By LINDSAY TIMMERMANS

Rollie Schmitten, the great-grandson of the founder of Schmitten Lumber Company presented the whistles to the Museum, read Fannie Tonseth's tribute about her father and the whistle history. He also read a historic article titled Mill Men Get Wish, from Wenatchee Daily World printed December 11, 1969 by Vern Matthews. The story honored 17 veteran mill employees, working there for a combined 630 years of unbroken service to the firm.

They all gathered together for a one-time group photo prior to retirement to publish, against the managing editor's almost inflexible rule of such large group photos. They said, "We'd like a picture of all of us together while we're still alive - we'd look better that way."

They were mostly friends more than coworkers and the good nature and dedication of the mill workers was characterized as such in the story. Jack Charlton is one of Schmitten's "retired" men - only thing is, he still shows up for work pretty regularly. Charlton is one of the "youngsters" of the firm - with only 29 years of service," the article went on. "We're going to miss coming down here everyday, but there'll be lots of times when we can sort of smile when the whistle blows."

The Schmitten Lumber Company mill whistles have now returned to Cashmere after a long hiatus away in the care of Fannie Tonseth, daughter of Ralph "Slim" Ethridge. Slim was the purchaser and operator of the whistles, starting in the late 1940's. It was Slim's role as the engineer of the boiler room which generated steam to run the mill and was the power for the whistles. Each day before the turbine started Slim would call BPA to see if they could use extra power, and if so the power that the mill didn't use went on the grid as a gift to the community, keeping power costs low for Cashmere. His role within the company was one of the most important and respected, and as such it was fitting that the whistles remained in his family's care after the mill closed.

However, the whistles were of great importance to all the residents of Cashmere. With the whistles blowing consistently throughout the day, much of the community operated without the need for watches, as they blew daily for nearly 65 years at 7 a.m., 12 noon, 1 p.m. and 4 p.m. "No matter when you started or ended your day, you generally knew the time because of the mill whistle, especially when to get home for dinner as a kid," remembered Rollie Schmitten at the dedication. Perhaps most amazingly were the miles of distance the whistles could be heard, which was from Monitor to Dryden.

The mill provided hundreds of people with employment and was so important to the culture and growth of community in Cashmere. "We are thrilled to be receiving the whistles to have on display at the museum. They will likely be placed in a temporary display for the time being and transferred to a more permanent display that includes a greater array of Schmitten Lumber Company objects in the near future. We are very much looking forward to honoring the Schmitten Family, Slim, and the hundreds of men and women that worked there while it operated," said Clennon.

Fannie and her husband Bob Tonseth of Methow, WA. presented the whistles to the museum board last Wednesday May 26, along with Ray and Rollie Schmitten who have been instrumental in the transfer of the whistles. Fannie Tonseth simply and easily stated that "They are where her father would have wanted them eventually. They're home." There was speculation that the whistles still function and could operate again by air compressor with hopes maybe (with notice) to blow them in Cashmere again soon possibly for an event.

Staff changes at the museum

Lexie Palmer, the previous Museum Director, moved to New Zealand with her husband after doing four years of many wonderful things to set the museum up for success. Nicky Clennon is the new Director, previously working for Cultural Resource Consultants, which is a Seattle-based firm, but she primarily worked in Chelan, Douglas, Grant and Okanogan counties conducting archaeological investigations. Clennon grew up in Cashmere, where the museum first piqued her interest in archaeology and anthropology. She majored in Anthropology at Eastern Washington University, then got her graduate degree at the University of Montana in Cultural Heritage and Prehistoric Archaeology. Working in a museum setting is new to her but she has a good base of knowledge and appreciation for the local collection. Clennon's family, (husband Cam, and children Hazel and Jude) moved back to Cashmere six years ago largely because of the community-focused atmosphere and great schools.

Director Nicky Clennon is also joined by an entirely new museum staff to start this season, with a new bookkeeper; Wendy Tankersley, a new Gift Shop Manager/ Membership Services coordinator; Shelly McDaniel, and a new Maintenance and Custodial services hire; David Prusa.

"We are very excited to be re-opening the museum on June 2 after mostly being closed since 2019 due to the pandemic. We are looking forward to resuming our traditional events, such as Apple Days this October, and are also eager to incorporate new programs and community events at the museum," said Clennon.

The Cashmere Museum and Pioneer Village will reopen June 2 and they're excited to be on the road to recovery. As they wait for further clarification, they ask that everyone continue to mask while inside the museum and they look forward to updating their masking policy as soon as possible.

Cashmere Seeks Public Input About ADU Regulations

By KIRK BECKENDORF
Cashmere Correspondent

The Cashmere City Council voted to reject a proposed ordinance to allow Accessory Dwelling Units (ADU) in all residential zones. The vote, held at the May 24th Cashmere City Council meeting, also authorized the Council to hold a public hearing about ADUs.

Director of Operations, Steve Croci, stressed the need to obtain input from city residents about ADUs to help guide the Council's decisions about regulating ADUs.

The proposed ordinance had been sent to the Council from the City Planning Commission (CPC). It defined an Accessory Dwelling Unit "as a separate dwelling unit integrated within or attached to a single-family dwelling, or one located as a detached accessory structure located on the same lot as a single-family dwelling."

Croci, told the Council that in the CPC's view, the proposed ordinance was in the best interest of the city. Mayor Jim Fletcher said that for over a year, the CPC had put in a lot of work investigating and discussing the issue. The Commission had held public hearings but had not received any public input. However, Fletcher expressed concern that the ordinance would allow ADUs to be built on any residential lot within the city. However, he said does not think that they should be allowed in single family residential zones.

City attorney, Chuck Zimmerman said that the ordinance would allow 2 homes on any residential lot. He recommended that the Council reject the proposal and hold their own public hearing later in the year when COVID restrictions will likely be reduced and the hearing could be held in person.

Council member Daniel Scott said that the CPC and the Council have talked a lot about this and that the Council has not been in favor of having ADUs in all residential zones. Councilman Dave Erickson agreed that he did not think they should be in single family zones. Councilman Chris Carlson commended the CPC for their hard work and said that ADUs in all residential areas could have long term impacts on Cashmere and fundamentally change the character of a neighborhood. He added that he wants to hear from the public.

The Council also unanimously approved an ordinance that will regulate short term rentals (STR). The new code restricts STR to the business and industrial zones and defines them as "a residential dwelling unit, or portions thereof, that are rented to overnight guests for fewer than 30 consecutive days."

Mayor Fletcher announced that Washington State Department of Labor and Industry has issued a notice which says that fully vaccinated employees do not have to wear masks or social distance, unless required by the employer. He said that the city of Cashmere does not have that requirement. The new guidance also states that "...employers must confirm workers are fully vaccinated..."

In another announcement, Fletcher said that the city is still looking to hire lifeguards and pool manager, so that the pool can be opened this summer. Kay Jones, City Clerk/Treasurer said that only 4 applications have been received and normally 20 -30 lifeguards are needed.

Considerable discussion preceded the approval of the low bid to paint the Sherman Reservoir. Eleven bids were submitted for the project, ranging from a high bid of $40,417 to the low bid of $2,707, which was significantly lower than the next highest bid.

Great Fishing Out of Neah Bay!

By JOHN KRUISE

Our annual trip to Neah Bay near the northwest tip of the Olympic Peninsula was a longtime coming, but well worth the wait. My fishing buddy Rusty Johnston and I made the trek to Neah Bay in May of 2018 and 2019 to spend time with Tom and Dora Burlingame, the owners of the Inn at Neah Bay and Excel Fishing Charters. Both times we enjoyed great fishing for rockfish and ling cod both times in a wondrous natural setting. However, the Coronavirus pandemic put a crashing halt to our spring trip last year, so this year's return was full of anticipation.

The Inn at Neah Bay is a clean, well-kept basecamp for adventures that features four spacious suites with comfortable beds and private bathrooms. Ours, the Marshland Suite, looks out over the beach and Strait of Juan de Fuca, both located just across the road from the Inn. Walking upstairs to the common area you'll notice murals leading from the bottom of the sea on the ground floor to the surface as you emerge upstairs. Other murals featuring fish, wildlife and marine mammals cover the interior walls at the Inn. There are comfortable sofas to lounge on, fresh coffee, hot water for tea, and grab and go breakfast items here too.

The inn is located a short drive from Neah Bay. Unfortunately, due to the Covid pandemic, this port town that sits on the Makah Reservation remains closed until at least October 1st. That meant after a good night's sleep we drove 20 minutes east instead to the marina at Sekiu. That's where we found Captain Tom Burlingame waiting for us on his boat, the 28-foot long "Cabazon". That's also where we met the two other people joining us on this charter, Dixie and Rick Hoffart, residents of Sequim who have been fishing with Tom as clients for years.

After a safety brief we were off to the fishing grounds. The two powerful engines of the Cabazon helped us cut through the waters at good speed and along the way we saw sea otters, harbor porpoises, numerous sea lions, seals and plenty of bald eagles.

After a two-hour run over calm waters, we dropped lines not far from Cape Alava and immediately were rewarded with bites on the jigs we were fishing below shrimp flies. Unfortunately, the first fish were blue rockfish and relatively small. After safely releasing them, we made a very short move, dropped lines again to a depth of about 100-feet, and the fishing was on! Within 30 minutes we had 35 black rockfish on the boat. These were solid fish, similar in appearance to largemouth bass and often referred to as sea bass. Many of the fish we caught were in the three-pound range and several fish were pushing five pounds in size.

After rapidly catching our limit of rockfish it was time to look for ling cod. They were located in this same area of the Pacific Ocean off of a series of surf-battered rocks and wind-swept islands with a backdrop of unspoiled rainforest on the nearby mainland. It often takes considerable time to catch a limit of lingcod but we had our ten fish in no time in all. This included one large one that weighed some 15 pounds which gave my friend Rusty quite a fight before he was able to wrestle it into the boat. It took us just over an hour to catch our limit of ling cod and "Just like that", to quote Forrest

Gump, we were done. We had left the dock at 6 AM and by 9:45 AM we had 35 rockfish and ten lingcod on the boat for the five of us. Fishing trips don't get much better than that.

With time on our side, we motored close to Cape Flattery, the northwestern tip of the Continental United States, where we viewed holes in the walls of the rocks formed by winds and waves over thousands of years. We also took in the sights of the newly renovated lighthouse on Tatoosh Island. The lighthouse, no longer in operation, is a National Historical Site. After checking out some of the marine life in this area the powerful engines of the Cabazon took us back to the marina at Sekiu where Tom quickly filleted our catch and sent us on our way with satisfied smiles on our faces and some great fishing stories to tell.

Tom Burlingame is well established, affable and popular charter captain. In fact, he's so popular he only has limited openings for the bottom fishing trips and summer salmon trips he offers out of Sekiu this year. However, there are always cancellations and if you are flexible, you may be able to book a trip with him in the weeks ahead.

As for The Inn at Neah Bay, this destination is open not just to clients booking trips with Excel Fishing Charters. Other anglers, boaters or individuals coming to the area to explore this part of the Olympic Peninsula or take in some world-class bird watching opportunities are welcome too. The website to book a fishing trip or a stay at the Inn is the same, <http://excelfishingcharters.com>.

Council members expressed concern about the wide range of bids. Responding to a question from Scott, Croci said an inspector would be on site to monitor the work. He also said the low bidder, Clean Line Finishes, was the only local company to bid. According to Croci they were insured and bonded, did not have employees and would not have travel costs. He speculated they would have a lower overhead than the other companies.

An interlocal agreement with Chelan County was unanimously approved. The agreement allows the city and county to rent equipment, labor and materials from each other. Fletcher said that this is beneficial for situations when an expensive piece of equipment is needed, but only occasionally.

We love our PIGS!

Yes, pork is delicious, but we don't mean those pigs, we mean our Partners In Giving – a group of donors who make annual gifts to support the work of the Community Foundation. Our PIGs, as we affectionately call them, took shape in 2013 due to an unlikely event: being turned down for a major grant. We had applied for a competitive grant from the MJ Murdock Charitable Trust to help us expand our staff. Our evaluator, who came and visited with us in person, was impressed by everything we did—our grantmaking, our capacity building workshops for nonprofits, and our scholarship program—except for one thing: He felt that we did not have enough people in the community that made annual, unrestricted gifts to support our work. (Our main source of operating income came from the management of the multitude of charitable funds that we steward.) He asked us how we would ever build up enough unrestricted funds to help us weather unforeseen challenges such as natural disasters, fluctuations in the stock market or a surge of unemployment. After 2020 and the devastating wildfires of the past few years, we wonder: perhaps this man had a crystal ball? While it was a let-down to be denied the grant, we took his criticism to heart and decided to launch

By DENISE SOROM
Director of Community Philanthropy, Community Foundation of NCW

the Partners In Giving program. We started by asking board members and former board members to donate as little as $50/year to become a "PIG." We found a mascot, an adorable stuffed plush pig named "Pardner," and started to promote the opportunity in our marketing materials and over social media. The campaign took off. People far and wide sent us gifts to become PIGs and our favorite day was when 9-year-old Carly Everson dropped by with money she had saved up in her piggy bank.

Almost 200 individuals and businesses have signed on to become PIGs since 2013, generating over $300,000 in unrestricted funding for the Community Foundation! Our PIGs have paid for dozens of critically important projects since this time:

- Every year our PIGs "round up" our scholarship awards giving students an extra boost in their financial support and last year, we surprised our most financially needy scholarship recipients with new iPads to help them get a leg up on their college career.

- PIGs have supplemented our budget for grant making, allowing us to award more grants when nonprofits really needed our help.
- About every 2 to 3 years, our PIGs help us pay for special training opportunities for our nonprofit leaders such as peer to peer coaching for leadership development or workshops with nationally known fundraising experts such as Susan Howlett.

- PIGs have helped us transform our space, improving our conference rooms with new technology that we offer free of charge to nonprofits in our region.

Perhaps most impressively, PIG funds helped us launch GiveNCW in 2015 – a crowdfunding campaign that now raises several hundred thousand dollars a year for dozens of nonprofits each year. In 2021, our PIGs will be providing an opportunity for nonprofits to receive customized strategic consulting, ensuring that our most valued charitable organizations survive the challenge of the COVID era and continue to serve this community for years to come. Our work without our PIGs would be like a BLT without the bacon. They make everything that much better. To learn more, visit www.cfncw.org/PIG.

Obituary & Memorial Policies

NCW Media, Inc.: Leavenworth Echo, Cashmere Valley Record, Lake Chelan Mirror, Quad City Herald

An Obituary is a way for family member(s) to commemorate a loved one's life and to notify the community of the passing of the loved one. Obituaries are also used for historical and ancestral data.

Memorials are another way to let the community know about the life and memories of the person who has passed. A Memorial is different from an Obituary. An Obituary is usually current, while a Memorial can be written later.

Obituaries and Memorials need to be typed and emailed as a Word Document. They can be placed in one or more papers - all publish weekly on Wednesday.

Obituaries are priced by the number of words and include one color photo and go online at no extra charge. Memorials are priced per column inch. Please call for cost. *Payment is due at the time of placement. *Exception: Chapels, funeral homes who have an account, can be billed. There is no charge for a Death Notice - information is limited.

Deadline is 4 p.m. on Friday - some exceptions may apply.

Sugar substitutes - there are two types

Last week, one of my subscribers asked me, "What is the best sugar substitute to use since I am a diabetic?"

Unfortunately, the answer to that is not very clear.

There are two types of sweeteners: caloric sweeteners (CS) and non-caloric sweeteners (NCS). The five most common caloric sweeteners listed on food labels are corn syrup, sorghum, cane sugar, high fructose corn syrup, and fruit juice concentrate. One study done during 2005 and 2009 and found that 53% of baby food formulas, 75% of salad dressings and dips, and 78% of vegetable juices contained at least one added caloric sweetener.

Back in 2005, 1% of foods and beverages contained non-caloric sweeteners. Between 2005 and 2009, Americans chose more foods and drinks containing NCS instead of caloric sweeteners every year. That trend has continued ever since.

Non-caloric sweeteners (NCS) have been used for decades as food additives and are considered safe.

Although they don't contain calories like common sweeteners, non-caloric sweeteners have NOT been shown to encourage weight loss or improve blood sugar control in people with diabetes.

Shouldn't a sweetener without any calories help you lose weight? Why doesn't it help lower your blood sugar level if you add a sweetener without any calories to your beverages instead of some form of sugar?

Research published in the October 2014 issue of Nature magazine may explain this observation. Samples of 4 different sweeteners were given to mice: sugar or one of three commonly used non-caloric sweeteners: aspartame, saccharin, and sucralose. The mice given the NCS showed changes in the makeup of their intestinal bacteria, while sugar had no effect.

Then, the mice whose intestinal bacteria had shown changes handled the food they ate differently. They had higher blood sugars after eating, and their blood sugars took much longer to drop back to normal levels. This pattern closely matches glucose intolerance, which is associated with an increased risk of becoming diabetic.

When researchers introduced samples of the changed mice's gut bacteria into normal mice, the normal mice's gut bacteria changed. And when it did, the same pattern of higher blood sugars that mimicked glucose intolerance occurred.

Repeating the same experiment on a small group of humans, only a few people showed changes in their gut bacteria after using a sugar substitute. However, the people whose gut bacteria changed showed the same pattern of glucose intolerance as the affected mice.

The effect of non-caloric sweeteners on gut bacteria doesn't happen consistently in humans. However, it could explain why switching from using sugar to an artificial sweetener doesn't always help diabetics lose weight or control their blood sugar levels.

Two other sugar substitutes are also available, both derived from natural sources. Stevia is a calorie-free sweetener from a plant native to South America in the chrysanthemum family and related to the ragweed plant. Stevia was approved for use as a food additive in 2008 and is marketed as the sweetener Truvia®.

Xylitol is a low-calorie sweetener extracted from natural sources such as corn. Because of its protective effect on tooth enamel, xylitol is added to sugarless gum and mints. It is marketed as a sugar substitute for baking. Xylitol may be a dentist's friend, but it's a dog owner's nightmare.

Xylitol is safe for humans but deadly to dogs. Xylitol triggers a dog's pancreas to pump out lots of insulin, dropping their blood sugar to dangerous levels. This triggers seizures and causes liver damage, even liver failure. Unfortunately, even small amounts of xylitol can kill a dog.

According to Jason Fung, MD, author of the books The Obesity Code and The Diabetes Code, the real obstacle to weight loss isn't too many calories. Instead, it's from insulin resistance caused by too much insulin released into the bloodstream.

We know caloric sweeteners like sucrose, fructose, agave, and honey will raise blood sugar. The increase in your blood sugar level triggers a burst of insulin from your pancreas, designed to lower your blood sugar back to normal.

Even though non-caloric or very low caloric sweeteners like Stevia don't raise your blood sugar, they still trigger insulin release. In addition, some can trigger your pancreas to release MORE insulin than caloric sweeteners like sugar or honey. Instead of losing weight, the increased insulin release can interfere with your weight loss efforts.

There isn't any sweetener that is clearly better than any other. Unfortunately, using a non-caloric or low-caloric sweetener doesn't guarantee you'll lose weight or control your blood sugar. You can try them out, but the less you use, the better.
