SPRING IS ON THE WAY

A sure sign that is Spring is on it way is the arrival of the Buttercups on the hills around the valley. These Buttercups, along with others, were found by Sari Agan of Chelan, on Friday, March 3, while hiking in the area above Chelan Hills. The weather forecast for the valley this week calls for a little bit of everything, sun, rain and snow. Only Mother Nature knows what she will give us on first day of Spring, March 20.

Supreme Court listens to oral arguments on Three Fingers

BY ZACH JOHNSON
STAFF WRITER

OLYMPIA - The long and strenuous legal battle for the Three Fingers fill on Lake Chelan continued last week with the Washington State Supreme Court listening to oral arguments on Tuesday, Feb. 28.

The man made peninsulas, owned by GBI Holding Co. of Wenatchee have been a frequent topic of conversation in the courtroom over the past six years and face potential removal after more than 50 years on the lake.

Originally the Chelan Basin Conservancy sued for the Fingers' removal in 2011 after GBI proposed plans to develop the 6 acres of land. After a first ruling by Judge Lesley Allan called for their removal the Court of Appeals reversed the decision last June, saying the Fingers "retained their grandfathered status according to the Shoreline Management Act."

• Oral arguments presented to Supreme Court

"This case asks the court to apply the Public Trust Doctrine. The Public Trust Doctrine gives the public the right to navigation, the fishery and the corollary rights of recreation across navigable waters," CBC counsel Brendan Donckers said in his opening argument. "This court has said that the Public Trust Doctrine is Paramount and inalienable."

However, GBI argues that the Fingers have existed on the lake for 50 years, and, "there's not a use or development on this property that can occur without review under the Shoreline Management Act," Jay Geck, counsel for GBI said. "The locals and local citizens participate in developing the master program, so through those robust laws you control the property's use so that there will be navigation access and public access."

MALIBU - The road to stardom is complex. For some who are born into fame it is easy, while others claw their way to the top from challenging circumstances.

As was the case for Blanca Blanco - who grew up in Chelan after moving to the Valley at age nine with her parents (Octavio, Margarita) and six siblings. Blanco, now a successful actress that has appeared in over 30 films was named Best Dressed at the 2017 Oscars on Sunday, Feb. 26, for wearing a dress that

City holds two meetings to get input on Woodin Ave one-way bridge

Mayor Mike Cooney and the City of Chelan hosted two meetings to allow downtown business owners and residents a chance to give their input on one-waying Woodin Avenue Bridge.

CHELAN - It took awhile for Mayor Mike Cooney to come around on the one-way idea for the Old Bridge on Woodin Ave.

"I was totally against it at first, and then I remember when Mayor Bob Goedde was there and we talked about either the one way, two way or adding another deck, and I just kept looking at the third option as a council member, but the light went on when I was standing with traffic consultants watching people struggle." Cooney opened with at the meeting with residents on Thursday, March 2.

Built in 1927, the old bridge was constructed to withstand the size of cars in that era i.e. the Model T. Now almost a century old the Woodin Avenue Bridge, although solid, needs repairs.

"Within the next couple years it has to be restored," Cooney admitted. "We know there is a fair amount of concrete swallowing underneath, one of the sections is leaning toward the river and the electrical system needs upgrading, so the restoration needs to be addressed whether we do one way, two way or whatever way." In addition to the restoration, both sides are needed for trails in the future including a park-to-park trail that is currently being planned section-by-section.

On the sidewalk up lakeside the city is proposing extending the width of the path from four to eight feet and down lakeside from four to five feet in order to further service the Riverwalk Trail.

Aside from the restoration, why even do it though?

"It is in the mayor's handbook," Cooney said. "Safety is first and then everything else comes after that. It also increases the pedestrian experience for example by allowing them more room to take pictures of the sunsets up lake. Although we are proposing a bike lane on the bridge, it is not a for sure thing, if we want to widen both sidewalks or allow bike traffic in the lane of traffic, that still will be talked about."

What's the cost?

Chelan council approves study for potential ice rink, proclaims Feb. 28 World Spay Day

BY ZACH JOHNSON
STAFF WRITER

CHELAN - At their regular meeting on Feb. 28, the Chelan City Council approved a study to analyze the financial feasibility and impact of having an open air ice rink at Don Morse Park.

Before council started business they first honored City Clerk, Peri Gallucci by proclaiming Feb. 28, to be World Spay Day in the City of Chelan, and calling on people to observe the day by having their pets spayed or neutered.

"Peri spends quite a bit of time being an advocate for spay and neutering," Mayor Mike Cooney said as he wrapped his arm around Gallucci's shoulder. "She makes trips to Olympia and visits with the legislators to change the law and she does great work."

• Ice Rink

"We talked about an ice rink and the concept has been tossed around for many years," councilwoman Erin McCardle began. "I have been working for a little bit in the community looking at different sites and looking at downtown Chelan. We have been looking at surrounding communities in Wenatchee and Winthrop, and the demand is there."

So McCardle proposed investing $25,000 to do some market research on the project to assess the demand, financial feasibility and economic, fiscal and employment of a new year-round pavilion and ice rink.

"This project would answer a lot of questions, specifically looking at if the city can afford a facility and operations? What are the feasibility of running an ice rink in the winter and pavilion in the summer? Is it someone that we can run or lease out to other concessionaires?" McCardle explained. "It would look at how long we should run, how much staff and we're working with the Town Toyota Center to get their data and understand what impact it could have in the community."

Unpersuaded, councilman Skip Morehouse asked how many people in Pateros, Manson and Entiat are currently skating somewhere? "Or you must have some feeling for that?" Morehouse asked.

"I think we would be getting that data from the Town Toyota Center," McCardle answered. "They have research on where they attract people from. The Winthrop skating rink also has five to six hockey tournaments a season, and initially when we looked at operational numbers, if you can get two or three tournaments, you can almost cover your operational expenses."

Morehouse replied by stating that he was concerned because of the big process the city went through with the Aquatic Center, however McCardle - who was apart of that project - said they never did the financial analysis.

"I'm not against doing this," Morehouse said. "I think we should just refine our focus on what we're doing. I thought you might have some idea how many people from Chelan or Manson that play hockey. Do we have 25 people

“There is still work to be done to get it fully funded, but we have $540,000 into the 2017 budget and we got a grant for $270,000 that is waiting to be spent on the repair of the bridge,” Cooney said. “We met with state legislators last week and made a pitch for a certain amount of money to help us complete the one way and mitigating intersections. We also have $75,000 from the Historic Downtown Chelan Association (HDCA) gateway project that will go along the walkway on the Campbells side and down the PUD dock.”

Mayor Cooney then brought up Public Works Director Dwayne Van Epps to give a background on some of the things that brought them to this point.

“I have heard consistently that pedestrian safety is a primary issue and I was asked on a quite frequent basis that we need to find a solution to this, well at the time Bridge Replacement Advisory Committee (BRAC) were the go-to people for bridge funding,” Van Epps began. “We were bugging them for money and they finally offered $10,000 in 2003 to do some analysis.”

The two things that came out of the analysis were that, if you are going to handle safety you either have to one-way the bridge or widen the bridge deck. The second thing was that in the superstructure and understructure, the underpinnings were still in good shape, so it was classified as functionally obsolete instead of structurally deficient.

“About that same time a bridge back east fell into a river and all of that national attention came onto those bridges that are structurally deficient. So all of the money goes toward those bridges and ours does not compete well, they will flat out tell you that you don’t qualify,” Van Epps stated. “Later in 2010, we had KPFF Consulting Engineers look at doing an even greater in depth study and we came up with options ranging from just putting up railings to a separate pedestrian bridge. Council settled on sidewalk sections, and the consideration for the one way is more an opportunity and chance to provide both sufficient vehicle traffic with additional pedestrian safety.”

After Dwayne finished, Cooney ushered up Engineer Manager Dan Ireland from SCJ Alliance to go over the rest of the project.

“There are multiple things we are factoring, and this is a balanced solution,” Ireland said in his opening remark. “Walkability is a huge factor why we are here today and what can get people walking safely across the bridge.”

outdoor recreation,” McCardle responded. “We have a beautiful park that gets used from May till October, and then that park is rarely used. This is an opportunity to take that park and create a year round facility that are local community can use in Chelan that play hockey?”

“It is more than a hockey rink though, it is public skate also. This facility in my mind is for the locals first, this is something for the youth community that have limited year round.”

For reference, the rink would have ice from an underground refrigeration system, so it would hold a reliable sheet of ice throughout the winter months. In the summer you just turn the refrigerator off and you have a big piece of concrete.

The council approved the motion 4-1, - with Morehouse the lone nay and McCardle recusing herself from the vote - to direct Huden Strategic Partners (HSP) to conduct the study for $25,000 4-1.

The next Chelan City Council meeting is on March 14, at 6 p.m.

the one way come into town, Cooney said, “you want people coming in your front door, and you want them to leave out on Dan Gordon Bridge,” before opening it up for comments or questions from residents or downtown business owners.

After the meeting Jessie Simmons, the Executive Director from the HDCA said, “the HDCA feels that reviewing the one-way proposal and the consequences of this change will take time and cannot be solely based on the opinions of a small group. Given that we do not know how this could affect business, HDCA requested that a test of the one-way concept be conducted before we endorse making structural changes to the historical landmark. Either way we are pleased these discussion are happening and that downtown businesses and the wider community are being invited into the conversation.”

“The only thing I see as a problem is that I think you’re foregoing the locals for bicycles,” Bob Goedde said. “So I think you should forego the bicycles or give the same amount of freedom of movement to the south side. I was not a supporter of the one way, but we are never going to have the money to have wider sidewalks.”

More information on the project including the renditions and traffic study can be found at cityofchelan.us/woodin-avenue-bridge-one-way-concept/.

Note: the City has stated that their insurance pool, Washington Cities Insurance Authority, strongly advises against a test, saying the liability exposure to the City and the risk pool is enormous. The City was told if they decide to conduct a test, WCIA would require a police officer stationed at both ends of the bridge for the entire duration (24/7) and pedestrians would be prohibited from accessing the bridge. Having just received this information, HDCA will be talking to members to determine if this new information changes our official stance.

“I am not a designer, but I had an idea of what I wanted to wear so I picked a sketch and picked the fabric and had another designer cut the dress,” Blanco said. “We had three or four fittings to make sure you couldn’t see the body suit underneath.”

The body suit - which matched Blancos skin color - was so hidden it drew the attention of paparazzi at the event, who perceived that she wasn’t wearing any underwear to one of the biggest nights in Hollywood and caused Blanco and her dress to go viral.

“A lot of people were calling me, I was in all the top news and apparently an email I received said the dress got the most media from Dior and all the other top designers,” Blanco said. “If you look, you can see the body suit but definitely a lot of people contacted me. The dress got the most attention and they were even comparing it to an actress in La La Land.”

Of course, things weren’t always as glamorous for Blanco.

“When we moved to Chelan, my parents were immigrants and my father worked in the fields making $4 an hour for a family of seven,” Blanco explained. “All of my siblings and I, we had to learn English but the school was very supportive with the teachers and social workers. They would help us with coats and gloves or even food for the winter.”

Blanco first started taking acting classes, singing lessons and organized theatrical performances while going to school and working part time. There she found her passion and started to enlist her two brothers and sisters to reenact scenes from popular films for the families amusement.

After graduating from Chelan, Blanco attended Washington State University where she earned a Bachelor’s degree in Psychology. She then moved onto Eastern Washington University where she received a Master’s degree in Social work. After completing her education, she transitioned to Los Angeles to pursue her passion as an actress.

One of the biggest things Blanco attributes to her success was the Chelan community.

“We were an example of very poor and everyone did something with their life because of the community,” Blanco insisted. “We were able to feel that we could move forward, and even though it was harder when your father doesn’t work in the winter, the teachers helped a lot. They look at each student with respect, regardless of the circumstances.”

One teacher in particular was now retired Jean Kulkowski.

“Jean is a very sweet lady and she helped us make sure we had all of the things (we needed), I loved school for that,” Blanco explained. “We didn’t speak English and used to live in a car garage when we first moved to Chelan with no water or electricity, but Jean and Mrs. Taylor would come to our place and make sure we were taken care of and staying warm. It was tough growing up, but the support of everyone really made a difference. People in Chelan are so naive and really want to help you, here you have to be more careful, but it makes you appreciate growing up in a smaller town.”

Now a celebrity living in Malibu, Blanco has taken what she learned as a kid and her past volunteer work in Chelan and is giving back to the community.

“I am active in the community and do a lot of charity work,” Blanco said. “I volunteer at a mission and feed the homeless for every holiday, I am an ambassador for Step Up, which promotes education for teenagers and helps them go to college and I run fundraisers for lupus and cancer. Acting is my career, but I don’t see it as a full time job necessarily.”

When asked about what advice she would give a high-school student in Chelan, Blanco stated, “if you have a goal or passion, keep moving forward. Don’t let your circumstances interfere with your goals and get as much help from your teachers as you can. You control your future, it will be challenging, that is a given, but if you have a passion and you want to reach there, you will get there. No one has ever accomplished anything from not trying.”

FFA to hold District VII Leadership Career event, volunteers needed

Members from Leavenworth to Oroville will vie for the four spots that will qualify them for state competition.

The events include Prepared Public Speaking, Extemporaneous Public Speaking, Creed, Parliamentary Procedure, and Conduct of Meetings Career Development Events.

Twenty-one volunteers are needed to judge all the events except Parliamentary Procedure and Novice Parli. The Prepared Public Speaking event involves participants preparing a six to eight minute speech on an agriculture related topic. The Extemporaneous Public Speaking contest requires members to draw three topics from a hat and then choose one and prepare a four to six minute speech on that topic in a 30 minute preparation period. The Creed CDE requires first year members to recite the five paragraphs of the FFA Creed and answer a series of three questions. The Novice Parli CDE requires a team of first year members perform the Opening and Closing Ceremonies of an FFA Meeting and complete a short Parliamentary Procedure Demonstration. The Parliamentary Procedure CDE requires teams of six members to solve a problem using a specific set of parliamentary motions.

If you would like to help out as a judge, please contact Chelan FFA Advisor, Rod Cool or Student CDE Coordinator Stephanie Olivera at Chelan High School, 682-4061 during school hours or via email at coolr@chelanschools.org

Judges will be provided with a judging packet, dinner, and the satisfaction of making a difference in the lives of young people.

"Critical Access Hospital" is a designation given to certain rural hospitals by the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services (CMS). This designation was created by Congress in the 1997 Balanced Budget Act in response to a string of hospital closures in the 1980s and early 1990s. The CAH designation is designed to reduce the financial vulnerability of rural hospitals and improve access to healthcare by keeping essential services in rural communities. Lake Chelan's Three Fingers

Yesterday, Feb. 28, 2017, the Supreme Court of the State of Washington heard the last arguments regarding the existence of the Three Fingers in Lake Chelan. Now that there is going to be a finality to the legal existence of this landfill, we as a community have choices to make. The City is currently updating their Comprehensive Plan, including zoning modifications, which would allow for marina development if removal of the Fingers is required by the Supreme Court. If the Fingers stay and are left to be developed, you may see, for example, multiple three-story condos with a marina as large, or larger, than the nearby Sunset Marina, currently under development. I urge community action to insist that the Mayor and the City, through negotiations or eminent domain, secure the Fingers as a widely recognized public need for a waterfront park. This will preserve the view, lake access, and water quality of the lake. The Comprehensive Plan consultants are telling us that big growth is coming to the Chelan Valley. We can do our best to direct the growth ... or we can let it run over us. Regardless of the Supreme Court ruling, community action is required.

Just say no

It's heartbreaking that the U.S. House of Representatives voted in support of cruel and overzealous killing methods that could end up destroying the ecological diversity of our federal public lands. Thankfully, the U.S. Senate has a chance to put a stop this once and for all, by voting "no" on the Senate companion resolution, S.J. Res. 18. Voting "no" on this resolution is a vote against barbaric methods which include shooting hibernating bears with their cubs, killing wolf pups and their mothers in their dens; using airplanes to scout, land, and shoot grizzly bears; and baiting and trapping black and grizzly bears with steel-jawed leghold traps and neck wire snares. I cannot understand why anyone would support any of these.

This is an inhumane resolution, which barely squeaked by the House. Wildlife and wild lands are precious resources that belong to all citizens. Congress made the decision to protect these treasures by setting up a national system of parks and refuges. We cannot allow a single state to override not only Congress but the wildlife experts who carefully drew up the hunting rules that this resolution seeks to overturn. Please, for the good of our nation's wildlife, for the good of our national park system, and for the good of the rule of law, contact Senator Maria Cantwell at 202-224-3441 and Senator Patty Murray at 202-224-2621, and ask them to vote NO on S.J. Res. 18.

Save Our Hospital

Save us from increasing long-term debt from the current $8 million to $52 million with a painful 35-year payback period. Save us from converting our local community hospital to a regional surgery center devoted to serving outsiders. Save us from the risk of financial collapse.

Congress and the President have promised to slash Federal health care funding. Individual policy holders are to be cut loose from premium support and standard coverage. Medicare reimbursements are to be reduced. Medicaid expansion is to be reversed.

LCCH is looking at revenue decline and more uncompensated care. New debt, a new mission and less revenue is a recipe for disaster. We now have a sound and stable hospital that serves the local community. Don't let anyone take away our local hospital.

We own it; we pay for it; we insist: Save our hospital! Vote no! to irresponsible debt and a mission to serve outsiders rather than the local population.

Remembering "The New Colossus"

When I was twelve years old, I visited my grandmother in New York City. I still remember climbing the endless stairs to the top of the Statue of Liberty and looking out over the harbor in awe. Her parents came through Ellis Island and that night she helped me memorize my very first poem, Emma Lazarus's "The New Colossus." To this day, I can recite the last stanza: "Keep, ancient lands, your storied pomp!" cries she "Give me your tired, your poor, Your huddled masses yearning to breathe free. The wretched refuse of your teeming shore. Send these, the homeless, the tempest-tost to me. I lift my lamp beside the golden door." I want to applaud Dan Newhouse for sponsoring the Bridge Act. But that is not enough. I want to know what Dan Newhouse really stands for. Does he stand for the ideals that our nation was founded on? Or does he stand for a wall? A billion dollar boondoggle that, when finished, will be climbed over, dug under and swam around. Another ostentatious piece of real estate with Donald Trump's name on it. We are almost all descended from immigrants. And, unless you are a Native American, you are descended from "illegal" immigrants.

Beware the government environmentalist education complex

Monopolies are dangerous. And the government/teacher's union monopolization of our schools is especially dangerous.

There is no better evidence for this fact than the current climate change mania that is sweeping across our country and most of the civilized world. Global warming/climate change fearmongering has been planted in the minds of most of our young people convincing them that only government action can save the planet from the ravages of human development.

Politicians of course will take advantage of any opportunity to increase their power and influence. And it is always easier to sell snake oil based on fear than on its unproven curative power.

Fixing our climate is a perfect snake oil issue for

IN MY
Bill Forhan
Publisher

politicians. Only big government is big enough to tackle such an issue. If we don't give them all of our money through their convoluted carbon tax programs then we will all die from drinking contaminated water and breathing dirty air.

Yes, you can call me a climate change denier. I am however among a growing number of independent thinkers and scientists who are beginning to speak out on the issue.

Take, for example, Australian geologist Ian Plimer.

Plimer is professor emeritus of earth sciences at the University of Melbourne. He recently gave an address to the British Parliament where he adeptly laid out the case against irrational concerns over global climate change.

Plimer points out that the one thing we miss in the climate change debate is the past. Climates have always changed. In the past carbon dioxide was at much higher levels compared to today's exceptionally low level of point zero four percent. Carbon dioxide is a naturally occurring gas that today is at dangerously low levels. It is not a pollutant. It is plant food and when it has been at higher levels plant life thrived. Plimer points out that the earth's climate is constantly changing because the continents move causing changes in sea currents. Volcanoes also effect the planets climate. Currently we only measure 20 of the 1500 terrestrial volcanoes, and we know little about the over 3 million volcanoes on the sea floor that regularly cause changes in ocean currents.

Plimer says the only reason climate change science has got any traction is it only relates to the last 30 to 40 years of climate activity.

"In science there is no consensus. In science skepticism is not a pejorative word. In science there are constant battles" says Plimer.

According to Plimer the sums of money floating around for climate research are corrupting science and the scientific method.

Plimer is not the only scientist of note to take exception to the climate industry's arguments that man is destroying our environment. Former Greenpeace President Patrick Moore has taken exception to the claims of environmentalists that human dependence on fossil fuels is destroying our planet.

It should be telling that environmentalists meet all of these critics with personal attacks on their motivation not on their scientific foundation.

The truth is that cheap fossil fuels have done more to improve human life on this planet than all of the environmentalists and climate research specialists.

It is true we have made some mistakes in putting those resources to work but human progress is always imperfect.

Wind and solar may have a place in meeting our energy needs in the future but they are far from a perfect replacement for coal, gas and oil. And the batteries that power electric cars are more environmentally toxic than the fossil fuels they replace.

Liberals like to say we are all entitled to an opinion but not to our own set of facts. It's time the environmentalists looked at the scientific facts. A very real fact is if we continue to reduce carbon dioxide, plants will die. Fewer plants will mean less oxygen.

Maybe you should start asking the environmentalists, teachers and government bureaucrats what they are going to do when we can no longer breathe.

For those bold enough to consider the real scientific facts you can view Plimer's address at www.iceagenow.info/geologist-exposes-climate-change-hoax-video-3/

Analyzing the truth in a fact challenged administration

The national media — that is most watched — has a bias.

There, I said it. But this shouldn't come as a surprise, it's not like this is a big mystery. A lot of the big media conglomerates have consistently shown a bias when it comes to reporting on politics.

Organizations like: Fox News, Breitbart, The Blaze, The Daily Wire and Infowars report with a conservative narrative while MSNBC, Huffington Post, Natural News, U.S. Uncut and Occupy Democrats skew liberal.

Why is this important to understand?

Because if you want to form a true opinion on a subject, then you need the most objective information possible. Media groups are supposed to present viewers with an array of facts and allow them to form their opinions from that. That is what being objective is. It is the standard that all journalists are held to coming out of school. The problem

WITH IT
Zach

however, is that standard seems to get thrown to the wayside when you make it to some of the journalism 'big league' media outlets mentioned above.

Instead of reporting on a story and forming an opinion afterwards, some media groups already have a preset outlook about a certain issue and then look for stories or information to back up their claim, regardless of the validity or accuracy of their information. So really what viewers are getting is only one side of the story.

There is a reason - on average - the people that are the least informed about what is going on in the political sphere are the ones that watch only Fox News or only MSNBC. The stories might change, but there is only one narrative from both, which ultimately serves more of their own interest rather than that of the general public.

The point I'm trying to make though, is that in this new administration, where the facts are very loosely regarded, you have to be attentive in finding the truth. Remember that Politifact - a Pulitzer winning website that fact checks elected officials and pundits alike - scored 70 percent of Donald Trumps statements to be either mostly false, false or pants on fire false, i.e a ridiculous claim. Depending on the news you watch however, that notion can vary.

Politics is not a black or white subject - like how the Fox News or MSNBC circle portray it - but more grey, so you have to actively look for multiple news sites to get an objective view on a certain subject.

Groups like: The Associated Press, ABC News, The

New York Times, The Washington Post, NPR, Al Jazeera, Vox, The Guardian, The Hill, The Economist, BBC, Reuter, Vice, Bloomberg, The Wall Street Journal and The Atlantic are all reliable sources.

When the White House excluded certain members of the press (CNN, Buzzfeed, The Guardian, The LA Times, Politico, The Hill, The Daily Mail, BBC, and The New York Times) from a press briefing on Feb. 25, they did so to the media members that have been the harshest critics of Trump and his ties to Russia.

Just because a report is negative, that doesn't mean that it is fake news as Trump has so eloquently stated on his Twitter feed. In large part (unless from the biased media groups mentioned in first paragraph) it means that the free press is challenging the administration, which inherently is their job. It is critical we have reporters that challenge public officials - regardless of the party in charge - because that helps ensure a healthy democracy.

They are not the opposition, just tasked with the burden of seeking out the facts. It is time that we respect those that are living by that practice and shun the sensational far left and far right newsgroups that poison the information being put out.

Lest we forget the importance of having a free and unbiased media.

Notice that CNN was not mentioned in this post because while they don't have a general bias, their news does not register on an analytical or complex scale and tends to be basic.

The views and opinions expressed in this article are those of the author and do not necessarily reflect those of the publisher or NCW Media as a whole.

After graduation, Lupe plans on attending a four-year University and major in social work or become an Immigration Lawyer.

She is most inspired by her siblings and her most treasured keepsake is a ring given to her by her sister Mariela on her fifteenth birthday. Lupe's favorite thing to do in the Lake Chelan area is spend time with her family by the lake during the Summer. Her proudest moment in life was starting a club at CHS called Todos United. The purpose of this club is to spread Cultural Awareness throughout the school and fundraise to take students to conferences across the state that relate to education, culture, and community involvement.

Lupe Galvan

If Lupe could trade places with anyone for a day, she would trade places with Jacqueline Kennedy. Lupe feels she should represent the Lake Chelan area because she is a very involved student in and out of school and she believes she is a great role model and leader in her community.

Azzia is the daughter of Brent and Afni MacDonald. She is involved in med-club and a member of FCCLA. Throughout her whole high school years she has participated in softball as a pitcher and her favorite sport volleyball. This year she was honored as varsity volleyball's most improved.

In addition, Azzia was involved in the Kahiau volleyball club her freshman and sophomore year. She also participated in cheerleader during the basketball season this year.

In her spare time she loves spending time with her friends, barbecuing with her family and ice skating at the rink. Some of her other hobbies involve going to the park, playing sand volleyball and swimming in the beautiful lake.

Azzia plans to attend University of Washington to get her doctorate's degree in dental surgery. Azzia's favorite TV show is Scream Queens. She loves the movie, Ferris Bueller's Day Off. Her favorite song is Break Up in a Small Town, by Sam Hunt. Favorite novel is The Odyssey, by Homer and her favorite book is Love Does, by Bob Goff.

The person she looks up to is her mother because she is such a hard working woman and has always taught her to work hard in order to achieve her goals. Her most valued possession is a snow globe in which was given to her by her grandfather as a little girl.

Her favorite part of Chelan is being outdoors and experiencing the beautiful summer sunsets. Till this day, Azzia's proudest moment would be going offline for one week and experiencing what it was like to be one with nature. If she could trade places with anyone for a day it would have to be Ellen Degeneres.

She would love to represent Lake Chelan as a leader because Chelan has given Azzia so many opportunities and she sees this organization as a way to give back to the community.
