

Local Outstanding Riders Compete at Regionals

Greer Swoboda and her teammates, Alma McKean, and Cashmere riders, Kira Potter and Faith Smith said spring was a busy and exciting time. Swoboda and McKean were getting ready to graduate from Cascade High School, and all four girls had multiple four-day meets for WAHSET, which stands for Washington State High School Equestrian Team, and is made up of students from multiple districts. After training and preparing all fall and winter, if riders and their horses do well in the spring district meets, they qualify for State and then have a chance to go onto Regionals, where the best of Washington and Oregon face off.

Swoboda has collected many ribbons and trophies over the years, being a versatile and fierce competitor. She said, "My freshman and sophomore years there were no Regional competitions due to COVID, but last year I made it to Regionals in breakaway roping, and this year I made it in working rancher and my team made it in drill."

To help understand the diversity of events in horseback riding, Swoboda explained, "There are three cattle events, (breakaway roping, team sorting, and steer daubing), five individual gaming events (barrel racing, pole bending, key hole, international flags and figure 8) and two team gaming events (biwrap and Canadian flags), and a bunch of performance events in both English and Western disciplines. This year, I competed in working rancher, barrel racing, pole bending, key hole, individual flags, breakaway roping, steer daubing, team sorting, in hand obstacle relay,

Washington state receives funding to advance equity and family-centered early childhood systems

Project seeks to improve the health and well-being of young children and families

SUBMITTED BY WASHINGTON STATE DOH

OLYMPIA - The Washington State Department of Health (DOH) is proud to share Washington is one of three states selected by the Early Childhood Developmental Health Systems (ECDHS): Evidence to Impact Center to take part in a multiyear project to advance comprehensive early childhood developmental (ECD) systems across the state.

As part of the project, Washington will serve as an Implementation Site and receive technical assistance to identify strengths and opportunities for ECD systems-building, connect with other states and subject matter experts, and have access to curated resources. The Implementation Sites will define and contribute to short-, mid-, and long-term outcomes in their state that build upon previous efforts to reach system changes and improve health for young children and families. The efforts will advance improvements in early developmental health and well-being, such as child flourishing, school readiness, and family resilience, as prioritized by local/state needs, and reduced disparities associated with childhood poverty.

"This is a unique opportunity to co-design strategies with communities experiencing high levels of childhood poverty by building on strengths and addressing areas of opportunity to improve health outcomes and reduce inequities," said Lacy M. Fehrenbach, MPH, Chief of Prevention, Safety, and Health, DOH. "The focus on childhood poverty within this work also aligns with the 10-year plan to dismantle poverty in Washington. Together with our partners, we are committed to strengthening coordination with communities and embracing innovation that creates pathways for solutions."

DOH will partner with WithinReach/Help Me Grow Washington, First Five Fundamentals/Washington Communities for Children, the Washington Chapter of the American Academy of Pediatrics, and the Health Care Authority to improve coordination between state and community-based partners to use existing infrastructure, resources, and planned initiatives to strengthen connections between community-based navigators/coordinators. The project is funded through the Health Resources and Services Administration at the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services.

"We are excited to collaborate with the Implementation Sites to improve early developmental health and well-being," said Debbie Cheatham, Director of the ECDHS: Evidence to Impact Center. "Our work will center ECD systems-building strategies around families and equity to improve outcomes and reduce disparities in health and family well-being."

The ECDHS: Evidence to Impact Center is led by ZERO TO THREE in partnership with several of the nation's top early childhood and health system organizations, including the American Academy of Pediatrics, Help Me Grow National Center, Center for the Study of Social Policy, Family Voices, Georgetown University Center for Child and Human Development, and Institute for Child Success. The Center seeks to increase the implementation and evaluation of evidence-informed, equity-driven, systems-level strategies among states and to strengthen the evidence base in support of ECD state systems building. Pangborn Festival of Flight

By MATTHEW OCKINGA
Correspondent

EAST WENATCHEE - "One of the biggest parts of owning airplanes is washing bugs."

Shane Mahoney smiled as he wiped away unwanted insects from his silver 1957 Piper Tri-Pacer. The Auburn resident's sparkling prize fit well with the dozens of planes perched on the tarmac during Pangborn's Festival of Flight Saturday July 8 hosted by the City of East Wenatchee and Pangborn Memorial Airport. The annual event serves simultaneously as showcase and lesson.

"I think aviation in general is a really important piece of our infrastructure," Mahoney said. "We can't just do trucks. We can't just do trains. We can't just do boats. Infrastructure in terms on transportation is a real complex thing. I think it's a huge part of the infrastructure that is really underutilized."

Mahoney is a member of the Puget Sound Antique Airplane Club, a group of private owners of small historic planes who tour the region in the spirit of barnstorming of the 1920s. The annual event allows the public inside the aviation world where every pilot has a plane, and every plane carries a story. The same holds true for Mahoney, who has owned his Piper for 20 years. He inherited his love for aircraft from his father John in Detroit Lakes, MN. When Mahoney was six, his father passed away never having flown with his son. Despite that early loss, Mahoney always keeps a clear flight path in his mind which still soars 62 years later.

"I was always into aviation from that inspiration," he said. "That's why it's so important to inspire the young kids."

Yet Mahoney's personal takeoff came decades after that initial childhood motivation. He worked for many years as an engineer at Boeing. During that time, he took a few flying lessons, but didn't buy a plane until age 48, then subsequently earned his pilot's license. Mahoney joked that he owns 2½ planes since one will never be finished during his lifetime.

While distinct, Mahoney's story shares some airspace with his fellow plane owners, especially members of the PSAAC. They took great pleasure in welcoming the many visitors to their little corner of the tarmac to tell their planes' tale. In addition to privately owned craft, several helicopters and other planes from the military and emergency services were on display for close observation.

The plane patrons, many donning inflatable airplane hats, had plenty to observe from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. on the sunny summer Saturday. Three players from the Wenatchee AppleSox, along with mascot Coyote, strolled around the tarmac which drew the attention of many youngsters. In a larger hanger toward

Osprey, geese keep Chelan PUD biologists, crews on their toes

SUBMITTED BY RACHEL HANSEN

WENATCHEE - Osprey chicks are just beginning to peek above the protection of their high-perched nests. Next month, new-feathered fledglings will attempt their first flights, many from platforms built by Chelan PUD.

Osprey are migratory raptors that prefer to nest on the tallest snags or structures, as close as possible to the shoreline where they fish. Power poles tend to be attractive for osprey nesting, which is not always a safe option for the birds and increases the risk of fire and power outages.

Osprey are not threatened or endangered, but they're protected under the federal Migratory Bird Treaty Act, which prohibits anyone from moving an active nest. When a nest is started in an unsafe location, Chelan PUD builds standalone platforms up to 65 feet tall that provide osprey with a safer option nearby during the onset of nesting season.

"Every spring, we monitor power poles closely for any new nesting activity. Once we notice nesting material in unsafe locations, we have to act quickly to provide an alternative and entice the birds to a safer location" said Chelan PUD Biologist Kelly Cordell. "We want to protect the osprey and reliability for customers. That's what this program is about."

The nesting platform program, part of Chelan PUD's Avian Protection Plan, began with fewer than 10 in 2006. This spring, the number of platforms totaled about 56 as the population of osprey has grown exponentially.

Canada Geese, which normally nest on the ground, have seized the opportunity and overtaken some osprey nests in recent years. Geese lay their eggs weeks before osprey return from their annual migration from Central and South America, forcing the raptors to seek lodging elsewhere. To prevent the geese from using the osprey platforms, line crews place covers over the osprey nests during March to keep geese out until the osprey return. When the osprey arrive in early April, the covers are removed. "The monitoring keeps us all very busy in the spring," Cordell said. "We're working with our partners at the Washington State Department of Fish and Wildlife to find more solutions for managing goose and osprey conflicts."

Chelan PUD and Puget Sound Energy finalize clean energy contract

and Chelan County Public Utility District announced a new contract for renewable hydropower from two PUD hydro projects on the Columbia River.

The five-year "slice" contract supplies PSE with 5% of the output from the PUD's Rock Island and Rocky Reach hydropower projects from 2024 through 2028. The contract complements an existing contract between the two utilities, while generating revenue for the PUD to provide continued rate stability for its customers.

"This contract is part of an overall strategy designed to provide several benefits to customer-owners," said Chelan PUD General Manager Kirk Hudson. "Ultimately, surplus energy sales keep Chelan County electric rates well below state and national averages, while also protecting customer rates from the risk of volatile markets and variable streamflow."

The PUD ensures a competitive market price for our customers-owners with the public auction process. Bids are submitted and the PUD selects the highest qualified bidder. The competitive market pricing also allows the PUD to lock in a margin above production costs for the benefit of its customer-owners. PSE secured the contract as the highest bidder in an auction in early 2023.

The contract will bolster PSE's supply of carbon-free energy, in line with the goal of becoming a "Beyond Net Zero Carbon" energy company by 2045.

"We value our continuing long-standing positive working relationship with PSE and are pleased that this energy will help our state meet its low-carbon policy goals," Hudson said.

Campfire Stage 1 restrictions now in effect

SUBMITTED BY VICTORIA WILKINS

Campfire restrictions went into effect on the Okanogan-Wenatchee National Forest on Friday, July 14. Campfires will be allowed only in designated developed campgrounds and congressionally designated Wilderness Areas (except in those wilderness areas where campfires are never allowed). In all other areas, including dispersed camping areas, campfires will be prohibited.

"Our Forest Fire Management personnel have been closely monitoring fuels conditions across the forest over the past month. Fuel moistures have dropped and fire danger has risen. We have had several small fires on the Forest and it is time for us to put in place campfire restrictions to reduce the chances of human-caused starts," said Forest Supervisor Kristin Bail. "This first phase of restrictions means that campfires will only be allowed in certain designated campsites where the potential for escaped fires is reduced."

Forest visitors are reminded that fireworks and other pyrotechnic devices, including exploding targets, are illegal year-round in the Okanogan-Wenatchee National Forest. "Any spark, whether it be from a dragging tow chain, a cigarette, an exploding target, or a firework has the potential to cause a wildfire right now," Bail said.

Some special sites, such as group camps and summer homes operated under permit, are exempt from this order. Please visit or call the appropriate ranger station to obtain information on specific campground restrictions. Information is also available on the forest website at: <http://www.fs.usda.gov/goto/okawen/campfires>

Forest visitors may continue to use pressurized or bottled liquid fuel stoves, lanterns, or heating devices, provided such devices are used in areas that are barren or cleared of all overhead and surrounding flammable material within 3 feet of the device and meet the fire underwriter's specifications for safety.

Okanogan-Wenatchee National Forest fire managers remind hikers, campers, and recreationists to be extremely careful with any use of fire in the outdoors this summer. Escaped campfires are a leading cause of human-caused wildland fires on the Okanogan-Wenatchee National Forest. Campfires typically become problems when campers fail to completely extinguish them before leaving campsites.

Write on the River and NCW Libraries are happy to announce the three winners of the 12th Annual High School Writers Competition. Jadyn Matson, of Chelan, won first-place for her fiction entry, "At the Edge of the World." Honorable mentions went to Jada Wood of Cashmere for "Helios" and Isabel Menna of Leavenworth for "Lost Princess Found: A Story of Resurrection."

The winners will share $200 in cash awards and will be featured readers at Write on the River's next Four Minutes of Fame open mic event. Learn more about the winners and read their entries at writeontheriver.org.

The competition is open to high school students, including public school, private school, home school, and running start students, in 9th-12th grade. Students must reside in Chelan, Douglas, Okanogan, Grant, or Ferry counties.

New York Times best-selling author Chelsea Cain, who visited Wenatchee as a 2011 WOTR conference speaker, founded and continues to sponsor the annual competition.

Fundraising efforts underway to cover medical costs for jail's canine

Kait, the narcotics-detecting K-9, on light duty while recovering from health issues

SUBMITTED BY JILL FITZSIMMONS
Chelan County PIO

The annual community fundraising campaign for the Chelan County Regional Justice Center's narcotics-detecting canine is kicking off early this year with a heavy focus on raising money to cover recent unexpected health costs for K-9 Kait, who has grown to become a much-loved community member.

Kait, a 7-year-old border collie who has served at the jail for the last two years, has been on light duty for the past couple of months. She was recently diagnosed with Imerslund-Gräsbeck Syndrome, or IGS. IGS is related to a vitamin B12 deficiency and is treatable with vitamin supplementation and medication.

However, Kait has also developed an issue with fluid building up in her abdomen. A team of veterinarians in Wenatchee and Spokane is working to determine the cause of the fluid buildup. She is scheduled to undergo more tests in the coming days, with the goal of getting Kait healthy and back to full duty.

"Unfortunately, we have exhausted our veterinary budget for the year," said Corrections Deputy Jacob Lewis, who is Kait's handler and partner. "Depending on the outcome of her upcoming procedure, we will either have a complete diagnosis with a treatment plan or we will need further diagnostic testing. I want everyone to know that while Kait is tired and rests frequently, she is still her happy self at home."

Kait is one of only two narcotics dogs working in a municipal or county jail in the state. She is trained to detect six odors, including fentanyl. While the canine is a key component to keeping drugs out of the jail, Kait most recently has been utilized by local school districts to deter drugs from getting into the schools as well. She also serves as a liaison for the jail. Lewis and Kait are regulars at community events and give several presentations a year in schools throughout the area.

Like most law enforcement K-9 programs, the K-9 portion of the jail's drug interdiction program is community funded.

Much of Kait's care, from her food and gear to her health care, is funded by donations. Fundraising efforts typically kick off in the fall but donations are taken year-round.

The following fundraising efforts are in place:

- An annual t-shirt sale has begun via CustomInk. T-shirts cost $25 and are available in six colors and adult and youth sizes. The t-shirt design also changes annually. The t-shirt fundraiser is open until August 10, with t-shirts being shipped directly to supporters. Order your t-shirt at CustomInk.com:bit.ly/44KURAF.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Dear editor,
 I went swimming for the first time since pre-Covid. Cashmere city pool just reopened morning lap swim from 6 to 8 a.m. I was the only one in the pool and it was lovely! Perfect water temperature, clean bathroom, beautifully clear water. I hope others will join me in the morning and support the continued opening of the pool for lap swimmers.
 I was inspired last week by the first Cashmere swim meet of the 2023 season. The kids were having so much fun, such excitement and energy. What a great sport and life skill.

Thank you, City, Of Cashmere for making this happen!

I read recently about the proposed regional sports complex in Wenatchee. I do not support Cashmere citizens having to fund this. We are having difficulty finding our own city pool. Also, I feel that the Wenatchee city pool and its surrounding fields could be improved and used as the regional sports complex. There is no need to start over.

Vicky Cibicki, Cashmere

OBITUARY

Liam James Gillikin

October 11, 2000-July 4, 2023

On July 4, 2023, Liam James Gillikin, age 22, of Leavenworth, Washington, died in a cliff diving accident near Crescent Bar, Washington on the Columbia River.

Liam was born in Anchorage, Alaska on October 11, 2000. He graduated from Cashmere High School in 2019. At the time of his death, he was working in Prudhoe Bay, Alaska as an Industrial Technician for Ice Services, Inc.

Liam is survived by his father, David Gillikin, mother Karin Jorgensen, brothers Whelan and Aengus Gillikin, sister Finna Jo Gillikin and grandparents Arne and Judith Jorgensen. He will be deeply missed by his friends, family and all who knew him.

An avid fisherman, hunter, snowboarder, hiker and mountain biker, Liam displayed a passionate and enthusiastic love of all outdoor activities, including collecting elk and deer sheds.

A celebration of life is scheduled for 6:00 pm on August 28 at the Leavenworth Ski Hill Lodge. In lieu of flowers, donations may be made to gofundme.com organized by Bryson Murdock in the name of Liam James Gillikin. The funds will be used to update the Cashmere Pump Track as well as hunting and fishing programs for youth.

Informational videos increase awareness of financial aid and education options

SUBMITTED BY WASHINGTON STUDENT ACHIEVEMENT COUNCIL

Olympia—Simple, accurate information provided in an engaging way in an educational environment can help improve student understanding and awareness of financial aid and college or training options, according to a new case study from the Washington Student Achievement Council (WSAC).

WSAC partnered with the North Central Educational Service District (NCESD) to design and develop animated videos about financial aid and postsecondary education opportunities available in Washington State. The videos were shared with students during the regular school day, and students completed surveys to share their feedback.

The surveys indicated positive results:

Prior to watching the videos, many students could not correctly answer questions about the state's financial aid programs and postsecondary opportunities; however, there was substantial growth in their knowledge after watching the videos. 87 percent of students surveyed indicated that they learned something relevant for their futures from the videos. 88 percent of students indicated that they learned something new about the Washington College Grant (WA Grant) program.

WA Grant is a flexible option that can be used for many educational pathways beyond high school, including approved apprenticeships, certificate programs, job training or college.

The state of Washington has some of the strongest financial aid programs in the country. And yet, despite the generous funding available, Washington historically ranks near the bottom in rates of financial aid application completion nationally. WSAC believes that people will be more likely to apply for financial aid if they know how generous and flexible the state's programs are.

"Every year, we see families leaving thousands of dollars on the table because they don't know how to apply, or don't believe they might be eligible for funding, and we wanted to do something to change that outcome" said Dr. Sue Kane, NCESD's director of STEM initiatives and strategic partnerships.

Kane added, "These videos make it so easy to be a part of the collective effort. Check out the videos and share them through social media. Helping someone pursue their dreams could be just that simple."

The case study report shows that adopting an evidence-based approach like informational videos to engage students can increase awareness of financial aid and education options, and potentially influence decision-making about college or career training after high school. Elk Roast

I spent the morning helping Grandpa put a twenty-seven-foot truss beam together in the cramped shop (like everything that is useful, the shop is big, just not quite big enough for the next project) where Grandpa does his hide tanning. He has made room in his tanning spaces to accommodate building the trusses. The three-legged sawhorses he made special for the truss project are lined up all against the west side of the shop pinched up against wood planks and materials from other projects making movement to the back side of the truss tricky. To top it off the salted and dried out cow elk hide hanging at the end of the truss workspace effectively blocked easy access to the back side of the truss making me cranky.

Half an hour into the project I lost patience with the stiff salted hide and when there was a break in our workload, I moved it. It's a roadkill elk so the hair is a mess and the whole thing looks disgusting. Grandpa is going to tan it. To him it is 'just right'; not as hard as beef hide to manage; thicker and more durable than deer hide; and it is pleasing to him. That elk hide holds the potential for many beautiful projects.

Grandpa grinned at me after I moved it. We got to talk about elk. He has the jaw of that cow elk. It is totally desiccated from weathering outdoors. He showed me the 'whistler' teeth. Each cow elk has two. He pointed them out to me, "this isn't a very old cow elk. Three," he leaned closer to peer at the dried-out jaw, "no, I think she was at least four years old. More years, more color." He touched the ivory tooth. I saw respect in his countenance. He glanced my way and said in a matter-of-fact tone, "The older cows have more colorful, beautiful teeth."

Grandpa has a special place in his heart for elk. Growing up in the Rocky Mountains, elk was the mainstay of the family's food. They raised beef but didn't eat it; they sold beef for the money to pay bills. As a youth growing up, he was the best hunter in the family, so he was usually the one who brought home the meat they ate. Now I can't say I find those 'whistlers' beautiful. I can say I find it beautiful that he does. It is amazing how we, each as individuals, find different things 'beautiful'. For Grandpa, finding beauty in the teeth of an old cow elk caused him to be a better hunter. I got to wondering what I find beautiful that makes me better at what I do. I'm going to have to think on that a bit. I'll just take a brain break and pause from worrying about tomorrow. Maybe then I can imagine what kind of beautiful will cause my countenance to radiate respect.

Elk Roast

- ½ to 1 lb. meat per person
- A few ¼ cups of water
- 1 teaspoon diced onion per person (optional)
- 1 tablespoon diced carrot per person (optional)
- 1 tablespoon diced celery or green pepper or chili per person (optional)
- ½ teaspoon your choice seasoning per person (optional)

Roasting pan, crockpot or iron skillet with tin foil or anything that works.

Decide on cooking vessel. If making the elk roast in the oven, turn the oven to 375°. Try to find a cooking vessel that the roast will fill two-thirds full. Put roast in the vessel. If it is a crock pot, leave out the water. If using an oven pour a ¼ cup water over the roast. The goal is to have a quarter to a half inch of water under the roast so continue to add water, ¼ cup at a time. Add optional ingredients and cover with a lid or tin foil. It usually takes an hour to an hour and a half for me to cook a roast in the oven. The crockpot takes half a day on high and a full day on low.

Note: This recipe works for deer, beef, pork, goat, and even chicken. Roasted meat will shrink, often to two thirds its original size.

the entrance, over a dozen organizations held displays. Included among these were the local Cubs Scouts, the Army National Guard and Pangborn Composite Squadron's Civil Air Patrol. Event goers could also snag from a table free used airplane related books.

The festivities began in earnest on Friday, July 7 with the inaugural 1940's Big Band Dinner & Dance. The avian gala included food, a silent auction, and the Wenatchee Big Band. Proceeds from the event helped support the Spirit of Wenatchee's Aviation Scholarship. Ridgeline Aviation, RH2, C&O Nursery, ALSC Architects, Davis Arneil Law Firm, Ardurra Ogden Murphy Wallace Attorneys, and Peoples Bank provided sponsorships.

Mike Werner and Theresa White are also members of PSAAC. They own a N3N-3 called Jack, named for the comic strip character that flew fictional flights through printed pages for 40 years. A previous owner slapped a decal of the cartoon on the plane's starboard side. Produced in January of 1941, two years into World War II, Jack entered into Navy Service at the Pensacola Navy Air Station in April of that year. The Navy then lent it to the United States Department of Commerce for use in war training at Naval Air Station Glenview in Illinois for use in a civilian pilot training program.

After serving the country, Jack helped the nation in a different fashion in 1946: as a crop duster. Once retired from that task, the plane changed hands a few times before Werner purchased it. Heading for Twisp after the event with the PSAAC, Werner appreciated Pangborn's atmosphere and to be the steward of a historic plane.

"This is a great town. It's a great spot. It's a unique place being down in a bit of a bowl," Werner said. "I treat myself as a caretaker of the airplane, not so much an owner. I like to take it to venues where people can see it and ask questions and get a little more appreciation for an airplane."

Chelan County road projects maintenance update

SUBMITTED BY JILL FITZSIMMONS

Goodwin Road/Sunset Road Improvement Project: The project remains on schedule, with the temporary closure of Sunset Road between its intersections with Mill Road, were lifted July 12. The roadway will be at one lane, with flaggers directing traffic. In addition, motorists will encounter one-lane, flagger-controlled traffic at the intersection of Goodwin Road and Sunset Road. Information about the project is on the project's webpage.

Curve Warning Signs Installation: Beginning on Monday, July 10, the county's Traffic Safety crew will begin installing the bases for curve warning signs at a variety of locations around the county. The work zone will require one-lane, flagger-controlled traffic. Plan for minor traffic delays.

Public Works Office News: Beginning Aug. 1, Chelan County Public Works will no longer accept payments on permits and fees after 1 p.m. on Fridays. The department will continue to take payment during its regular hours 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Thursday and 8 a.m. to 1 p.m. on Fridays.

People who need to pay for a permit or fee to Public Works can send in a check or visit the office at 316 Washington St., Suite 402, Wenatchee, WA, 98801. Or they can call the office at 509-667-6415 to pay by credit card over the phone. The change in payment processes is a result of staffing schedules on Fridays. We apologize for any inconvenience.

Maintenance plans may change with weather conditions or equipment difficulties. Visit the Public Works website, where the weekly road maintenance information is regularly updated.

Cashmere: The crew will be helping with road preservation efforts.

Leavenworth: The crew will be helping with chip sealing as needed.

Like "Chelan County Public Works" on Facebook to receive news on emergency road closures.

"People who have had the opportunity to meet Kait know she is one of the sweetest and most loving dogs; she loves serving her community," Lewis said. "She is a beloved member of CCRJC, and we hope to be able to provide her with the best care and an opportunity to get back to her normal self. We are very grateful for the continued support from all over the world, and we thank our community for being a part of Team Kait."

SWIMMERS of the Week

Bradley Paine, age 13

Bradley has a great attitude at every swim practice. He asks for help on improving his strokes and is improving his race times at all the swim meets. The coaches appreciate his hard work and his awesome spirit! In this photo of Brad he is sporting his tropical vacation theme wear at our Waterville swim meet.

The Mott sisters

These three sisters are dynamite! On the left is Molly Mott, age 17, center is Abby Mott, age 18, and on the right is Sophie Mott, age 15. They are all awesomely fast swimmers. During practice they work hard but still have time to encourage the other swimmers to do their best. We love their laughs and positive presence on the team. We will miss Abby next year as she is heading off to college this fall. Congratulations girls!

The Cashmere Swim Team, which practices at the Cashmere Municipal Pool, is part of the Wenatchee Valley Summer Swim League, which also includes teams from Ephrata, Quincy, Leavenworth, Waterville, East Wenatchee and the Wenatchee Racquet & Athletic Club. The season runs six weeks, from the first practice on June 20 to championships set for July 30. Meets are held at 6 p.m. Thursdays. The Cashmere team has four coaches this season — Isabelle Dressler, Kim Krumvieda-Buchan, Emma Knott and Elle Seidensticker. For information on the team, go to http://wvssl.org

Canadian flags, biwrap, working pairs and drill."

So, a mere six days after graduation, Swoboda and her teammates headed to Redmond, Oregon for Regionals. It started off a bit bumpy when the caravan of trailers took eleven hours to reach their destination instead of six due to a brake issue followed by a flat tire.

Competition days are long, starting early and getting to bed late, and riders have to put their horses first and their own needs second. Each day is dedicated to certain events.

Working rancher, one of Swoboda's best events, isn't timed but involves performing patterns perfectly, communicating with one's horse to do things like going over a bridge or obstacles, opening and closing a gate, backing up, and roping a dummy cow. Swoboda placed 4th at Regionals for this very technical category.

Canadian flags are a four-person relay, with one rider and horse going out at a time to snatch a three-foot flag from the ground as quickly as possible and then tagging off to the next teammate. Fastest total time is the goal, and can be greatly hampered if the flags get knocked over by a mis-stepping horse so that riders have to dismount in order to retrieve fallen flags. Swoboda's team ran it perfectly at two different competitions, but they didn't quite qualify for Regionals.

Steer daubing, another of Swoboda's specialties, involves chasing a steer (young neutered male) that has a slight head start from its pen, reaching over and tapping its back with a so-called pancake batter stick leaving a white mark. Time is over when the rider lifts her stick back up in the air. "It's glorified but basically could be used to give topical medication like tick, fly and worm medicine when you don't want to have to fully capture the cow," explained Swoboda.

Swoboda and her teammates were happily surprised to make it to Regionals in drill. They worked really hard for months on their synchronized routine which lasts close to six minutes. They had practiced it almost every day after practicing other individual or paired events. At Regionals, they almost missed their chance to do a practice run, and wound up having to do it at midnight. It went well, though they were not used to the huge arena—it affected their spacing and how close to the center they were. As one of the captains, Swoboda shouted quick commands to help her team with alignment and to prepare for the next element in the routine.

The earlier State meet, held at the Moses Lake fairgrounds, was packed with participants and spectators, because for each event there were up to five contestants from each of the seven districts. Regionals, by comparison, had fewer riders—only the top five from Washington and the top five from Oregon competed in each event. The Deschutes County Expo Center in Redmond stages professional rodeos, so it felt like a whole other level, with three competition arenas and multiple warm up arenas.

To be one of the best riders in the state has taken a lot of dedication. "I practiced around ten to twelve hours a week, not including the two hours roundtrip it took to drive up to Wenatchee with a truck and trailer to get the horses to practice each day. It's definitely worth it to get that amount of practice in because horses are such complicated animals, you have to learn to work as a team with them, which takes a lot of time.

"Because I did so many different events, I had more practices than some of the other members. I would have roping practice Tuesday, sorting practice Wednesday, gaming practice Thursday, drill and performance practices on Sunday with the occasional Monday mixed in."

Swoboda works with several horses, each with a unique personality and skill set suited for certain events. She rides Pepsi for working rancher, breakaway roping and steer daubing because Pepsi has been trained on cows and likes having a job. Roany is a good horse for sorting because she's little and can turn sharply.

Lucy is used for the team drills and some gaming events like keyhole because she's a great spriener.

"I'm so thankful for the horses I work with," she said. Pepsi was the first horse she rode a lot, but when Pepsi was lame her freshman year, her family got Roany and another horse from Entiat and trained them a lot because they had been "pasture pets." Lucy is owned by a friend of her mom's and "can do anything."

No matter the length of the event, whether a few seconds or multiple minutes, a good competitor makes it look effortless. "More work goes into it than what it looks like," said Swoboda. "That's the point. You're constantly using these little muscles in your legs to tell your horse to move a certain way. And they really get to know you. They feel your excitement or nervousness and react to that."

WAHSET teaches these riders self-discipline and self-reliance. "WAHSET is like a family. The coaches are passionate and there to help you succeed. There aren't a lot of horse people in the valley, so WAHSET is a tight community."

For her next chapter after a summer of working on a Forest Service fire crew, Swoboda is heading to Montana State University and is considering joining the rodeo team there, or finding a dude ranch for a part-time job. No matter what, she expects horses will always be a part of her life.

6 backyarding renovation mistakes to avoid

SUBMITTED BY DEBBI MAYSTER, ON BEHALF OF THE TURFMUTT FOUNDATION

Summer and backyarding, the act of taking our indoor life outside, go hand in hand. This time of year especially, the backyard beckons for entertaining, working, exercising, relaxing, and reconnecting. But those looking to make improvements to their family yard for even more backyarding fun this summer need to avoid some common backyard renovation mistakes.

"Mulligan the TurfMutt and I recently moved into a new home and we were reminded about some of the backyard renovation pitfalls that can be easy to fall into," said Kris Kiser, President & CEO of the TurfMutt Foundation, which encourages people to care for and use their outdoor spaces. "By keeping a few basic principles in mind when embarking on backyard improvements, families can set themselves up for backyard fun this summer and beyond."

Here are the top backyarding renovation mistakes to avoid, according to the TurfMutt Foundation:

Not considering your yard's full potential. Your yard has the ability to safely and comfortably accommodate a range of functions for your family. From outdoor officing to al fresco dining and offering a place for kids to learn and grow as well as work out their wiggles – your backyard has unlimited potential to expand your home's living space.

Planting fake grass. Plastic grass offers none of the life-giving benefits of real grass – such as oxygen production, carbon sequestration, urban heat dissipation, or air pollution reduction. Real grass offers all these benefits, and it is easier on feet and paws. Also, real grass is a natural air conditioner.

Forgetting the "right plant, right place" rule. This is the "Golden Rule" of backyarding, but it's more than just knowing which plants will thrive in sunny spots versus shaded areas. Selecting the right plants for your micro-climate and lifestyle will result in a living landscape that requires minimal upkeep on your part while offering maximum environmental benefits.

Not treating your yard like part of the connected ecosystem. Your yard links with other community green spaces to provide food and shelter for pollinators, such as birds, bees, butterflies, bats, and other creatures. Support pollinators and wildlife by planting a healthy balance of grasses, flowers, shrubs, and trees that thrive in your yard's conditions and bloom at different times throughout the year.

Not utilizing community green spaces. Think of community parks, dog parks, green belts, and school yards as an expansion of your own backyard square footage. Not only do these community areas provide a change of scenery from your own backyard, they are particularly beneficial for those with little to no backyard space of their own.

Failing to keep safety in mind. Outdoor power equipment makes big backyarding projects easier, but it is critical to keep safety in mind. Read your owner's manual and follow all manufacturer's guidelines. Do not disable or alter any of the safety features. Always keep pets and children away from machinery during operation, and do not let children on or near lawn mowers at any time.

About TurfMutt: TurfMutt was created by the Outdoor Power Equipment Institute's (OPEI) TurfMutt Foundation and has reached more than 70 million children, educators and families since 2009. Through education partners such as Weekly Reader, Discovery Education and Scholastic, TurfMutt has taught students and teachers how to "save the planet, one yard at a time." Today, TurfMutt is an official USGBC® Education Partner and part of their global LEARNING LAB. TurfMutt has been an education resource at the U.S. Department of Education's Green Ribbon Schools, the U.S. Department of Energy, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, Green Apple, the Center for Green Schools, the Outdoors Alliance for Kids, the National Energy Education Development (NEED) project, Climate Change Live, Petfinder and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service. In 2017, the TurfMutt animated video series won the coveted Cynopsis Kids Imagination Award for Best Interstitial Series. TurfMutt's personal, home habitat was featured in the 2017-2020 Wildlife Habitat Council calendars. More information at www.TurfMutt.com.
