

Bears and more bears, yes or no?

Part 2: What should residents expect and do?

By Wesley Zhao
Correspondent

There is some evidence that local natural food scarcity may have been more of an issue this year than others. Two local biologists up the Chumstick, Don Youkey and Lisa Foster, noticed snow melted later, continued to fall later, and unforgiving frost continued to form later into the spring. Brit Thurlow, an herbalist who has lived near Eagle Creek Road for six seasons, collected corroborating data: “I track every year. I have a journal for planting and foraging for both my garden and wild foraging. And everything was about two weeks later this year.” She witnessed fruiting branches knocked over by snowstorms and blossoming reduced by late frost. “We had this kind of sunnier 70-75-degree days, but then it would drop down really low at night.” As bears struggled to find natural food sources, it may have increased the incidence of looking elsewhere and wandering closer to town.

Still, it is not clear to what extent bear activity has increased overall this year rather than increased in more visible areas; nor is it clear to what extent this year’s change may be driven by natural environmental causes rather than changes in the availability of access to junk foods in town. Officer Eric Boyd, who responds to local calls to the WDFW, has not noticed a specific increase this year, but says depending on the year, “different areas of town tend to be more active or less active.”

“There are neighborhoods I went to probably a dozen or more times last year that I haven’t gotten any calls [from this year]... This year, there are neighborhoods where maybe I didn’t have many calls last year [now] I’ve had a bunch.” Boyd identified Alpensee Strasse as a neighborhood with more calls in 2021. This is where Diane Wells saw two bears climb onto her deck last year but has seen no bears this year. Along the same street, one neighbor reported noticing more bears this year, and another reported no difference. Thurlow and Ludwick both live near Eagle Creek Road, and the former noticed a bit more bear presence, while Ludwick noted no difference. Experience alters perception. To gain a broader perspective, Becky Elder, WDFW media representative, has requested data that may reveal whether bear-related calls in Leavenworth have objectively changed. Personally, she has noticed a general trend of increased reports since around 2014, which she suspects may be related to the adoption of video doorbells (Ring released its first video doorbell in 2014, now almost 1 in 5 households have video doorbells). “We didn’t really have the same level of pictures and cameras and all the technologies that have given us that,” says Elder. Perhaps a small increase in real bear activity may be perceived as larger as a result of the ability to capture and share photos and videos in ways we have not been able to before. Perception alters experience.

Elder and WDFW do not want citizens to stop reporting, however. Elder, Boyd, and Beausoleil, all emphasized their collective goal of protecting public safety. “I would not suggest a reader not give us a call,” says Elder. WDFW officers work through a series of response options, and lethal removal is always only the last resort. First, calls are logged. Calls provide data to help officials assess the level of threat an animal may pose. If the risk is low but seems to be growing — for example, the same bear is seen once or twice rummaging through garbage — the next response option is a prevention-oriented site visit. Officers will assess what is attracting the bear (almost always a food attractant, according to Beausoleil), then do their best to educate residents and businesses nearby on how to reduce attraction. If the bear acts in a way that signals increased risk and reduced fear of humans — for example, not running from or even moving toward human shouting — the greater the likelihood WDFW will escalate their response and set a trap to relocate or lethally remove the bear. Relocation is more likely to occur with younger cubs, as adults have more likely developed stronger human habituation (Elder and Boyd recounted a bear relocated from the Lake Wenatchee area to 50 miles north of Lake Chelan, then within about a week, had crossed the lake and two major mountain ranges to come back to the original human food source). My impression is the WDFW makes a genuine, exhaustive effort, to avoid resorting to lethal removal whenever possible. For example, even though they caught a bear on Blackbird Island, it was not the bear they had previously received numerous reports of. They had no previous record of their trapped bear, concluded no evidence of growing threat, and they released it.

Bears are intelligent. They can learn quickly, especially if it increases their calories per bite tenfold. But if humans can easily get addicted to quick, dense, junk food, we can expect similar tendencies from bears, who appreciate fattening up. And just as it is easier said than done for ourselves, so too must effort be exerted if we hope to prevent this type of learning and habituation from bears.

“At the end of the day it comes back to food sources,” says Elder. Beausoleil emphasizes how effective securing possible food sources, such as our garbage bins, can be, at reducing unnecessary bear interactions. King County implemented a pilot “Bear Smart” program in 2016 where certain municipalities subsidized bear-resistant garbage containers and increased education efforts. Anecdotally, Beausoleil noticed a dramatic reduction in bear-related reportings around the same time. He also recalled the local Barn Beach Reserve becoming proactive about bear-resistant containers several years ago and saw a similar dramatic decrease in incidents. To support his point more scientifically, he emailed me a 2018 research study from Durango, CO., where bear-related conflicts were reduced by 60% in the half of the community where they increased efforts to supply bear-resistant containers and educate residents.

Along with using bear-resistant garbage containers, Beausoleil urges residents to consider keeping containers indoors whenever possible (for example in a garage), and to try to put garbage out at the latest possible moment (same day rather than the night before pick-up). Motivated and creative residents have implemented other deterrents that have so far proven successful: the Valley Cafe installed a custom lock on their city-issued garbage bin; The Alpine Rivers Inn rubbed a small coat of ammonia on their garbage lids; and David Ising, at Blewett Brewing, soaked some bread in habanero hot sauce, threw it in with the trash, and has not seen a bear rummaging through since.

Voos says the City is “absolutely looking at ways to manage garbage in a way that prevents bears from getting into garbage cans.” The City has already increased garbage pickup from six days-per-week to seven, they are sending the Public Works Director, Tom Wachholder, to a conference for communities which are seeing similar bear activity, and they are coordinating closely with the WDFW. Waste Management, which picks up single-residence garbage, offers bear-resistant bins for an extra $13 per month, which is understandably not affordable for everyone.

Many of us chose to live here, in bear country. And even though there are 500 sightings reported to the WDFW every year, only about 20 encounters have resulted in human injury since 1970. There has been only one recorded bear-related human death, which occurred in 1974. So, in Washington, we averaged 0.3 black bear-related human injuries and a negligible 0.02 black bear-related human fatalities per year. On the other hand, around 50 black bears are put down every year in Washington. For the same encounter, a bear takes on a disproportionate amount of risk. Perhaps we should assume a large proportion of the responsibility. Climate change is expected to increase the frequency of droughts, late spring frosts, and natural resource challenges. And natural resource challenges are expected to increase bear movement toward human-related resources. As we near the hibernation months, bears will get hungrier. In the coming months and years, therefore, it may be prudent to increase our vigilance if we are interested in reducing risky encounters with the bears as pressures mount for their search for food.

Is bear activity different this year in Leavenworth? Perhaps. Probably at least slightly. Perceived changes may be explained by the difficult weather, by location visibility, or something else. But most residents, old or new, can agree with Beausoleil on at least one thing: “[Bears] are always going to move through [Leavenworth]... You’re gonna have sightings.” And the choices we make for the remainder of this season and years forward will impact whether those sightings increase the risk of unfortunate interactions. By acting to reduce bear access to unnatural, human-generated food sources, especially during the feeding months from spring to fall, we can greatly reduce the occurrence of high-risk encounters and ultimately reduce the number of WDFW lethal bear removals. By securing trash bins, keeping them indoors for as long as possible, and removing bird feeders and pet food from the outdoors during these months, we can more peacefully coexist with the bears.

If you have questions for the city, email hello@cityofleavenworth.com. If you’d like to order a bear-resistant garbage container from Waste Management, call 877-466-4668. To report a habituated bear, call WDFW at 360-902-2936.

Corrections: Part one initially stated, “brown bears” but it was supposed to read “black bears.” There has been no official record of Grizzly bears (commonly referred to as “brown bears”) in the area since the 1990s. Part one also specified a number of lethal removals, this number has been removed until further verification.

Salmon Festival

Roger Amerman of the Choctaw Nation presented a series of historical photographs that show the significance of the Native American long tent as the center of tribal community. In this photo, Amerman is discussing the East-West orientation of the long tent to a classroom from Roots Community School from Chelan. It was one of several learning stations students visited during the 30th annual Wenatchee River Salmon Festival Sept. 15-16.

Festival Coordinator

“The celebration of the return of the salmon at the 30th Anniversary of the Wenatchee River Salmon Festival was a special event to remember forever! It’s all about connecting kids with nature”, said Festival Coordinators Corky Broadus, Betsy McIndoe, and Chelan PUD’s Kristin Lodge. More than 1,600 elementary school students from throughout North Central Washington spent an “edu-taining” day with top natural resource specialists from around the Pacific Northwest. The Native American “River Ramble” program shared the cultural significance of salmon to all attendees. Indigenous people came from several Tribes, including the Wenatchi, Colville, Yakama, Nez Perce, and more.

Cashmere City Council

A public comment requesting that the city of Cashmere reconsider its ordinance prohibiting chickens on small lots, kicked off the City Council’s Sept. 12 meeting. Cashmere resident, Eva Lorenz, told the Council that over 60 individuals had signed an informal petition she had posted on social media. According to Lorenz the majority were in favor of the city allowing chickens. She suggested the city model a new ordinance similar to Ellensburg’s. Councilwoman Jayne Stephenson expressed her interest in discussing the matter and asked if roosters are allowed. Lorenz replied that most people don’t want roosters and most city’s do not allow them. Councilwoman Shela Pistoressi raised the question of how a new code would be enforced. Stephenson and Council member Chris Carlson both stated that they were supportive of the idea of allowing chickens. Mayor Jim Fletcher reminded the Council that a public hearing would need to take place before any action was taken, since this would require a change to a city ordinance.

Councilman John Perry expressed his thanks to the individuals who cleaned up the cemetery.

With a quick vote, and little discussion, an agreement for Emergency Management Services in 2023 with the Chelan County Sheriff’s Office was unanimously approved. Mayor Fletcher explained that it was the same agreement as 2022, just with a new rate, $3.04 per capita.

Approval was given by the Council for the 2023 budget proposed by Woodard and Currant (W&C) to continue the company’s management of Cashmere’s water and wastewater facilities. The $1,381,106 budget includes an 8% CPI increase. The Council also approved an amendment to the 2022 W&C budget, the result of a miss calculation of taxes which reduces the contract by $853.

A unanimous vote amended the city’s agreement with Aerial Paraglider (AP) reducing the required amount of liability insurance. In May an agreement allowing the company to use Riverside Park was approved and required AP to carry at least $5,000,000 of liability insurance per occurrence. City Clerk/Treasurer, Kay Jones explained that the city requires rafting companies who use the park to carry $1 million dollars of insurance coverage. Cashmere’s Director of Operations, Steve Croci, recommended that the same requirement apply to AP.

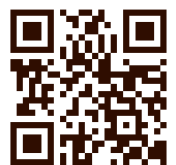

Jones announced that additional water meters will be arriving this week. The meters that have already been installed have been useful in detecting leaks and she told the Council that she had just mailed out 17 letters to let people know that their water usage indicated that they may have a water leak. The new meters can show the amount being used at specific times throughout the day.

Croci told the Council that a new federal endangered species act regulations from US Fish and Wildlife Service and NOAA Fisheries will impact upgrades to Sunset Highway. To maintain the 2023 construction, schedule all stormwater runoff will need to be retained and cannot go directly into the river. The City is working with Chelan County on updated stormwater designs and to obtain additional right of way acquisition services. Additionally, the City is working with the Chelan Douglas Regional Port District to retain some land for a stormwater retention pond.

Fletcher announced that Senator Hawkins would be in town, and he planned to discuss a variety of topics with the Senator, including funding for roads, funding and reinstatement of proper law enforcement, the 1% levy requirements negative impact on small towns, and that Cashmere does not want to lose its community pool to support a regional pool. Fletcher also explained that an assessment of the City’s properties has been conducted. Fletcher said that he wants to start the discussion in January for the long-term plans for the city’s buildings. He said that potentially some of the buildings could be sold.

Cashmere Cross Country Team

SUBMITTED BY COACH JEFF KENOYER

Cross Country practice began on Monday, August 26 for the 2022 season. Thirty-two runners are currently on the roster: four seniors, eleven juniors, eight sophomores and nine freshmen. Seven lettermen return from last season. Nineteen of the runners are new to Cashmere High School cross country but all thirty-two runners on the roster are athletic and have been part of sports programs in middle school or high school. It has been a hot start to the season, but the athletes are persevering.

The girls' part of the team has just one member that has high school cross country running experience. However, the other girls have athletic experience and are working hard at running. The boys' team has a core group that had a lot of success last fall. The boys team finished second to the Cascade Kodiaks in the District Championship race in a close contest. The Kodiaks team then went on to the State Championship meet and finished third overall. Only the District champion team had the chance to compete as a team at state. Three Cashmere individuals, Kaden Miller, Hugh Wheeler and Garrik Strong also competed at the state championship cross country meet due to finishing first, fourth and fifth respectively at the district meet. All three of these boys return to the team. Tristan Hoffman, a 2022 graduate, also ran at state. She competed in three state meets during her high school career.

Our league, the Caribou Trail League, has traditionally been very tough in cross country. Omak, Chelan, Cashmere, Cascade and Quincy make up the league. League schools have won state championships and have had Top Ten team finishes at the state meet. In three of the four most recent state meets, Cashmere girls have finished in the Top Ten three times while the boys have had two Top Ten finishes.

Based on potential returning runners from last season it appears that Cascade and Omak will be tough opponents for the girls while Cascade will be the team to beat for the boys District championship. Chelan and Quincy are always tough and cannot be overlooked in the battle to win the championship. Since only the champion team makes it to the state meet, it should be an exciting District Championship race.

OBITUARY

Terry Michael West

January 21, 1963 - August 26, 2022

Terry Michael West passed on Friday August 26, 2022, at the age 59 found at home doing what he did. Born on January 21, 1963 and raised in Peshastin and lifelong resident of the Valley.

He is survived by 2 daughters Tonya and Natasha West. 3 brothers William, Robert, and Raymond West, 1 sister Susan Dodrill. Preceded by his brother David West and sister Glendora Haskett.

Graveside service was held on Friday Sept. 2, 2022, at the Cashmere Cemetery where countless loved ones and co-workers showed and gave respect. "The compound" provided space for gathering following where Terry was together shared by stories told, photos taken, and traditions had.

He was a hard worker and spent a well-earned 30 years at Selland Construction where he will be remembered indefinitely. Terry was more than a good enough father, brother, uncle, cousin, and friend.

He found himself in the woods and up the Icicle River often and that's where he loved to be when he wasn't out fishing, hunting mushrooms, running into wildlife, or with his family.

We know he'd want us all to rest in each other, love always, and give thanks often.

He will be remembered always and loved by us all.

He will always be with us in memories made, by his laugh, his smile, his eyes, crazy hair, mostly his hugs. His spirit lives on in song, and we can find reminders of him almost everywhere and in each other.

We find great comfort knowing he is at peace now and will rest amongst his Father Archibald "Bud" his Mother Esther E. West and brother David West and other family members.

He remains forever in our hearts and will be greatly missed and loved Always.

Obituary & Memorial Policies

NCW Media, Inc.: Leavenworth Echo, Cashmere Valley Record, Lake Chelan Mirror, Quad City Herald. An Obituary is a way for family member(s) to commemorate a loved one's life and to notify the community of the passing of the loved one. Obituaries are also used for historical and ancestral data. Memorials are another way to let the community know about the life and memories of the person who has passed. A Memorial is different from an Obituary. An Obituary is usually current, while a Memorial can be written later. Obituaries and Memorials need to be typed and emailed as a Word Document. They can be placed in one or more papers - all publish weekly on Wednesday. Obituaries are priced by the number of words and include one color photo and go online at no extra charge. Memorials are priced per column inch. Please call for cost. *Payment is due at the time of placement. *Exception: Chapels, funeral homes who have an account, can be billed. There is no charge for a Death Notice - information is limited. Deadline is 4 p.m. on Friday - some exceptions may apply. Please call 509-548-5286 for more information Or email classifieds@leavenworthecho.com

Ear wax - 5 tips to combat it

Q: Which ear drops remove ear wax best? Some people (like yours truly) are enthusiastic earwax producers and ask themselves this question frequently. The medical name for earwax is cerumen, which comes from the Latin word "cera," which means wax. But cerumen isn't really a "wax" at all. It's a sticky liquid secreted by the cells of the skin lining your ear canal. Cerumen has an important job: protecting your eardrum by trapping dirt and dust. Ear wax is supposed to move along your ear canal and out of your ear. Along the way, earwax has an antimicrobial effect, which helps prevent infection of your ear canal. Some people's earwax just flakes away and never causes any trouble. But for the rest of us, it can be an ongoing source of discomfort. In fact, problems with earwax are one of the most common reasons people make appointments to see their doctor. Wearing hearing aids or earbuds increases the production of ear wax and can block the normal movement of it out of your ear. Cerumen trapped inside your ear canal can cause pressure, discomfort, and hearing loss. Attempting to remove ear wax by sticking cotton-tipped swabs or bobby pins into your ear canal doesn't work very well. The friction stimulates cerumen production and creates a wax plug inside your ear, leading to pressure, pain, and impaction. The best way to remove ear wax is to soften the wax to help it come out on its own or be flushed out. There are two main types of cerumen removal drops: oil-based and water-based. Oil-based "drops" include olive oil, coconut oil, and almond oil. At the same time, saline, hydrogen peroxide, glycerin, and docusate are water-based earwax softeners. There isn't any one best ear drop for ear wax removal. A recent systematic review of products used to remove ear wax showed no apparent differences between oil-based and water-based products. The 3 top earwax removal drops in the United States are 6.5% solutions of carbamide peroxide, available as Debrox®, Murine®, and ClearCanal® from NeilMed. According to a 2018 US News and World Report and Pharmacy Times survey, 96% of American pharmacists recommend carbamide peroxide drops to soften ear wax, while the other 4% recommend glycerin drops. Carbamide peroxide reacts with earwax to release oxygen, creating foam that liquefies the cerumen and helps it rinse away. I stopped using Debrox® because of the annoying crackling and popping sounds and unbearable tickling sensation inside my ear canal. Docusate sodium (Waxsol®) ear drops are used to soften earwax in the UK. Docusate is a stool softener or lubricant laxative. It pulls liquid into hard stool or feces, making it softer and easier to eliminate. It's believed to do the same thing to impacted cerumen. In our clinic, we add docusate liquid in the ear for 1-3 days, then flush the ear canal with warm water. I use docusate 250mg capsules. After snipping a hole in the end, I squeeze the contents into my ear canal, repeating this twice a day for a couple of days. I flush my ears gently with warm water in a bulb syringe or during a warm shower. To help ear wax escape, place the nose of the bulb syringe along the top of your ear canal rather than in the middle. Avoid "power washing," which can damage your eardrum with too much pressure. Remove leftover water from your ears by tipping your head and blotting with a towel or using a hair dryer on a low setting. You can also use an ear drop designed to dry up the water in your ear, like Swim-Ear®, which contains isopropyl alcohol and anhydrous glycerin.

Here Are 5 Tips to Combat Earwax: 1. Don't push cotton-tipped swabs, bobby pins, or rolled napkins into your ear. These can create plugs of ear wax inside your ear canal, leading to impaction and pressure, pain, and muffled hearing. 2. Both oil-based and water-based drops work to soften cerumen. Finding something that works for you is often a process of trial-and-error. 3. Avoid using eardrops if you have ear pain, bleeding, or any discharge from your ear. Call your doctor instead. You could have an external ear infection, which needs a different approach. 4. Don't use a Water Pik® or high-powered device to flush out your ears. Too much pressure can damage your eardrum or force fluid past it, triggering an inner ear infection. 5. Use warm water when flushing. Cold water is uncomfortable and can cause problems with your balance.
