judy@ovocmusic.org with inquiries.
