Staff changes announced

Wiltse replaces Parker as new Pateros school principal/superintendent

By Mike Maltais
Staff Writer

PATEROS – There is a changing of the guard at the Pateros School District, starting at the top with the superintendent. Interim superintendent Mike Parker posted a statement on the school website late last month announcing that his position with the school will end in the last week of June.

“I have really totally enjoyed this experience,” wrote Parker. “The staff was wonderful to work with and the students were awesome.”

Parker agreed to come on board as the school’s interim superintendent seven months ago as a replacement for outgoing superintendent Greg Goodnight.

The district board of directors recently appointed Scott Wiltse to fill a new dual role as both TK-12 Principal and Superintendent as a means to save money and address declining school enrollment. Wiltse previously served as the district’s Grant and Assessment Coordinator.

“She attended school in Pateros, taught in Pateros, and as a result knows the students and staff well,” wrote Parker. “She will be a tremendous asset to the district.”

School Athletic Director Marcus Stennes will step into Wiltse’s vacancy as the new Grant and Assessment Coordinator but will continue as A.D. with help from Brevin Evenson.

Other board-approved staff changes include hiring long-time Pateros Special Education teacher Sherri

Mortimer as part-time Dean of Students next year. Mortimer will continue to be the district’s SPED teacher/coordinator.

Parker also reported that the new mezzanine addition funded through a special vote of the citizens in 2019 is now complete.

“This bond provided funding for the mezzanine and the covered play area for elementary students and improvements to the music room,” Parker wrote.

The mezzanine will be particularly helpful as a play area during rainy days and the winter months, Parker extended a “huge thanks” to Jason Getzin, Nolan Tonseth, Hector Avila, and Jayden Rose for their work on the new addition.

BREWSTER – It happened 55 years ago. Two young men, both Brewster High School graduates, put their lives on hold to serve their nation in the Vietnam conflict, one as a Marine, the other in the Army infantry. Army Private First Class John Timothy “Tim” Lane and Marine Lance Corporal Marvin Earl Galbraith, forever 20 and 21 respectively, died within six weeks of each other, Galbraith on March 27, 1968, and Lane on May 4, 1968.

Galbraith was killed by a landmine while on patrol in Quang Nam Province with K Company, 3rd Battalion, 7th Marines in the “I Corp” region of South Vietnam. He is buried in Bridgeport Cemetery with five generations of his family.

PFC Lane was deployed in the Mekong Delta with B Company of the 4th Battalion, 9th Infantry “Manchus” of the 25th Infantry Division. He was killed in a night battle near Duc Hoa when he threw himself on an enemy hand grenade to save his fellow soldiers. Lane was posthumously awarded the Distinguished Service Cross (DSC), the nation’s second highest award for valor and is buried at Locust Grove Cemetery.

On Saturday, May 27, a special memorial service honoring both men was hosted by the Brewster American Legion Post 97 at Locust Grove Cemetery. Guests included members and friends of the Lane and Galbraith families and retired veterans and active military.

Lt. Col. (ret.) Robert Bloch

from the Manson American Legion delivered the invocation.

Lt. Col. (ret.) Hank Cramer was among the guest speakers. Cramer, representing Congressman Dan Newhouse, is a Gold Star Fellow and 28-year Army veteran who lost his father in the Vietnam conflict when he was only four years old. Cramer’s father was the first U.S. Army casualty in Vietnam in 1957. Cramer is one of 25 Gold Star members across the nation appointed by Congress to work full-time on behalf of veterans and Gold Star families.

Okanogan PUD explores hydrogen fuel cell project

By Mike Maltais
Staff Writer

OKANOGAN - After receiving a $1.6 million appropriation in the Washington State capital budget, the PUD is exploring the feasibility of building a 100-Kilowatt hydrogen fuel cell in the Okanogan substation. The fuel cell would produce electricity to supplement the PUD's energy supply, particularly during the winter. This could reduce the amount of purchases the PUD must make on the open power market, which can have extremely high prices. The 100-kW size is small, only enough to power about 10 average homes. But if this pilot program is successful, it could be expanded to other uses, such as backup power for critical facilities, or additional production of electricity up to 1-2 Megawatts. Given Douglas County PUD's construction of a hydrogen production plant, Okanogan PUD could have access to the needed hydrogen fuel.

Bridgeport – Thanks in large part to a reconstituted Chamber of Commerce, Bridgeport's biggest annual event, Bridgeport Daze, is once again filling up the first weekend of June with a parade, floats, classic cars, dancing horses, vendors in Fireman Park, three-on-three basketball, Jack & Jill softball, and more. Chamber spokesman Jose Sanchez said the chamber crossed all the t's and dotted all the i's involved in organizational paperwork to conduct the event on a sound footing.

Vendor turnout was good as more than a dozen set up in Fireman Park.

"We have to go to all the venues to make sure everything is done properly," said

Sanchez. "The city, the D.O.T. (Department of Transportation), there are lots of permits and things." Sanchez said that along with an Easter egg hunt staged earlier this year, the chamber is considering some additional events, perhaps even the July 4th holiday. "We have a solid group right now," said Sanchez as he looked about him. "All these people right here, they are all volunteers donating their time." Sanchez said that with the core group he has the chamber will continue to improve with new holiday functions. "It's going to get better and better," Sanchez said.

MEMORIAL

“Here’s what I know,” said Cramer. “Grief fades. Love never dies. Courage shines on forever. That’s what I came to share with you today.”

Lane’s cousin Army Warrant Officer (ret.) Boyd Stewart Chaffee, from Ft. Worth, Texas, spoke about his cousin even though Lane died before Chaffee was born.

“The word that comes to mind is ‘hero’ when I think of Tim,” said Chaffee. “That word is very overused today to describe celebrities, or sports figures or comic book characters. Those aren’t heroes. Tim willingly gave his life to save his buddies. That is the ultimate act of courage, of bravery, selflessness, love, heroism. Tim was a real hero.”

An emotional Jim Martin, retired Army sergeant who served with Lane, compared his actions to those of nameless sailors aboard the battleship Arizona at Pearl Harbor on Dec. 7, 1941, who gave their lives when they closed the bulkheads to try to contain the flooding of the bombed ship. Martin also spoke of his visit to the Vietnam Veterans Memorial in Washington, D.C., that included the names of soldiers from Bridgeport and Brewster among the 58,267 inscribed there. In addition to Lane and Galbraith are Army Private Earl Henderson, 20, (4-16-1970), and Corporal Robert Allen Hayden, 20, (5-24-1968), both of Bridgeport.

“You are not forgotten,” said Martin. “I think it is important that we say their names; so as long as we say their names they are still here.”

The Army unit Lane served with is now assigned to Ft. Carson, Colorado. First Sergeant Wesley Averkamp, representing that unit, addressed the memorial and read Lane’s DSC citation. Following his address Averkamp presented a Gold Star pin to Galbraith’s sisters, Carol Byrd and Verda Olsen, and to Lane’s sisters, Theresa Johnson and Jo Crossland.

Cramer explained that the Gold Star pin tradition. The Gold Star represents courage and sacrifice and the purple background its mounted on represents the Purple Heart.

“The mothers of those who served in World War I used to hang flags in their windows, a red and white banner with a blue star to show they had a son in service, two or three stars if they had more than one,” said Cramer. “When those young soldiers were lost, they repainted those stars gold, and called themselves the Gold Star Mothers of America.”

In 1947 Congress passed the Gold Star Act that created the decoration for the immediate families of those killed in action.

“The motto we like to use is ‘America’s Promise to Never Forget,’” said Cramer. “It’s been 55 years since the spring of 1968. You have not forgotten; we have not forgotten; we will not forget.”

The American Legion Post 97 Auxiliary presented wreaths for the occasion and the honor guard posted the colors.

Cramer recited a poem written by Chief Warrant Officer Mike McDonald in 1970, who was himself killed in action three months later when the helicopter he was flying was shot down.

LTC (ret.) Bloch delivered the benediction.

played military Taps on his trumpet.

Bagpiper Paul McNeil, a former Army and Air Force medic, drove from Olympia to perform Amazing Grace.

Spearheaded by Martin’s initiative, a long and difficult campaign is underway to request that Congress upgrade Lane’s DSC to the Congressional Medal of Honor. Cramer said he has a letter signed from Brewster Mayor Art Smyth and the city council asking Rep. Newhouse to approach the Secretary of the Army to request that upgrade.

6 tips for dealing with side effects of medications

My doctor started me on a new diabetic medicine last week. Since I started taking it, I've had loose stools. My wife thinks I should take some over-the-counter diarrhea medicine for it. Is that safe?

Should you treat a side effect from taking a medicine with another medicine?

The answer depends on how severe or dangerous your new symptom or side effect could be and how important it is to take the medicine that you suspect may be triggering your issue.

The first thing to consider is whether the side effect you are experiencing is mild or severe. Drugs can trigger many unwanted or unpleasant reactions, from merely annoying to life-threatening. Side effects from medication can range from a sour stomach or headache to itching, hives, and swelling of the tongue or throat.

An allergic reaction to a medicine may appear unexpectedly, even if you have taken that drug previously with no problems. For example, an antibiotic like amoxicillin can be taken for years without issues yet trigger a severe allergic reaction with the next dose.

Most side effects caused by medication are not as severe as trouble breathing, mouth or throat swelling. Many side effects of drugs create annoying but temporary discomfort, often resolving within a week of staying on the medicine. Others can be successfully addressed by adjusting the dose of the medicine.

Some medications are more important than others, and you should not stop taking them. If you are having diarrhea, it's important to continue taking an antibiotic until you consult your doctor.

Several medications used to treat diabetes can cause loose stools and diarrhea.

Doctors will start you on a low dose at first to minimize this inconvenient side effect. As your body tolerates the drug, the symptoms will usually go away. Your dose is gradually increased until your blood sugar is controlled or you are taking the maximum recommended amount.

Loose stools should improve within a week, and you can safely use a non-prescription anti-diarrhea medicine until then.

If you experience side effects after starting a new medicine or after a dose adjustment, always let your doctor know. The amount of the drug could be adjusted to give your body more time to get used to it.

Sometimes, side effects are not just annoying or uncomfortable but essential warning signs of something more serious. One example is having diarrhea when taking an antibiotic, especially if the diarrhea is severe or persists after finishing the course.

Another consideration when having side effects from your medicine is how important it is to stay on that medication. Heart medicines and antibiotics should never be stopped abruptly unless you are experiencing a severe reaction or are advised to stop by your doctor.

Here are 6 Tips on Dealing with Side Effects of Medicines:

1. Document when you take your first dose.

Keep track of when you started a new medicine or higher dose. The best way to tell if a symptom could be caused by your medication is to be able to verify it showing up AFTER you started taking it.

2. Call 911 for any severe allergic reaction.

Shortness of breath, swelling or itching of your mouth, tongue, or throat are signs of a severe and life-threatening reaction. Don't call your doctor; call 911.

3. Inform your doctor.

If you experience a rash, itching, or hives, DON'T take another dose of the new medicine. Instead, contact your doctor. Most primary care clinics have an "after-hours" answering service that takes phone calls coming in after they are closed for the day. They take down your information, then forward it to an on-call provider.

4. Know when to re-dose.

Nausea is the most common side effect of many medicines, especially antibiotics. If you vomit less than 30 minutes after taking a medication, your body may not have had enough time to absorb the drug. Give your stomach about an hour to settle down, then try again AFTER eating something bland or drinking something soothing. If you vomit within 30 minutes again, contact your doctor. An antibiotic can't help you if you can't keep it down.

5. Don't mix liquid antacids with antibiotics.

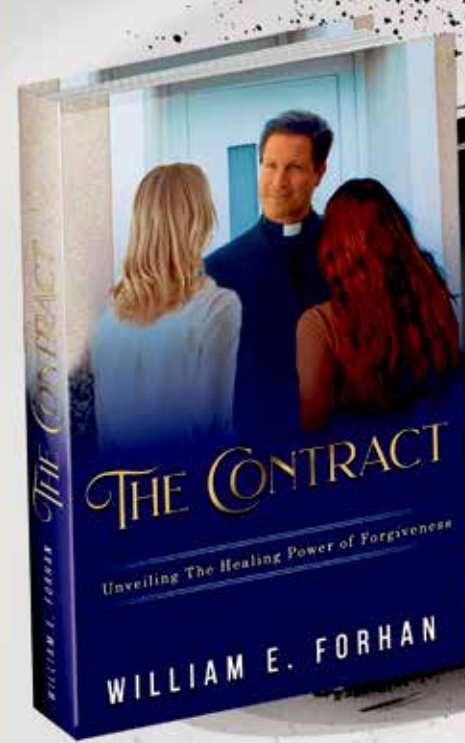

Liquid antacids like Maalox and Mylanta and tablets like Tums contain minerals that bind to some antibiotics, preventing you from absorbing the total dose.

6. Apply medicated patches to other sites.

If a medicine patch irritates your skin, apply it to your buttocks. To reduce skin irritation, you can also pre-treat an application site with non-prescription hydrocortisone 1% cream or Voltaren® gel.

Nobel Prize winning author Gabriel García Márquez was quoted as saying, "All human beings have three lives, public, private and secret."

In our modern world of the Internet search engines and DNA testing, keeping our private and secret lives separate is increasingly difficult. Sometimes they can come crashing in on our public lives when we least expect it.
