An Interview with James Hopkins, an American in Ukraine

Northwest native with ties to Leavenworth (his brother Matt), has lived in Ukraine for twenty-four years and calls it home. He lives in Lutsk, in northwest Ukraine, with his wife, Valya, a Ukrainian, and their two daughters, Arina, 15, and Samantha, 14.

Right now, they're coping CORRESPONDENT with daily peril ever since the Russian invasion began in late February. This is an extreme escalation, though Ukraine and Russia have been in military conflict for eight years, ever since Russia overtook Crimea and the Donbas

Lutsk is only two hours from the borders with Poland and Belarus and has seen a flood of refugees fleeing the war zone in Kyiv and further east. About 1.5 million have fled into Poland and a million into other European countries. Families with three or more children are allowed to leave, but those with two or less are expected to stay and help defend

"We decided to stay no matter what." Hopkins said, speaking of his family. To shed light on his perspective, he quoted the Bible verse John 15:13, which states, "Greater love has no one than this: to lay down one's life for one's friends." If they left, he said it would be hard to come back later and look his friends in the eye. He thinks he might be the only American left in a city of 250,000. His family has welcomed members of two soldier families into their home to help keep the children in a safer location. The international mission organization that he works for, Youth with a Mission, is run by volunteers like himself. Youth with a Mission's Lutsk facilities have been turned into accommodations for refugees. "We feed forty to sixty people three meals a day.'

Refugees are taking only those belongings that can fit into a car along with about five people. Families have had to split up, sometimes leaving grandparents behind. They also leave pets behind, now seen in the streets as strays.

Hopkins explained that there are daily rescue missions to go into the war zone and retrieve people. The rescue vans face extreme danger. They drive on backroads to avoid Russian forces, and yet, if they encounter Russian soldiers, they come under machine gun fire, even with the words, "Refugees" or "Children" written on the sides of Ukrainians are rallying to defend their country. Ukrainians have not been an overly patriotic people, Hopkins said, because of past corruption. But there's much to kindle national pride including a beautiful countryside with some of the best topsoil in the world. He compared Ukraine to a slightly colder Washington, with a variety of mixed forest, coniferous forest and temperate grasslands and shrub steppe.

Every city has several thousand ready to fight-a combination of soldiers and civilians. But most soldiers have gone to Kyiv to defend it from falling to the Russians.

suffer from limited supplies. Hopkins said there's only one medical kit for every hundred soldiers, so Youth with a Mission has ordered more medical kits to be distributed soon.

The Russians have numerical artillery advantage. For instance,

Hopkins said, "The Russians had 11,200 tanks to about 150 Ukrainian tanks in the beginning." But many Russian tanks have been destroyed. "Ukraine lost almost all their tanks from attacks but now have even more than they had to start with because Russians have abandoned their tanks or they were damaged. The Ukrainians fixed them, and now Ukraine has 300 newer tanks, thanks to the Russians."

The bombing is not confined to the eastern parts of Ukraine, a country the size of Texas. Russians have bombed many cities. Lutsk has been bombed twice already from ground to air missiles coming from Belarus. The first strike, on the first day of the Russian attack, hit a military base, and the other, which occurred on March 11th, targeted a jet engine factory and an oil refinery.

The city is preparing for the worst. "There are military blockades all around the city." Hopkins worries that his home is near the possible targets of a pipeline and a communication tower.

"My daughters are worried. There's been lots of tears." But they are busy, like everyone, serving the refugees and the soldiers. Schools are closed, but Hopkins says, "My daughters are getting a way bigger education right now.

"A positive from all this is that kids are thinking deeply about things. They still have fun when they can, but they are being given responsibility, and they're maturing. They're doing good work with the little kids that are coming through."

The situation is made messier Ukrainians because Russians have many intertwined relationships. There are many Russians and Belarusians living and working in Ukraine, but the trust has deteriorated. Hopkins explained that Valya's sister lives in Russia, and, like all Russians, only gets propaganda-like news that comes from state-run outlets. Russians have been misinformed and told that the invasion is justified to free oppressed Ukrainians, protect ethnic Russians in Ukraine and as a response to Ukraine acting as an aggressor against Russia.

There are glimmers of hope. "Ukrainians are fighting for something. Russians are not," said Hopkins. Also, "Zelenskyy has matured as a leader. He has gone through the fire and can lead us to making a better country." But with darker resignation, Hopkins said, "It's probably not going to get better. Our city could get leveled." He has made some preparations. "I've buried gasoline tanks in the yard. We have a generator, lots of nonperishable food, our own well, a root cellar." They've gone down into the root cellar a few times already, when they hear a nearby siren, or when they get warning text messages from the soldier parents of the children staying with them. "I am not fearful. We feel at peace." But he's certainly moved, despite his calm. "I cry about the tragedies. TV here doesn't blur the pictures. Nothing is hidden."

Hopkins was generous with his time in the interview because he wants people to know the truth. Thousands are dead, overwhelming hospitals. The Russians have bombed hospitals, including a children's hospital, and over 200 schools. As the Russian envoys travel down roads, they shoot everything along the sides. They torture prisoners. "Ukrainians are angry, and they will never forgive Russia." In contrast, Hopkins said Ukrainians are treating the Russian wounded soldiers. Some of the Russian soldiers are very young. Ukraine's officials allow them to be released if their mothers cross the border and come and get them and see firsthand the devastation the Russians are creating in Ukraine.

While Hopkins understands international hesitancy against military action which could provoke Putin, he thinks sanctions need to go further and close every bank, not just some of them. He also said, "I do not agree with sitting back and not protecting an innocent country like Ukraine." For those who would like to help with emergency relief and cover basic needs of refugees, Hopkins said donations can be made through Youth with a Mission. The link is: https://prayforukraine.life/.

Hopkins is fond of Leavenworth, and visits sometimes when he and his family come back to the U.S. every three years. He closed the interview that crossed ten hours of time zone difference with a request for residents of Leavenworth, saying, "I would appreciate prayers for Ukraine."

Come explore Shane's free library in Cashmere

By Gina Quinn

You are invited to explore Shane's Free Library a mere 30-minute walk from downtown Cashmere or a 5minute walk from the Fairgrounds.

The Quinn Family built Shane's Free Library in loving memory of Shane F. Quinn, who died from advanced metastatic prostate cancer on April 1, 2021 at the age of 71. As the 1-year anniversary of Shane's death nears, the Quinn family invites you to scoutout and discover Shane's Free Library. Shane was an avid reader. Some of his favorite authors were Stephen King, Clive Custer and Vance Flynn. He loved historical fiction, science fiction, crime fiction, mystery thrillers and American literature classics. Shane visited the Cashmere library often, but also searched for his favorite authors at Cashmere's DMV, Wenatchee's thrift shops or local yard sales. He also exchanged a plethora of books with his close friend, Ed Farmbrook.

Given the amount of foot, stroller, bicycle and dog traffic on Kimber Road, building Shane's Free Library at his home seemed like a great way to honor his memory and keep his love of reading and community alive. The first Little Free Library (LFL) was built in 2009, and today there are more than 125,000 registered and volunteerled LFL's around the world (https:// littlefreelibrary.org/).

Nate Shaver, son-in-law, built Shane's Free Library, Gary Peters, neighbor, added woodworking touches, and Amy Wall, niece, contributed artwork. Shane's Free Library was chartered and registered in November, 2021 with the non-profit, Shane's Free Library brings neighbors together, spreads bookjoy, motivates adults and children to "unplug," and promotes sustainability with the simple exchange of books. Shane's Free Library offers a variety of books for the young and old. Recently, Well Beings Studio donated a number of books for families impacted by cancer. In addition to books, there are dog treats, bookmarkers, CD's, magazines and even an occasional stuffed toy in the Library. Shane's Free Library is open year-round and located near the backstop at 5920 Kimber Rd., in Cashmere, Please stop by to "Take A Book or Share A Book."

Cashmere Coach comments

Boys Baseball - Coach Colton Loomis

Coach Colton Loomis has been Cashmere's head baseball coach for three years. Currently, their program has 20 players who are considered returning players, with five freshmen coming into the program.

"This year we have had a raise in overall numbers from my previous two seasons," Loomis states. "Last year we finished second in our league with an overall record of 8-6."

Coach Loomis said that his standout players so far are Jack Croci, Cort Lawson, and Caedman Wilkinson.

Coaching team members are: Coach Colton Loomis, Assistant Bryan Widener and Assistant Tyler Thiess.

"I am very excited to coach this group of guys this year. It is our first 'normal' season in a few years and we have a lot of hard working guys who are competing for a position on the field! Can't wait to get after it!"

You can find their schedule here: https:// cashmerebulldogs.com/ teams/3187436/boys/baseball/ varsity/schedule#

Tennis - Coach Trevor Kert

Coach Trevor Kert has been coaching Cashmere High School Tennis for eight years. Returning varsity players include sophomore Faith Kert, senior Lauren Kert, senior Julian Hernandez along with Zeke Lewis and JJ Groner, both juniors.

Standouts include Lauren Kert and Faith Kert for girls' tennis, along with senior Julian Hernandez and juniors JJ Groner and Zeke Lewis.

"We have several junior varsity players and a variety of new players giving tennis a try for the first time," Kert said. "Last season both the boys and girls were league champs in our shortened season."

Kert reports that the number of players for girls' tennis are about the same, with the number of boys' tennis players down this year. Kert states that Chelan is their toughest competitor and expects that to be the case this year.

"We graduated a majority of our boys and girls varsity teams last year so I'm looking forward to a lot more students learning the game of tennis this year. I'm also excited for our teams to get their first full season in the last three years. We have a few veteran players that have put a lot of time into their tennis game and this will be a chance for them to enjoy the benefits of their hard work."

"Last year on varsity, we won our modified league, went 4-0 and 6-4-1 overall. We played some very talented 4A schools and competed against them," Flores explained. "The toughest team we will face this year would probably be Cascade since it is our rival."

Coaching staff include Head Coach Emmanuel Flores, Assistant Coach Barry Hodges, along with volunteer assistants Oscar Orozco and Javi Reyna.

Standout players include Senior Captain Miguel Ramos, Senior Captain Sam Graves, Goalkeeper Dalan Smart, and Luke Fox Freshman.

"The team this year will be competitive and will surprise many people as long as we carry our momentum from last season."

Cashmere City Council delays decision on Operations and Maintenance Agreement

By Joel Walinski

The City Council spent two hours debating the merits of the Operations and Maintenance Agreement Woodard & Curran (W&C) and moved to postpone and continue their consideration of the new agreement to Wednesday, March 16. Under the O&M agreement, Woodard & Curran would oversee the maintenance of the City's water and wastewater operations. (See updated information in an additional article by Megan Sokol.)

The meeting began with Mayor Jim Fletcher calling for an Executive Session for the Council to discuss potential litigation. After the 30-minute session the council resumed the meeting.

The first item of consideration was Ordinance 1309 granting a legal nonconforming well for irrigation use only at 300 Sullivan Street. The approved ordinance provides the owner of the property, Mr. Dean Hills the legal authority to complete the drilling of the new well which began last fall.

The council then approved a resolution that would allow the Mayor to negotiate with Correct Equipment, Inc for replacement water meters as a sole source vendor. The City is looking into replacement meters with Advanced Infrastructure Metering (AMI) using acoustic meters with a bid alternative to add acoustic leak detection (ALD) that would monitor both customer service lines and City's distribution lines. A final contract will be brought back to the council for review.

Council discussion on the W&C maintenance agreement focused council concerns were related to details involving the contract, how the contract would work, questions regarding current employees, and how the city would maintain control over the waste treatment.

Mayor Fletcher began the discussion on the proposed contract, giving his thoughts on the proposal.

'The whole intent of bringing in Woodard & Curran or any management company is to bring in a management level for a comprehensive operation... we are looking at not an immediate cost saving but an investment, how can we become more efficient over time, looking at things like preventative maintenance and industry best practice."

Mr. Anthony Naccarato, W&C Client Manager, gave a recap of the process to date which started in August 2021. David Kitzmiller, Operations Leader spoke on the transition process, which would include a transition of employees and discussion with the union, with a starting date of May 1 if

Public comments included former Mayor, Jeff Gomes, suggesting the council complete a financial plan and complete a rate analysis for future years before proceeding with the contract, suggesting that "you need someone (on staff) to police the contractor."

Teamster Union Representative, Paul Parmley, reviewed past union interactions with the city, requesting that the city due further due diligence on maintaining control and keeping the city employees.

Council Member Chris Carlson had questions regarding potential increase in fees, who does what and what control the city has over future operational and capital improvement costs.

Council Member Derrick Pratt had questions regarding proposed cost savings and the handling of the city biosolids, a major cost for the city. He was concerns on the drying and decreasing the hauling of biosolids might save money, but the results of that may lead to increased odors from the plant.

Kitzmiller, from W&C, explained the financials arrangement of the agreement, fixed fee plus 8%. "if the city does not spend the money, the savings goes to the city". He also stated that problems with odors would be their responsibilities, and not beneficial to a longterm relationship they were trying to build with the city.

At the end, the council elected to take more time to study the contract and implications, and decided to postpone a final decision until Wednesday,

City of Cashmere approves utility contract with Woodard and Curran

By Megan Sokol

Staff writer

The City of Cashmere held a special meeting on March 16, to discuss the proposed Utilities Operations and Maintenance Agreement with Woodard and Curran. After suggesting a few changes be made to the contract, council voted 4-1 to accept the Woodard and Curran contract.

The contract with Woodard and Curran would outsource the city's water/wastewater services to the company for a budget of $852,458 for the first year and $1,278,688 for each vear after.

Mayor Fletcher, along with councilmembers Shela Pistoresi and Jayne Stephenson, stated their comfortability with accepting the contract. Councilmember Derrick Pratt was the only member who voted against the contract, citing his own differing views on the matter.

Councilmember Chris Carlson asked about the language on an item that would "require its residents to maintain any customary insurance for property damage."

Mayor Fletcher asked if the language of that item could be changed, reiterating that any damage to the main line would be the responsibility of the city.

W&C Area Manager Dave Kitzmiller assured the council that they will work on the language of that item to better communicate the rights and responsibilities of the company, the city and residents.

Public Works Director Steve Croci stated that he is comfortable with the transition and is excited for his workload to lighten now that Woodard and Curran can take over the water and wastewater responsibilities. "We spent a lot of time analyzing and figuring out what is the best path forward and I think we got to that yesterday," Croci said. "Getting a management company to come in and help out, be a partner with us, and take care of the citizens of Cashmere."

Croci has been managing the understaffed wastewater department since August of 2021 and has been working with a department of only two employees, when the department requires minimum staffing of five. Both Kitzmiller and Croci report that the company intends to offer employment to current city water/wastewater employees.

"It's been stressful, you want to make sure your citizens are taken care of, and the people who we have working are very conscious. They want what's best for the citizens."

Woodard and Curran intend to recruit enough technicians to fulfill the five-employee minimum for the wastewater treatment center.

The transition should start taking place towards the end of March and should be finished by May 1, 2022.

Getting the most out of taking antibiotics

Maureen was a toddler, we would visit my mother-in-law's house. Having over a dozen grandchildren under the age of 8, she kept a giant toy box in the corner of her living room. It contained building blocks, crayons and coloring books, and empty prescription bottles with child-resistant lids.

As a pharmacist, I was very uncomfortable having my daughter "play" with childresistant tops of medicine vials. Each time we'd visit her, I would make sure I found and removed all the medicine vials from Grandma's toy box before letting Maureen near it.

This irritated my motherin-law because she could not understand my objection to providingsomethingthatwould engage her grandchildren.

I tried explaining that the purpose of putting a childresistant top on medicine vials was to prevent them from being easily opened by a child. By treating pill bottles with child-resistant tops like toys, eventually, her grandchildren would discover how to open any medicine bottle quickly and easily.

What does this have to do with antibiotics, and how to get the best out of them?

Antibiotics by work interfering with how a particular type of bacteria survives and multiplies.

To be effective, an antibiotic attacks a bacteria's weakest points. One common target is the membrane surrounding and protecting each bacteria, called the cell wall. Penicillins similar antibiotics and physically attach themselves to specific proteins essential to building and maintaining the cell wall. Once this happens, the protein molecules can't support the cell wall anymore, causing it to rupture. The bacteria dies.

The more an antibiotic comes in contact with a bacteria, the more likely it is that bacteria will eventually find a workaround and survive to multiply despite you taking the antibiotic. Bacteriamultiplythemselves constantly. Eventually, a slight error occurs, and they mutate into a similar but not identical organism. If a bacterial cell mutates in a way that keeps an antibiotic from successfully attacking them, it can multiply unhindered. This creates a strain of bacteria that the antibiotic can no longer target. We call this developing resistance.

It's like giving my daughter more opportunities to learn how to open a child-resistant top. Given enough time, eventually, she'll figure out how to open it. When attacked by an antibiotic, if bacteria are not killed fast enough, some of them can manage to change themselves just enough to allow them to survive the attack. If they are no longer affected by that antibiotic, it becomes useless against them. This is called "resistance."

Suppose you don't take a large enough dose of antibiotic or don't take it long enough. In that case, the targeted bacteria can find a "workaround" by accidentally mutating into something the antibiotic can't fight against.

The biggest challenge of using antibiotics is to ensure "cure" the infection thev without helping create a new strain of bacteria resistant to its attack.

Many of our older antibiotics used to be more effective. Over time, with repeated courses of treating infections, bacteria have changed just enough to keep them from being targeted.

Resistance to antibiotics is one of the most severe threats to medical care today. What if you got pneumonia which could NOT be cured because there were no antibiotics left that worked?

Viruses work differently than bacteria. Like pirates, they target specific cells and enter them. Once inside, the virus replaces the building blocks of vour own DNA and RNA with its own. It hijacks your own cells to produce more viruses, Smaller than most bacteria, viruses move into and work inside our cells, protected from attack by antibiotics. Their outer covering has a very different cell membrane or cell wall than bacteria. Antibiotics can't attack viruses effectively, so don't work for viral infections.

Here are 4 Keys to Taking Antibiotics Effectively While Discouraging Resistance: 1. Speak Up.

If an antibiotic causes vomiting within an hour of taking it, eat some food before trying it again. If you can't keep an antibiotic down for at least an hour, call your doctor for something else.

2. Get to the Finish Line. You may feel wholly recovered when only partway through taking an antibiotic. Don't quit early. 3. Don't Hoard Leftovers for Future Infections.

Using only one or two doses of an old antibiotic to "catch" an infection before it gets going encourages resistance.

4. Not All Infections Are Racterial

Many infections are actually caused by viruses, NOT bacteria. Taking antibiotics for these infections won't help you. In fact, antibiotics can interfere with our immune systems' response to viral infection.
