2023 Legislative Session: Committee work continues as floor debates approach

By Senator Brad Hawkins

12th District.

The legislative session has begun its third week and much work is occurring. The session itself is based on a rigorous schedule involving committee work, bill consideration, and budget development. The first major phase of each session is the committee work, which includes separate groups of legislators hearing briefings and testimony on proposed legislation. If the committee approval, they advance to the next stage in the process, which could include floor debate. If a Senate bill advances through the Senate chamber, it must also successfully pass the same process - including committee approval and floor debate - in the House of Representatives. The same is true for a bill that originates in the House. Before the House or Senate can debate legislation, usually later in the legislative session, it must receive approval from its assigned committee within the initial weeks of consideration.

Legislative committee assignments

The Legislature actively participates in committee meetings throughout the session, but more so during the first several weeks to start each session and then also weeks later following the deadline for bills to advance to their other legislative chamber (House bills to the Senate and Senate bills to the House). Committee time is always a busy phase of the session. This year I will again serve on three Senate committees described below. This session will be very busy for me with work on these committees:

schedule involving committee work, bill consideration, and budget development. The first major phase of each session is the committee work, which includes separate groups of legislators on proposed legislation. If the legislative proposals receive committee approval, they advance to the next stage in the process, significantly in K-12 education (43 percent of the operating budget expenditures) and I bring 10 years of experience serving on the boards of the Eastmont School District and North Central Educational Service District to my committee work.

Higher Education and Workforce Development

This is a new committee for me for this year, offering a change from State Government and Elections. The Higher Education and Workforce Development Committee considers issues related to higher education institutions, including our community and technical colleges and state universities. These issues include connecting with the K-12 education system, higher education governance, financial aid, and workforce training. I look forward to learning as much as I can about higher education and workforce issues.

Transportation Committee

My third assignment includes serving on the Transportation Committee, which develops the transportation budget. This budget funds the construction

Rep. Goehner's Legislative Update: 2023 session, a new 12th District, and upcoming Virtual Town Hall

After two years of virtual legislative sessions, legislators returned to Olympia on Monday, Jan. 9 for opening ceremonies. It was great to see the galleries filled with family, friends, and staff. Allowing the public to visit in person with state lawmakers and testify in committee is important to our legislative process. It improves transparency and provides accountability.

On Tuesday, Gov. Inslee addressed the Legislature with his State of the State address. Rep. Peter Abbarno provided the Republican perspective. Since then, we have been busy with committee work and public hearings on bills.

This is my first update since election-year restrictions last May. I will continue to provide you with updates throughout the session and interim. Please feel free to share this update with others who may be interested. Each update also offers

My seatmate, Rep. Mike Steele, R-Chelan, and I want to give you the opportunity to discuss any legislative or state issues you may have early in the session, so we are holding a Virtual Town Hall on Wednesday, Feb. 1, 6 – 7 p.m. You can register online on the houserepublicans.wa.gov website. I encourage you to register early as space is limited to the first 500 attendees. You can also submit questions ahead of time when you register. I look forward to our visit.

A new 12th District

Every 10 years after the census information is updated by the federal government, Washington state redraws its congressional and legislative boundaries. The new 12th District is unique as it crosses the Cascade Mountains. It was a surprise to both sides of the mountains and those who follow the redistricting process. The district includes all of Chelan County, most of East Wenatchee, but has relinquished

Cashmere City Council Meeting

By Kirk Beckendorf

Correspondent

At the January 23, Cashmere City Council meeting, Mayor Jim Fletcher introduced Dorien McElroy, the new manager of Cashmere's water and wastewater facilities, for contractor Woodard and Curran. She thanked everyone for the warm welcome and said that she wants to make sure they have a good close working relationship.

The majority of the meeting included discussions focused on interconnected business items related to the Sunset Highway Improvement Project.

Explanations to the Council were provided by city attorney, Chuck Zimmerman, the Mayor and Director of Operations, Steve Croci.

Following a lengthy discussion, in a 4:1 split vote, the City Council approved an Inter-local Agreement (ILA) with Chelan County for bidding and construction activities associated with the Goodwin/ Sunset Highway Improvement Project. Fletcher told the Council that the agreement is basically confirming to the County that Cashmere has enough money to cover all engineering, inspection, construction costs for its portion of the project. According to city documents, the estimated total construction costs for the City's portion of the project are $1,500,000 of which $1,044,834 will come from grant funds. Chris Carlson voted against the agreement. He expressed a number of concerns with the agreement including how costing definitions seemed to be used interchangeably. He also said he would prefer to see specific City and County cost separated out. Also of concern to Carlson was the change orders process in the ILA. Croci said that expensive change orders would need to be approved by the city. Zimmerman responded that these would be handled the same way as if the city was bidding on a project. He added that Croci was very familiar with the project and working with the county; and that the relationship with the county has been great. Carlson said he was not super comfortable with the contract having 20 years of experience working on similar types of contracts. Council member Derrick Pratt said that since the contract is with the county, and knowing the players involved, made him more comfortable and secure with the agreement.

Also associated with the Sunset Highway Improvement Project the City unanimously approved purchasing land from the Chelan Douglas Regional Port Authority (Port).

The land will be used to collect stormwater from the improved road. A condition of the sale was to include a Perpetual Covenant Agreement, where the city also agrees to collect the stormwater from an adjacent piece of Port property into the city's new stormwater retention pond. The adjacent Port property is scheduled to be sold, for retail dayslopment development. In a 2nd 4:1 split vote, with John Perry voting against, the Council approved the Perpetual Covenant Agreement. Perry expressed concern that the city would be setting a precedent if the city is taking responsibility and ultimately providing a service for a private entities' stormwater. He asked Zimmerman if, in the future, the city needed to charge for stormwater treatment. Would anything prevent the city from charging that landowner who owned the property listed in the agreement? Zimmerman replied that was a great question and that as written, the agreement would not allow the city to charge the owner of the parcel. The attorney said he could go back to the Port and ask if they would agree to including a statement that this property would

Good Air

It's cold outside; the doors and windows are shut tight; we're inside keeping warm day and night; the air we breathe gets stale; I woke up with a scratchy throat.

Setting on Jenny, Grandma's little orange snow blower, I got chilled. I know it's important to get off that seat when it's freezing, move the feet, arms, and torso. Grandpa told me long ago that a lack of movement causes the body to get chilled; getting chilled causes sickness and how as a kid growing up in the Rocky Mountains traveling and working on horseback, he got off the horse and walked to keep from getting chilled, then sick, then unable to do work. I know but I forgot.

Snow removal at Grandpa and Grandma's is an ongoing affair; it drains my energy; it stresses my body's immune system and keeping my immune system healthy so I can work is important to me. Usually by this time of the season I've already pulled out my bottle of essential oil, dripped drops from the bottle onto cotton balls and spread the cotton balls around our living quarters to combat air borne disease. This year I forgot.

It was Sonny who found the eucalyptus oil. When I saw him tilting the bottle to smell it, I started to grin. How could I forget something so easy; so effective; so sweet smelling?

When my body gets run down, I am grateful I have essential oils in my arsenal to fight the side effects of late nights (due to access to 24 hour light and digital entertainment) fast food (convenience food gives more time to plow snow) and comfortable seats. I know Jenny's seat may not be considered comfortable by others but once in it for a bit, it gets comfy and warmish as I run Jenny's levers. I get preoccupied blowing snow out of the driveway; I forget to pay attention to the chill that starts in the toes and finger; I forget to move enough muscles to keep my back and belly warm; I wake up with a scratchy throat that hurts when I breathe.

For some reason this year my respiratory system is at its most vulnerable. I'm taking my vitamins as always but I'd kind of forgotten about essential oils until Sonny picked up that bottle and gave it a whiff. So now, I'm busy dripping drops of eucalyptus oil on cotton balls, setting the cotton in glass containers or metal lids and placing them around the apartment. The place smells better and my sore throat is just about gone. It probably doesn't hurt that I'm eating healthy food and getting eight hours of sleep as well.

Recipe for Better Air Quality When It's Too Cold to Open the Windows:

- 4 cotton balls (per room)
- 12 16 drops essential oil
- (3-4 drops per cotton ball) Eucalyptus oil, Lavender oil, Camphor oil, Tea Tree oil, Your Favorite Essential oil.
- 4 dishes for cotton balls to rest in that won't be dissolved by oil.

Place dishes (metal disks from used mason jar canning lids) in four places around the room where folks will be gathering. Keep the dishes out of reach of children and animals. The Essential Oils I use and recommend are safe. All essential oils need to be handled with respect. It is important to me to error on the side of safety by having respectful habits from the beginning, so people are set up for success. To do that I keep in mind the curiousness of cats and kids when I use essential oils. Put 3 to 4 drops of oil on each cotton ball and lay the cotton balls on the dishes then let the aroma disperse into the room. Repeat adding the oil to the cotton balls as needed. Note 1: Make sure the essential oil in use is not synthetic essential oil. I recommend now essential oils, or any pure essential oil recommended by a knowledgeable health food store (preferably local) as being pure. Note 2: Paint, plastics, and some fabrics are susceptible to melting with repeated essential oil contact. This is because paint, plastics and some fabrics are made from Petro-chemicals that are oil based and then the essential oil mixes with oil in the paint, plastics and some fabrics on a molecular level when I take the paint off the dresser top because I wasn't paying attention... so now I use the metal disks from used mason jar canning lids. Until next time.

About the author: In 2000 Michele Priddy left the work force to become a stay-athome mother and wife. Being a one-income family in today's society meant she had to learn to budget quickly. Food became a priority early because she wanted the children to have the best nutrition she could offer them even on a budget. If you are interested in following Senate or House committee meeting agendas, committee schedules, bill introductions, and other documents for this session, visit leg.wa.gov. On the legislative website, you can search for a specific bill or information about it. Since this is a "long" session of 105 days, there will likely be hundreds of proposals introduced. Senate policy committees will have 6 weeks to consider and approve Senate policy bills that are introduced or reintroduced as February 17 is the cutoff date for the policy bills. During this period, hearings will be held on bills to receive public testimony. The Senate fiscal committees (Transportation and Ways and Means) have until the Legislature adjourns on April 23 to pass Senate proposals that were forwarded from these budget committees.

In a 3rd related vote, this one being unanimous, the Council authorized the mayor to sign and approve any unforeseen bid and construction agreements related to the project, with a limit that no single item is greater than $5000 or a cumulative city expense of $15,000.

In other business a unanimous vote approved a reauthorization to RH2

A lighting upgrade by Schmitt Electric to the Wastewater Treatment Center was unanimously approved. The project will retrofit/replace lighting fixtures, lamps, sensors. The cost to the city will be $16,863 with a total project cost of $115,745, the difference will be covered by a $98,882 rebate from the PUD, for reducing electricity demand. Four firms were contacted for bids and two bids were submitted. With PUD rebate the bid from Schmitt Electric, Inc. was the lowest cost to the City. Fletcher said that with the rebate, upgrading the system was cheaper than just changing the light bulbs.

A bounty on water

wolves

A female northern pike full of eggs

By John Kruse

From the late 1800's until the middle of the 20th century there was a bounty on wolves in the Midwest and Western United States. Both individual and government hunters used any means necessary to kill these animals, deemed a dangerous nuisance to livestock. By the time this program ended, wolves were essentially exterminated from the lower 48 states. It wasn't until 1995 when wolves were reintroduced to Yellowstone National Park that their numbers began to come back and today, we are seeing healthy populations of these animals in several states.

The relationship between humans and northern pike is a bit more complicated. These torpedo shaped fish are green in color with white spots and a white belly. They can grow to over 50 inches long and weigh over 45 pounds, though an average sized pike measures between 16 and 22 inches in length. Pike are ambush predators and feed on other fish as well as frogs and even ducklings, waiting in weeds or behind rocks and logs and then lunging forward to attack their prey. With a mouthful of long, sharp teeth they have garnered themselves the nickname, "water wolves".

Unlike the land based wolf, there was no historical dislike for these fish which are found in the northern tier of the United States as well as in Canada and Alaska. They are a sought-after catch because of their size and hard fighting ability. They also taste good though a y-bone in their body makes them more difficult to clean and fillet than walleve or trout. In the winter anglers will target these fish through the ice while in the spring they are often caught in places like Lake Coeur d' Alene fishing bait under a slip bobber. They can also be caught from spring thru fall throughout their native range using large spoons. Casting red and white Dardevle spoons and yellow spoons with red diamonds on them (known as a Five of Diamonds) are traditional offerings.

In Washington State, northern pike are found in Long Lake, the Pend Oreille River and Lake Roosevelt, having migrated there from Lake Coeur d' Alene in Idaho and Montana's Clark Fork River. The fish are not welcome in the Evergreen State. Both the Washington Department of Fish and Wildlife as well as the Colville Tribes are extremely concerned about their impact to native populations in these waterways such as redband trout, sturgeon, burbot and kokanee salmon. Fisheries managers also want to ensure northern pike do not get into the mainstem Columbia River below Grand Coulee Dam where they could wreak havoc with native salmon and steelhead populations.

Since 2015, the Colville Tribes, Spokane Tribe and Washington Department of Fish and Wildlife have been working hard to eradicate pike from these waterways. They have had good success in reducing a burgeoning population of these fish in the Pend Oreille River and since 2015 have removed over 19.100 fish from Lake Roosevelt. The primary method the Colville Tribes use to catch these pike is with gill nets but they have found this method alone is not enough. That's why a bounty program has been introduced at Lake Roosevelt for recreational anglers.

Anglers who catch northern pike (of any size) can turn in the head of the fish at designated drop off sites around Lake Roosevelt and be paid $10 for each fish head turned in.

Anglers can drop off their pike heads at Noisy Waters Gas Station, Kettle Falls boat launch, Hunters boat launch, Fort Spokane boat launch, or at the Inchelium Fish and Wildlife office. In 2022, anglers turned in 125 heads and were paid $1,250.

In an effort to increase the number of fish caught by recreational anglers for this program, the Colville Tribes Fish and Wildlife Department has published a map showing pike hot spots around the lake. Some of these hotspots are found at the mouth of the Kettle River, near Evans, on the eastern end of the lake near Noisy Waters, and at the mouth of the Colville River south of Kettle Falls. Additional places worth fishing can be found south of Gifford and on either side of the reservoir near Hunters.

Here are the rules if you want to participate in the Northern Pike Bounty Program:

- You must be 17 years of age or older to participate in the program.
- Anglers must completely fill out the tag information at the designated drop off area. Fish heads must be placed in a freezer bag with the label and dropped into the freezer or brought to the Inchelium Fish and Wildlife office.
- Fish heads must be in good condition and clearly identifiable. Unidentifiable heads will not be accepted or awarded.

- Fish must be caught in the main stem Columbia River from Wells Dam upstream to the Canadian border, the Spokane River upstream to Little Falls, the Kettle River, or the Okanogan River.
- There are no size restrictions on northern
- · Anglers must adhere to all applicable state/tribal fishing regulations for the area in which you fish. Contact your local state or tribal agency for license requirements and current fishing regulations.

Please allow 2 to 3 weeks to receive your reward. Additional information about the program can be found at www.cct-fnw.com/northernpike.

Girls Basketball: Cashmere upsets the undefeated Okanogan squad

Cashmere (12-4) were poised to square up against the undefeated Okanogan team on Saturday, January 28. The Bulldogs looked to start quickly, but were slowed down by Okanogan's full court press through the first half. The game was close throughout its entirety, but Cashmere was able to go on a scoring run to end the second quarter. They went into the locker room down 27-23, but had regained some momentum to help chip away at the lead. Okanogan came out of the break and dropped into a half court zone defense, forcing Cashmere to look for outside shots and cutters to the basket. Both teams were trading baskets which led to a three-point game with under two minutes remaining in the fourth quarter. Senior #40 Kaitlyn Bjorklund knocked down two clutch free throws towards the end to secure a 57-50 victory over Okanogan. Cashmere showed true grit and fearless tenacity during this game, proving any doubters wrong and securing their spot as a top team in the conference.

Boys Basketball: Okanogan comes out on top of close contest against Cashmere

The Cashmere Bulldogs (6-12) hosted Okanogan (11-8) on Saturday night. Cashmere was met with a zone defense from the beginning of the game, which allowed for cutters to be found within Okanogan's scheme. Early baskets were traded and after one quarter, Okanogan led 15-12. Junior guard Landon Baker was on fire from beyond the arc, draining three pointers to keep up with the fastpaced Okanogan team. Going into halftime, Cashmere trailed 31-33. Okanogan went into the third quarter with a different offensive mindset, running their plays through the bigs in the post. They had the size advantage over Cashmere and they continued to feed the forwards to draw fouls and get easy layups. After a hard fought contest, Cashmere fell to Okanogan with a final score of 66-61. Landon Baker scored 30 points, leading the way for his squad, but this was not enough to propel past the hungry Okanogan squad. Cashmere traveled to Cascade High School on January 31 to attempt another victory over their conference rivals, scores the rest of Douglas County to the 7th District and picked up portions of Snohomish and King counties.

The district includes nine school districts on the eastside of the mountains and eight on the westside. The split on cities is similar as well. I can assure you my seatmates and I have been committed to learning the new portions of the district in order to represent both sides of the mountains. I spent a lot of time during the interim meeting with school districts, local government officials and many other organizations on the west side to familiarize myself with their issues.

Committee assignments

House Local Government Committee: I have again been selected as the lead Republican on this committee. My 16 years as a Chelan County Commissioner gives me a strong perspective on how our local entities view issues such as state agency rulemaking, performance audits and elections at the local level. Changes to the Growth Management Act have come before us and could have a significant impact on local planning responsibilities.

House Environment and Energy Committee: With the abundant, low-cost power we have in North Central Washington and new renewable standards continually being considered, I look forward to being part of the policy discussions coming out of the Legislature. This committee covers a wide array of issues including climate concerns, statewide recycling standards, and chemical issues in consumer products.

Transportation Committee: The new district gives us an opportunity to work with communities on both sides of the mountains to address important transportation needs. The state continues to fall behind on maintenance and preservation while we deal with congestion issues that plague different areas of the 12th District. We are working diligently to elevate the priority of some of these projects in our District.

Legislative priorities

No matter where you reside, most of the challenges facing our state are similar. Legislators need to work together to find common ground and embrace solutions that address our most pressing issues.

Housing

Washington is producing fewer housing units per household than any state in the country due to a variety of factors. We need to look at regulatory fees and costs, permit delays, restrictive zoning laws, and the antiquated Growth Management Act so more people can find affordable homes.

Affordability

The state has seen record tax collections, massive increases in budget spending, but no tax relief has been provided for our citizens. As the cost of goods and services have also increased, tax relief should be considered to reduce your cost of living.

Public safety

Crime continues to increase in Washington with chronic homelessness, substance abuse, and untreated mental health conditions exacerbating the issue. We need to ensure our families, communities, and law enforcement are safe. We need to be stronger on crime, restore vehicular pursuit (bipartisan legislation has been introduced House Bill 1363), address drug addiction, and put more officers on the street. Washington ranks last in the nation of officers per capita.

Transportation

While the majority party did pass a transportation plan last session, it did not provide much for our region. I am hoping we can take a more proactive approach to creating a sustainable and resilient transportation spending plan.

Homelessness

The increase homelessness over the last ten years in Washington state is staggering. (See chart below.) This is tied to our housing crisis, but also mental health and substance abuse issues. We need to consider all aspects of this issue. Spending enormous amounts of money on it has not solved the problem.

Follow the Legislature

I encourage you to stay engaged and follow the Legislature. I look forward to hearing from those new to the 12th District. It is important you provide input on issues that matter to you, our district and Washington state. Please contact me with any questions, concerns, or comments you have. I appreciate the feedback as it helps me better represent you in the Legislature. It is an honor to serve the 12th District in the state House of Representatives.

Need relief of coughs, colds, and flu?

Flu season is in full swing. Here are my favorite products for relief of coughs, colds, and flu:

1. Delsym® for relief of cough.

Delsym® contains single ingredient, dextromethorphan (DM), the same active ingredient as in Robitussin DM®. Unlike Robitussin, each  $concentrated \, dose \, of \, Del sym \, {\rm \rlap{R}}$ lasts 12 hours, from morning to evening, and is nearly as effective as prescription cough medicines containing codeine. DM rarely causes drowsiness, so it is safe to use when driving a car or working around machinery.

2. Tylenol® for fever and body aches.

I prefer extra-strength acetaminophen 500mg tablets for headaches and fever instead of ibuprofen or naproxen. Acetaminophen is less irritating to your stomach, especially when chicken soup is all you feel like eating.

Taking too much Tylenol® can damage your liver. NEVER take more than the maximum recommended daily dose of acetaminophen. This amounts to 8 extrastrength tablets (4 grams) of acetaminophen daily for healthy adults. For a senior, the recommended maximum dose is 3.1 grams or 6 extrastrength Tylenol® 500mg tablets. If you have liver problems, check with your doctor whether there is a safe dose of Tylenol® for you.

3. Aleve® for body aches. The influenza symptom that keeps people in bed or curled up on the sofa in aches. Sometimes I wake up so sore that I must have been attacked by a ninja with their fighting sticks in my sleep.

Naproxen (Aleve®) is my go-to for muscle aches because each dose lasts 8-12 hours, twice as long as ibuprofen (Advil, Motrin-IB). I used to use ibuprofen, but I would wake up at 3:30 in the morning in discomfort when it wore off.

Anti-inflammatory medicines (NSAIDs) like naproxen and ibuprofen relieve body aches better acetaminophen. Unfortunately, they have side effects: stomach irritation, and bleeding, kidney problems. Always drink plenty of fluids when taking any NSAID to avoid kidney damage.

People who prescription blood thinners like Coumadin® (warfarin), Pradaxa®, Xarelto®, Eliquis®, or Plavix® (clopidogrel) need to be especially cautious. To reduce stomach irritation and the risk of developing a bleeding ulcer, you should ALWAYS take any NSAID either with a full glass of water or beverage, or with food.

4. Sudafed® for sinus and nasal congestion.

The original form of Sudafed® contains decongestant pseudoephedrine. I prefer 30mg tablets to relieve my stuffy nose and sinus misery is severe muscle pressure. There are also 60mg tablets, both of which are only available "behind the counter." I find it's worth the hassle of showing my identification to have an effective decongestant. The Food and Drug Administration restricts phenylephrine doses to 1/3 the comparable dose of pseudoephedrine because full doses are associated with elevated blood pressure and strokes.

5. Actifed® for runny nose and sneezing.

The original Actifed® formula contained pseudoephedrine to relieve nasal congestion plus an older antihistamine called triprolidine. Triprolidine effectively dries up a runny nose and decreases sneezing without causing much drowsiness. It was a favorite remedy of surgeons who didn't want their noses to drip into their surgical masks when leaning over patients during procedures.

I have recommended this inexpensive option for years. Last week, when my husband Charlie stopped by our pharmacy to pick up some generic Actifed®, called Aprodine®, they had none. Their supplier was out and didn't know if or when it would become available

When Charlie asked for Aprodine® at other pharmacies in town, he got blank looks. The pharmacists had no idea what he was talking about. They insisted that Aprodine® didn't exist!

6. Mucinex Night Shift® Cold and Flu for multisymptom relief at night.

While I prefer using products with one ingredient to mix and match my symptoms, my husband wants something to "knock me out so I can get some rest."

He loved the original version of Nyquil®. It contained pseudoephedrine for stuffy nose and sinus pressure, acetaminophen for fever and aches, dextromethorphan for cough, the antihistamine doxylamine for runny nose, sneezing and to help him sleep, all in green or red flavors containing 25% alcohol. In 2006, pseudoephedrine was restricted, and Nyquil'®s formula was updated. They replaced the decongestant with phenylephrine and decreased the alcohol content to 10%. We kept Nyquil® Cold and Flu on hand because it didn't contain phenylephrine as a decongestant.

Some people feel "hung over" in the morning after taking Nyquil®. That's most likely due to the antihistamine doxylamine, also found in Unisom®, a popular non-prescription sleep aid.

We prefer Mucinex Night Shift® Cold and Flu because it contains triprolidine, and you can add pseudoephedrine if needed.
