

Darnell making Cashmere Girls Basketball legendary

By MATTHEW OCKINGA

By his own admission, Brent Darnell is not very well-rounded. The Cashmere High School Girls Basketball head coach, Darnell finds himself constantly immersed in the sport, the basketball's dribble providing a steady soundtrack for his thoughts.

"I don't have a lot of hobbies," Darnell said. "I don't hunt. I don't fish. I don't ski. I really don't do a lot besides work in my yard and coach basketball."

That single-minded passion has helped make Cashmere into a basketball powerhouse. Since Darnell took the program's reins in 2013, the lady Bulldogs' accomplishments are striking: 60 straight Caribou Trail League wins, eight consecutive league titles, an 87-1 league record and an overall tally of 170-21.

"I never envisioned eight years down the road we would be on the run that we've been on," he said. "Winning is really hard. If it was easy, then everybody would be undefeated every year."

Homelessness and Trash in Cashmere

By: ERIN MULLINS

Homelessness and trash are proving to be a problem in the city of Cashmere. Wesley is a local Cashmere resident who is homeless. On-line many Cashmere residents have complained about their negative interactions with Wesley. However, being homeless is not against the law, said Jim Fletcher, Mayor of Cashmere.

"You know he's not in a situation where he's violating a law. It's not against the law to be homeless. It's not against the law to have behavioral health issues," said Fletcher.

Fletcher said that Wesley has been offered mental health assistance by various people but has refused assistance every time people tried to help him. When Wesley acts out, he is arrested, and he doesn't get the mental health help that he needs in jail.

Why Wesley refuses help is something that Fletcher does not understand because he doesn't have enough of a background in behavioral health. He said that there are no policies about homelessness in the city of Cashmere.

In talking with Wesley, Fletcher said that Wesley said that there are times when Wesley appears quite lucid in terms of what he wants but other times he acts out and Fletcher doesn't understand why.

"I've heard of stories of some of the things he's done because somebody gave him a beverage that he didn't like so he threw it back at them," Fletcher said.

It's frustrating to see somebody who really needs help not be able to get the help they need, said Fletcher. He sees the comments of people who are concerned because Wesley is unpredictable.

However, someone cannot be committed to a mental health facility without a court order, said Fletcher. This takes many legal steps and is not something that the city is able to do. Even if Wesley wanted to get help, Fletcher isn't sure where he would be sent.

Wesley is not the only homeless resident of Cashmere. Fletcher says some residents live in cars and some live in a friend's house. He doesn't know the specific numbers of those who are homeless in Cashmere.

Cashmere City Council Meeting

Cashmere Correspondent

At the Cashmere City Council's July 12 meeting, Mayor Jim Fletcher announced that the city had requested proposals for management plans for the Riverside Center. The Center is presently closed, as a result no rental revenues coming in to cover utility and other basic expenses. Fletcher said that only a single proposal had been submitted, which was from Gather Leavenworth, LLC (GL). In their submission, GL proposed to provide a marketing and event service, rather than outright leasing the facility. GL is an event organizer and said they would promote and manage events at the Riverside Center, but instead of paying a set monthly rental rate, GL said they would pay the city 50% of any building rental fees that are collected. The city would be responsible for all building utilities and custodial services. According to city staff, the advantages and disadvantages of the GL proposal include:

Advantages

- Event management, a staff person onsite at all events
- Increased marketing of the center, online event scheduling
- Documentation of local businesses providing services related to the event
- Customer options for additional event services
- Service agreement is not a fixed period of years

Disadvantages

- Variable monthly revenue, difficult to predict
- Increased staff time
- Providing custodial services after events
- Increased operating expenses for utilities and wifi

Responding to questions from the Council about the amount of revenue the city would receive, city attorney, Chuck Zimmerman, said that this agreement would not be a lease and that it is not possible to know the amount of revenue that would be generated. He added that the facility was not specifically built to make money. The owner of Gather Leavenworth, Ashley Coffin, said that they primarily use local vendors for their events. Council member, Jayne Stephenson, asked how full GL's calendar is booked. Coffin replied that it is very full, but that events are often booked a year or two in advance, as a result the first year or two could be tricky.

Following the discussion, Fletcher recommended that the city negotiate a specific service agreement with Gather Leavenworth, that could then be voted on by the Council.

The Council unanimously voted to reject a 5.86% rate increase that was requested by Waste Management (WM). The vote followed Fletcher's explanation that the contract with WM states that any increase over 4% must be approved by the city.

Zimmerman explained to the council that a recent situation regarding a city right of way that is being used as a driveway may require the Council to adopt a new ordinance. He said that a roadway may be drawn on a map but an actual road does not exist and that no road is currently needed at that location. In such a situation the city has several options- 1) build the road, 2) vacate the right of way 3) to allow residents to use the right of way through a special use permit. In the recent situation, he advised that the city probably does not want to vacate the right of way so he recommended that by the next council meeting a new ordinance be developed, which could include permit and annual fees.

Public comments were given to the Council by individuals who are concerned that the pool has not re-opened. Fletcher explained that the city has still not been able to find lifeguards to hire. Normally he said that there would be returning guards, but that is not the case this year. In response to a question from the public, he said that the positions have been advertised through the city website and that they have also reached out to the school district and swim teams. Council member, Dave Erickson, said that the lifeguard shortage is a nationwide problem. He said that Wenatchee has been able to open their pool and that they have been able to hire 26 lifeguards, according to Erickson that is a very low number of guards. He said that the only pool in the region which is not short of staff is Moses Lake.

Council member Chris Carlson expressed his support for the Farmers' Market. He said that it is difficult to quantify the benefits that result from the market but that he feels that it provides a good service and helps develop a sense of community. Carlson suggested the possibility of giving them a break on the permit fee. Fletcher said that to be fair the city must charge the same rates for all vendors.

With little discussion the Council unanimously voted to adopt an interagency data sharing agreement with the Washington State Auditor's Office. The agreement, required by a bill passed by this year's state legislature, will formalize all the steps taken to protect data, but will not require changes to the city's existing practices.

Maricopa County Auditors Seek Ballot Envelope Images, Splunk Logs After Discovering Discrepancies

ZACHARY STIEBER

Teams conducting a forensic audit in Arizona's largest county said on July 15 that they want more items to complete their review, which has turned up several major discrepancies.

The auditors, led by Florida-based Cyber Ninjas, want ballot envelope images, router images, splunk logs, hard drives that contain information about the 2020 election in Maricopa County, and details on the county's policies and procedures as they try to complete a review that started nearly three months ago.

That information could help clear up issues that have been identified.

Doug Logan, CEO of Cyber Ninjas, told senators at the Arizona state Capitol during a hearing that auditors could find no record of the county sending more than 74,000 mail-in ballots. He also said auditors found approximately 18,000 people voted but were removed from voter rolls "soon after the election, 11,326 people who were not on the voter rolls on Nov. 7, 2020, but appeared on the rolls on Dec. 4, 2020, and 3,981 people who voted after registering after Oct. 15, 2020."

Ben Cotton, CEO of CyFIR, a subcontractor working on the audit, said the analysis of the election management system and network uncovered "severe cybersecurity problems," including that antivirus programs weren't up to date.

The hearing came after Arizona Senate President Karen Fann, whose Republican caucus authorized the audit late last year, said the auditors' ballot count produced a different number from the county's count.

Logan said the discrepancies with mail-in ballot records should trigger a canvassing proposal that was put on hold under pressure from the Department of Justice.

"Based on the data we're seeing, I highly recommend canvassing, because it is the one way to know for sure whether some of the data we're seeing, if it's real problems or whether it's clerical errors of some sort," he said.

The July 15 testimony, given in front of Fann and Sen. Warren Peterson, chairman of the state Senate's Judiciary Committee, immediately triggered a push to conduct a new election in the state, where President Joe Biden beat former President Donald Trump by about 10,500 votes.

"I call for the Biden electors to be recalled to Arizona & a new election must be conducted. Arizona's electors must not be awarded fraudulently & we need to get this right," Arizona Sen. Wendy Rogers, a Republican who has been keeping close tabs on the audit, said on Twitter.

Maricopa County Board of Supervisors Chairman Jack Sellers, a Republican, said in a statement after the hearing that the auditors were incompetent.

"At today's briefing, the Senate's uncertified contractors asked a lot of open-ended questions, portraying as suspicious what is actually normal and well known to people who work in elections. In some cases, they dropped bombshell numbers that are simply not accurate. What we heard today represents an alternate reality that has veered out of control since the November General Election. Senate leadership should be ashamed they broadcast the half-baked theories of the 'Deep Rig' crowd to the world today," he said. "To senate leaders I say, stop accusing us of not cooperating when we have given you everything qualified auditors would need to do this job. Finish your audit, release the report, and be prepared to defend it in court."

A county spokesperson told The Epoch Times via email it was unclear which data sets the auditors were referring to for some of their allegations. The approximately 74,000 ballots probably refers to voters who went in person to vote centers before Election Day, he said.

"Even though they are voting in person, their ballots are treated the same as those mailed in - sealed in an envelope and signed by the voter," the spokesman said.

Fann told reporters after the hearing that she would be talking to attorneys later Thursday or on Friday to figure out the best way to obtain the items auditors want.

"Do we go back to court or do they specifically comply with the original subpoena? Maybe some of this can be done before the request and we can get some of that information," she said. "It would be great if Maricopa County would help us with this request and we can move forward."

But the county spokesman indicated more subpoenas would be required to get the items, even the routers.

"We will have a response about other demands if and when Senate leadership produces more subpoenas," he said.

Routers or router images were included in subpoenas the Arizona Senate sent last year that were confirmed legally valid by a judge after the county took the matter to court. The county is still refusing to provide the auditors access to the subpoenaed materials.

The county agreed to comply with the subpoenas after the late February ruling, but called for the audit to end less than a month after it had begun. County officials have noted that a hand recount and a risk-limiting audit performed at their best uncovered no discrepancies. They voted this week to replace the machines the auditors examined, agreeing with Democrat Arizona Secretary of State Katie Hobbs that they can't ensure that the machines will perform properly in future elections.

Fann noted that she wanted the audit done at county facilities, but was forced to have the audit teams conduct it offsite when the county declined her request. She also said senators have never implied or inferred that the discrepancies were caused by "intentional misdoings."

"It is unfortunate that the county has been recalcitrant," Peterson said at the hearing. "That doesn't breed trust, it slows things down, it makes things difficult."

He noted that if auditors don't receive the requested items, they'll produce "an incomplete report."

Allan Stein contributed to this report.

59 of 96 Phones Assigned to Robert Mueller Probe Missing: GOP Senators

JACK PHILLIPS

Sens. Chuck Grassley (R-Iowa) and Ron Johnson (R-Wis.) have sent a letter to the Department of Justice (DOJ) requesting more information about missing cell-phones that were used by then-special counsel Robert Mueller during his investigation into former President Donald Trump's 2016 campaign.

In a statement, the senators said they were compelled to send the letter after the DOJ failed to review more than 20 phones for record preservation after Grassley in September 2020 asked about a possible violation of federal record-keeping laws, following a Freedom of Information Act revelation showing records on devices used by Mueller's team had been deleted.

The DOJ's Office of the Inspector General in September 2020, the senators wrote, told them that several phones belonging to "multiple people on then-Special Counsel Robert Mueller's investigative team were 'wiped for various reasons during [the Russia investigation]." Meanwhile, on May 11, the inspector general said 59 of 96 phones assigned to Mueller's team couldn't be located, according to the senators.

Relating to the phones, the two senators are seeking the names of the special counsel's office team members whose cellphones weren't reviewed by officials, if there are any actions being taken to recover the missing phones, and whether the DOJ reviewed the devices to see if "they were used to leak sensitive or classified information," among other requests.

The Mueller probe in 2018 ultimately concluded that Trump's campaign didn't colude with the Russian government, although Democrats in Congress have continued to accuse Trump of having a cozy relationship with Russian President Vladimir Putin. For the past several years, Grassley and Johnson have sent a number of requests to the DOJ about the investigation, as well as asking the agency about records relating to President Joe Biden's son Hunter Biden.

Around the same time that House Democrats were leading an impeachment inquiry into Trump's efforts in Ukraine in late 2019, the DOJ's inspector general released a report finding that the FBI abused the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act (FISA) court processes in obtaining—and renewing—warrants to surveil former Trump campaign aide Carter Page. In all, the inspector general found at least 17 "significant errors or omissions" in the FISA surveillance of Page.

"That so many basic and fundamental errors were made by three separate, hand-picked teams on one of the most sensitive FBI investigations that were briefed to the highest levels within the FBI, and that FBI officials expected would eventually be subjected to close scrutiny," the report stated, "raised significant questions regarding the FBI chain of command's management and supervision of the FISA process."

DOJ officials didn't immediately respond to a request by The Epoch Times for comment.

White House: Biden's $4.5 Trillion Infrastructure Bills Won't Push Inflation Higher

ZACHARY STIEBER

President Joe Biden's $4.5 trillion infrastructure proposals will not lead to higher inflation if they are passed by Congress, White House press secretary Jen Psaki claimed on July 15.

"Our experts believe—and the data shows and the Federal Reserve chair, who operates independently, conveyed, yesterday—that most of the price increases we are seeing are expected to be temporary due to the consequences of restarting an economy shut down during the pandemic. And we're seeing that in certain industries more than others as prices go back to where they were pre-pandemic," she said.

The Biden administration understands the threat that inflation poses and will be vigilant in responding to the threat, Psaki continued.

"As it relates to legislation: We're continuing to advocate for the way to keep prices in our economy down is to increase the supply of goods that consumers want to buy and keep the costs of producing and getting them to market lower. That's exactly what the president's bipartisan infrastructure framework and Inflation has been rising quickly in recent months. It was up 5.4 percent over 12 months as of June.

the 'Build Back Better' plans will do," she said.

The infrastructure package will increase the availability of child care, help more people resume or start working, increase output, and help keep prices down, Psaki asserted. Senate Democrats this week unveiled a $3.5 trillion package on "human infrastructure" that contains many of the provisions in Biden's proposal. Senate Democrats plan to try to ram the package through the body on party lines using a budgetary tool even as they negotiate with Senate Republicans on a $1 trillion bill.

Inflation has been rising quickly in recent months. It was up 5.4 percent over 12 months as of June. Consumer prices are increasing at the fastest pace in decades, and critics pin the blame on the Biden administration's high spending.

24-Year-Old Chicago Police Officer Dies in Apparent Suicide

CHICAGO POLICE DEPARTMENT/SCREENSHOT VIA THE EPOCH TIMES

CARA DING

CHICAGO—A Chicago police officer was found dead due to an apparent suicide on the morning of July 14, according to the Chicago Police Department (CPD).

The officer, 24-year-old Christian Furczon, was found dead at around 7 a.m. near Nathan Hale Elementary School in the Clearing neighborhood on the Southwest Side of Chicago.

According to city records, Furczon had been a police officer with the CPD since October 2018.

Autopsy results released on July 15 confirmed the cause of death as suicide. Furczon was the third CPD officer to take his own life this year.

“The department experienced the heartbreaking loss of one of our police officers to an apparent suicide. ... Being a police officer is not an easy job and our officers carry the weight of the world on their shoulders,” Chicago Police Superintendent David Brown said in a statement sent to The Epoch Times.

Dr. Carrie Steiner, a police psychologist and certified trauma professional, knows well the weight on officers’ shoulders. Her Chicago suburban office is visited by around 300 police officers every month, one out of five being CPD officers who seek her help to cope with mental health concerns.

A lot of that weight has to do with the critical incidents they see at work daily, Steiner said. Critical incidents are those situations that most people wouldn’t encounter in their daily lives, such as seeing a tortured baby or murder victim, or being shot at by violent people at work. The weight of these experiences can easily lead to mental health problems such as depression, anxiety, post-traumatic stress disorder, and alcohol addiction.

An average person sees one to five critical incidents in their lifetime, Steiner said. An average police officer at a small to medium police agency sees around 188 critical incidents during their 20 years at work. But for a large metro police department such as CPD, the numbers are a lot higher.

“In my first year at the Chicago Police Department, I think I had 200 critical incidents,” Steiner told The Epoch Times. She served as a police officer at CPD for 13 years before becoming a police psychologist.

Some traumas will be harder to overcome than others. Steiner had developed trauma while on duty after seeing a dead Hispanic 5-year-old in a car crash.

“He was the same age as my nephew. Anytime there was an accident, I always thought back to him. Anytime I saw a Hispanic family, I thought back to him.” Steiner said.

It took her nearly 2 1/2 years of therapy to overcome the trauma.

Another burden on officers’ shoulders is the backbreaking working hours; for almost a year now, they have been constantly asked to work 12-hour shifts with no days off, Steiner said.

“If you are just working a regular job, you can go home and probably fall asleep pretty quickly. But if you just got off a shift [where] you saw a dead baby, it’s going to be hard to fall asleep,” she said.

Many officers suffer from severe sleep deprivation, making it much harder for them to decompress and recuperate, she said. Most officers she speaks with only sleep four to five hours each night.

According to lawyer Gershon Kulek, who helps many Chicago police officers with their divorce proceedings, another source of police stress is the fear of being punished for doing their jobs under the current political and societal environment.

“When an offender fights with police, the police have to use more force to put that person into control. When something goes wrong in that process, the officers could be charged with a crime,” Kulek told The Epoch Times.

“So there is this extra stress on all officers at work, ‘What if something happens? Am I going to get charged with a crime?’ Many are afraid to do their jobs.”

When all this mental stress builds up within officers, if they don’t have a way to find release on their own, they may wind up releasing it on loved ones at home, Kulek said. When that happens, it often leads to marital problems or even divorce—another source of mental stress.

Two other Chicago police officers committed suicide earlier this year.

On March 1, Officer James Daly, 47, fatally shot himself in a locker room inside his district police station on the North Side of the city.

On March 5, Officer Jeffery Troglia, 38, fatally shot himself at his home in the Mount Greenwood neighborhood on the Southwest Side of the city.

Following the officers’ deaths, CPD hired a senior adviser on wellness, National Alliance on Mental Illness Chicago CEO Alexa James, to create a comprehensive officer wellness plan.

Arizona Rally Demands Release of Jan. 6 ‘Political Prisoners’

ALLAN STEIN

Hoisting flags and political signs, more than 250 Arizona conservatives rallied in Scottsdale on July 14 to demand the release of pro-Trump protesters being held in federal prisons since Jan. 6.

“This nation will not be [made] safe by cowards,” said keynote speaker Matt Braynard of Look Ahead America, co-sponsor of the rally with local branch Look Ahead Arizona, at Sue Wood’s Scottsdale Studios.

Both groups have called upon conservatives to organize at the community level to free more than 500 pro-Trump protesters in federal custody.

Braynard, a former Trump data analyst, is leading the charge with Look Ahead America to release what he called “political prisoners.”

He said the July 14 rally was a run-up to a large political protest to be held on July 17 at a federal prison in Washington.

While the FBI has arrested 535 protesters, Braynard said, “in almost all cases, these were non-violent” people.

“They’re losing their jobs because their employers don’t want to employ them,” Braynard said, noting that 100 to 200 people have been held without bail since they were arrested. “They’re not forgotten.”

He also spoke of the shooting death of Ashley Babbitt by a still unidentified White House security member inside the Capitol building on Jan. 6.

[The prisoners] need to be treated fairly and with due process. So we have come here to demand equal justice under the law.

Rep. Paul Gosar

“I can’t help but wonder how a 90-pound woman who clearly was not armed—why the response was a bullet,” Braynard said. “You’re in the cross-hairs, too. The insurrection narrative is the root of a very poisonous tree—the ‘Big Lie’ of insurrection.”

The rally was framed around Arizona’s coyote-skin clad “Q-Anon Shaman,” Jacob Chansley, who turned himself in to authorities three days after the Washington protest.

Jeff Blase of Phoenix, wielding a “Free Jake!” sign, said he attended the rally to support Chansley and other political detainees.

“If you know anything about Jake, he’s a non-violent person,” said Blase, who participated in other protests with Chansley. “Jake is a very smart individual as well.”

To prove his point, Blase said Chansley was videotaped inside the Senate Chambers leading the protesters in prayer.

“The reason I’m here is because of people like Jake who are nonviolent and who are being held in the [federal] gulag,” Blase said.

Chansley’s St. Louis-based defense attorney, Albert Watkins, described the conditions his client is facing in jail as “gulag-like treatment.”

“Mr. Chansley has been in solitary confinement since he voluntarily and peacefully surrendered himself to federal authorities on Jan. 9,” Watkins told The Epoch Times in an email. “His mental health and emotional well-being are significantly challenged. His ability to focus on his own defense has been encumbered.”

“He was not violent or disorderly or destructive in any manner. He was not armed. He did not threaten. There is no end in sight. His only reliable unmonitored contact with the outside world is his attorney—me. He is alone.”

Martha Chansley, Jake’s mother, told those attending the July 14 gathering that her son called her just minutes before the rally.

“He is very touched and he

Matt Braynard, the executive director of Look Ahead America, during an interview with The Epoch Times’ Joshua Philipp.

really appreciates you and your love and your support and your prayers, because it’s really tough. It’s a tough time,” she said.

“It takes a lot of courage to do what you know is right. Let’s continue to keep this faith because ultimately, in the end, God wins.”

Congressman Paul Gosar (R-Ariz.) told those attending the rally that he was protesting for the fair treatment of those arrested in connection with the Capitol breach.

“There are reports that some of the prisoners have been tortured or held in solitary confinement 24 hours a day,” he said.

“What are they trying to hide? Americans deserve the truth. [The prisoners] need to be treated fairly and with due process. So we have come here to demand equal justice under the law.”

Protesters walk around in the Rotunda after entering the U.S. Capitol in Washington on Jan. 6, 2021.

Arizona state Rep. Mark Finchem, a Republican, asked the crowd rhetorically, “Have you seen my country lately?”

“This is what Bolsheviks do. They destroy people. They steal from people. They lie and they cheat, and then they kill you. [Jan. 6] was a setup. That’s what Bolsheviks do. One day, I pray to God that the individuals who have foisted this upon us will be held accountable for the reason they have committed.”

daughter Jalynn's AAU squad. During that year, Chris Cloakley, then-coach of the Bulldogs, asked Darnell to volunteer with the team. Through spending time around Cashmere, he and his wife Corrie fell in love with the community and moved there. His hiatus from high school coaching made Darnell a little stir crazy, so when Cloakley resigned, the choice seemed obvious.

"When I wasn't coaching, I was just fussing around the house and moving furniture from one side to the other and back again, so my wife kind of forced me back into coaching," he said.

Once at Cashmere, Darnell wasted no time in building on Cloakley's culture. He established a coaching foundation of avoiding complacency and staying hungry. Rather than setting team goals based on wins, he focuses on work ethic and high standards.

Lauren Johnson, a former First-Team All-State player, was a senior when Darnell came to Cashmere. Her sister Abbie played for Darnell for four seasons and her youngest sister Riley will be a senior on this year's team. Johnson still talks with Darnell and appreciates his care for his players on and off the court.

"Even though he can be this intense coach, have this fire and can seem like he might be the bad guy, outside of the gym, he's the first person that's going to reach out to you," Johnson said. "I think that can be hard for a male coaching a female team."

Standing behind every successful coach is usually a supportive assistant and for Darnell, that man is Stan Evenhus, who has assisted Darnell for 13 seasons between Eastmont and Cashmere. The yang to Darnell's yin, Evenhus plays a grandfatherly role to balance out Darnell's intensity.

"He's probably more like a son to me than maybe I am an assistant coach to him," Evenhus said. "I'm the good cop, he's the bad cop sometimes. I'm the calming force, he's the hard charger."

Evenhus is now the gum collection he brings to games and practices. On occasion he'll even offer bacon maple bars to the players for some competitive fuel.

"I don't know if I would continue coaching if I didn't have that guy," Darnell said.

"He is as much a part of our program as anybody."

Mamba Memories

When a Hall-of-Famer and five-time NBA champion walks into a high school gym, seats are hard to find. That's what happened on Jan. 11, 2020 when former Los Angeles Laker Kobe Bryant visited with his daughter Gianna to watch the Bulldogs. Hailey Van Lith, then a senior for Cashmere, had worked out with the superstar and his daughter in L.A. Bryant had told Van Lith he would watch her play. The fulfillment of that promise made for an unforgettable night.

"He was the most kind, soft spoken, genuine, professional I've ever seen," Darnell said, adding that Bryant visited their locker room. "He addressed our team and said how much he loved watching us play."

That surreal experience took on a tragic turn 15 days later when Kobe and Gianna, along with seven others, died in a helicopter crash in Calabasas, CA. Darnell addressed the tragedy with his players and feels Bryant's visit still inspires his teams today.

"We did talk about how life's not fair," he recalled. "When one of your teammates hurts, you hurt, and Hailey was hurting."

Close Calls

During Darnell's tenure, the Bulldogs have come tantalizingly close to tasting basketball nirvana. In the 2016-2017 state tournament, Cashmere lost 45-44 to Mt. Baker. The following year the Bulldogs fell 50-48 to Lynden Christian and in the 2019-2020 campaign LC edged Cashmere 58-55. Having lost three state title games by a total of six points, Darnell has come oh-so-close, but has no regrets.

"I don't know what it's like in the winning locker room after you win the state championship, but I can tell you what ours is after the game. We're crying. We're hugging each other," he said. "Those moments are special too. Not everybody gets to do that."

And not everybody gets to have Darnell's success, which seems poised to continue. Though the team lost four seniors, including Jalynn, reinforcements are on the way. Evenhus thinks this year's team is 10-12 players deep and will make another impressive run, which he attributes to the head coach who, even after the close calls, maintains that competitive fire.

"His intensity level is something you don't see very much, but the girls respond to it in a positive way always," Evenhus said. "There is none better at the high school level than Brent Darnell."

Perhaps that is due to Darnell's extreme enthusiasm for basketball, coaching and every little dribble along the way.

"I love everything about it. I love the grind. I love waking up at 2 a.m. with vomit in my mouth thinking about losing a state championship game two years ago," he said. "I'm a little OCD on it, to say the least."

Homelessness & Trash

agencies to solve homelessness, Fletcher said. This is so that cities can pool resources. The tax base of Cashmere doesn't have enough money to handle the problem alone. Shelters for the homeless are located in the Wenatchee and East Wenatchee area.

County commissioners across the region are partnering with regional providers to come up with a better regional approach to homelessness and mental health services, Fletcher said. Many homeless people with behavioral health issues end up in jail. Developing a better program will take time and money.

Cashmere resident Mike Curtis, owner of Riverbooty Photography, is concerned about the amount of trash that has built up around the riverbanks and is trying to organize a city wide clean-up of the riverbanks.

He said that the trash isn't just Wesley's. Curtis takes photos for rafting companies and hikes out to areas by the river and witnesses a lot of trash during his hikes at Grannie's rapid and Snowblind rapids.

The Snowblind rapid is directly across the street from Taquiera El Chavo, Curtis said. He finds empty half racks that people have consumed in piles, garbage from meals and phone boxes. While he is waiting for rafters to photograph, Curtis picks up some of the trash that he finds.

Every year, Curtis and others take garbage bags to Snowblind to pick up trash before the water comes back up. Grannie's is harder to hike into and it is more difficult to take out trash from there, Curtis said, especially when he gets busy. That rapid is close to the bridge that Wesley sleeps under.

Curtis said that he has a goal of creating a river cleanup on August 1st. He has contacted the City Administrator Assistant and is in the process of contacting the Director of Operations about doing a cleanup on the Wenatchee River.

Curtis said that he is willing to rent a small garbage can for the cleanup and coordinate with river guides who aren't working to get their assistance for the cleanup. There used to be a group that did an annual cleanup of the Wenatchee River and Curtis is trying to revive that.

Creating clean waterways is what motivates Curtis to start this cleanup effort. But he is also aware of the issues that Wesley has caused in the community. He has heard of Wesley becoming more aggressive towards the residents of Cashmere.

Residents of Cashmere were helping Wesley with housing and personal clean up but they are not doing that anymore because of his behavior, Curtis said. Wesley yells at people and has spit on a barista.

It takes a community to keep Cashmere clean and safe. Trash around the river isn't just caused by one person and one person cannot be the solution to homelessness. Clean up of trash and finding housing for those who are in need will take the coordination of multiple agencies to find a solution.

The Contract
Unveiling the healing power of forgiveness

A novel by local writer William E. Forhan.

Nobel Prize winning author Gabriel Garcia Márquez was quoted as saying, "All human beings have three lives, public, private and secret."

In our modern world of the Internet search engines and DNA testing, keeping our private and secret lives separate is increasingly difficult. Sometimes they can come crashing in on our public lives when we least expect it.

Father Robert McCarthy is a middle-aged priest who is suddenly and unexpectedly confronted with his secret past. How he deals with the revelation of that past with his family, his congregation and the impacts of that secret life is inspirational. How McCarthy discloses the news of his college indiscretion requires him to take everyone involved on a journey of confession. That journey forces him to deal with issues of homosexuality, judgmentalism, divorce and pride.

His pastoring skills and the depth of support from his wife help him bring forgiveness and restoration to many broken relationships.

The bonds of three families are ultimately restored through celebrations of life experiences including fishing, holiday gatherings, the discovery of unknown family connections and a wedding.

The Washington Outdoors Report

North To Alaska!

By JOHN KRUSE

The Washington Outdoors Report heads north to Alaska this week to report on the great adventure my daughter Faith and I enjoyed at Sportsman's Cove Lodge on Prince of Wales Island. The journey started at SeaTac airport where a quick two-hour flight brought us to Ketchikan. After lunch in town, we boarded a de Havilland Otter floatplane and enjoyed a 20-minute flight over the Inside Passage to the lodge. The facility is located in a remote cove and features comfortable accommodations, a large dining room, a small pub, laundry facilities and the docks where the fishing boats are docked and where the fish are processed, vacuum packed and frozen for your journey home.

After a dinner of soy-glazed salmon we headed to the docks where our Captain made sure we had the correct sized rain gear and gave us an orientation to the 37-foot Delta fishing boat our group of six would be fishing out of with him and his deckhand for the next several days. The boat has a comfortable cabin, a marine head, and the ability to completely walk around (and fish around) the boat.

Mornings at the lodge always start off by making your lunch from a variety of sandwich fixings before eating a hot breakfast that changes daily. By 6:30 a.m. you are on your boat and the fleet of five charter boats heads out for the day.

Faith and I were on board the Mystic Lady, captained by Hunt Edwards, a Florida charter boat captain who had been working at Sportsman's Cove for ten seasons. Our deckhand, Jim, was a friendly young man from Kentucky and had the strongest work ethic I have ever seen.

Our group of six anglers consisted of Gary Parks and Ward Erickson, two friends from Port Angeles who decided to enjoy an Alaskan fishing adventure together. Also, on board with Faith and I was Mike Kirchner who like me, was bringing his 18-year-old (Pearce) from Colorado to Alaska for a memorable family fishing trip.

The fishing was very, very good. Our mornings were spent fishing off the bottom for halibut and true cod and once we had our limit (of one quality halibut per angler) we would head towards an area where the salmon were schooling in good numbers.

Most of the salmon were pink salmon but there were also coho (silvers), bright chum salmon and a few Chinook (kings) as well. Our method of fishing was an old school one called mooching. We each had a cut plug herring with three to four feet of leader tied to a six-ounce weight and would drop it down and reel it back up rapidly in a controlled pattern. Many times, the salmon would follow the bait all the way to the boat at which point you dropped your bait back down 30 feet or so, reeled up again, and quite often the salmon would then take it. With every day a 40+ salmon catching day on the boat, we had lots of excitement on the water.

Around 3 p.m. the fleet comes back to the docks where photos are taken of the day's catch and appetizers await. Dinner is then served at 6 p.m., followed by an awards ceremony where the anglers catching the big fish of the day from a variety of different species gets a coffee cup with their name and the weight and species of the fish on it to memorialize the occasion.

You'll want to bring your camera and binoculars too because wildlife is abundant. During our visit we saw bald eagles, humpback whales, Orca whales, sea lions and black bears.

The whole experience was fun and wonderful. Part of the reason for this, in addition to the great fishing and food, is the fantastic customer service. This is established through careful hiring practices and also through the fact that there are 32 staff members on hand to take care of the 30 anglers who occupy the lodge for any given 3 to 4-day stay during the summer.

On the final day you actually get to fish again for most of the day before taking a floatplane back to Ketchikan. Most stay one more night in town, which gives you the opportunity to explore Alaska's First City, a very popular destination for cruise ships.

The return rate to Sportsman's Cove Lodge is very high and with the pent-up demand of this season they are sold out for this year. Fortunately, an additional four-day trip has just been added at the very end of the season, arriving on September 8 and departing on the 13th. This is typically the time of year when the biggest coho salmon of the year are landed. If you want to book this trip (or book a trip for the 2022 season) you can do so by going to www.alaskasbestlodge.com or by calling 1-800-962-7889.

Here Come the Ticks

Last week I removed another tick from Bonnie, our 6-month-old Scottie. Bonnie loves to run through the grass and burrow into bushes, where ticks like to lurk. In the Pacific Northwest, 3 species of ticks can transmit disease. A bite from a Brown Dog Tick or Rocky Mountain Wood Tick can transmit Rocky Mountain spotted fever. The Western Blacklegged Tick carries Lyme disease.

According to Rebecca Eisen, a research biologist at the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (the CDC), "Tick-borne diseases are on the rise." Powassan disease is an example of a severe, potentially fatal nerve infection caused by a virus carried in tick saliva.

Living in the foothills of the Cascade Mountains for the past 30 years, I have considered using nearly every method of tick removal. I can tell you from experience, don't ever apply Vaseline® to a tick! It makes those guys so slippery you can't hold on to them; fingers and tweezers just slide off.

And forget the advice to dab the tick with nail polish. The tick's too slick to grip with tweezers or fingers, and then you'll need nail polish remover to remove the residue.

Several years ago, my friend Denise and I read on the internet about using liquid dish detergent to remove a tick. "Well, it sounds like it might be useful someday, like knowing 48 ways to reuse fabric softener dryer sheets...maybe."

Then one day, we found a tick on Jamie, my 6-year-old Scottie. Jamie was nicknamed "Spook" because he hated loud noises and lurked under kitchen chairs. Denise first tried brushing off the dreaded tick. No luck; it was firmly attached to Jamie.

Trying to grab the tick with tweezers to pull it out was a disaster; Jamie refused to stand still long enough for her to grasp that tiny tick. Desperate, we turned to the Dawn® dish soap method.

When she put a small dab of liquid Dawn® on Jamie's neck at the place the tick was attached, it immediately began a frantic backstroke and, within moments, was entirely out. All we had to do was wipe off the tick. Amazing! I still keep a small bottle of liquid Dawn® next to my tweezers for tick removal.

Unfortunately, liquid dish soap only works if the tick is alive. The last few times I needed to remove a tick, they wouldn't move at all. If a tick doesn't back out after applying liquid dish soap, I wipe it off and use tweezers. Unfortunately, little Bonnie wiggles so much that it takes two people to remove a tick. One person holds her steady while the other one carefully grasps the tick with tweezers, pulling slowly to avoid leaving any body parts behind.

This year, I have chosen a different approach: a specialized tick removal tool. There are several tick removers available. Most of them work like the claw part of a hammer removes a nail. You hook them under the head of the tick, then slowly pull it out.

I chose the Tick Tornado. Instead of pulling straight up, once you hook the tick with it, you twist to detach the tick's head first before lifting it up to remove it. The Tick Tornado has two sizes in each kit to fit either small or larger ticks. Each bright green stick has a hole for attaching to a carabiner, rope, or ring. I like how it doesn't require the animal to stay still.

Here are 5 Tips to Reduce Your Risk of Tick-Borne Illness:

1. Avoid places where ticks congregate.

Don't walk through brushy, woody areas or tall grass. Walk in the center of trails to avoid contact with branches or leaves where ticks get brushed off by deer.

2. Check frequently.

We do "tick checks" on each dog after every long walk and a complete nose-to-tail check every night, looking for "freckles" and feeling for bumps.

Showering within 2 hours of returning from hiking in tick habitat gives the best chance of rinsing off ticks or finding them before they dig in.

3. Consider using repellent.

It's wise to treat your clothing and your dog(s) with tick repellent. Make sure to keep checking daily for ticks.

4. Dress to discourage ticks.

Light-colored clothing helps you see ticks more easily. Wearing long-sleeved shirts and tucking your pants into your boots limits a tick's access to your skin.

5. Remove ticks promptly.

A tick must ingest blood before it can infect you or your pet. Ticks will feed about 36 hours after attaching themselves.

Each year, the Cashmere Chamber of Commerce hosts the Annual Auction and Recognition Dinner where recipients are honored. The community has the opportunity to nominate those (Business, Citizen, and Organization) making a difference to Cashmere. This year, we would like to highlight all our nominees for their efforts in supporting the Cashmere community. Check back each week to learn more about each nominee and the announcement of the 2020 honoree recipients.

Citizen OF THE YEAR

Nominee: Glenn Johnson

Nominated for: Outstanding contribution to the Cashmere community; helps promote the local economic climate; active in service projects leading to civic improvement; donates time beyond what is expected in the position in which the nominee earns a living.

What Others Shared: Supports the people of Cashmere, not only the families with children. He allowed use of the Vale parking lot during the summer for food distribution during the unprecedented need in our Community. He attends as many school functions as possible and is always available to help when needed. Instrumental in the Cashmere Cares group and simply a committed advocate for Cashmere!

What do you love most about the Cashmere Community? 18 years ago, my wife (Danielle) and I had the opportunity to move to Cashmere as I was offered the position of Superintendent of Schools. We were so excited to join a strong educational system. Equally, we were excited to have the opportunity to raise our family/kids in this community. While there are a host of positives that we love about Cashmere, what stands out most for us is the true sense of community and the unyielding support for kids/youth. We love this place that we have been so fortunate to call home!

Can you tell us more about your community involvement?

As the superintendent of schools, I have the honor and privilege of working collaboratively with a host of community organizations (businesses, civic organizations, city government, faith-based groups, non-profits, etc.) on a frequent basis (wide range of school and/or community projects). In addition, I am also currently a member of: Cashmere Rotary (18-year member and current President-Elect), Cashmere School Foundation Board (18-year board member), and Cashmere Booster Club. In the past, I have also had the privilege of serving as a Chamber Board Member and sat on the initial Cashmere Economic Development Council.

Share your best memory from 2020.

This past year, we have all faced unprecedented challenges and obstacles in dealing with the pandemic and COVID. Through it all, my best memory of 2020 will undoubtedly be how our entire staff responded to this health crisis. They came together, like they always do, and put children at the heart and center of their work. Determined early on that they were indeed "essential" workers, they never wavered in their commitment to their jobs, the district and most importantly to our kids and families. I am truly blessed to work with and for such an amazing team!

His vast experience, abilities, and passion for the sport of wrestling make him the perfect fit for our program."

Rich Wheeler: "I'm honored to be at the helm of this very storied program. We have a lot of great wrestlers of all ages in the program, and I'm excited to see them achieve success and make their school and community proud through goal-setting, hard work, and commitment. I appreciate the support I've received from the community and I look forward to working with all the people that have made this program great.
