Cascade Medical Offers Drive-Through Flu Immunisations

BY CLINT STRAND,

Director of Public Relations

The leaves are turning, football is on the television, pumpkin spice everything is on the shelves, and kids are back at school, albeit virtually. There's no mistaking it, autumn is here, in all its glory. Unfortunately, a much less glorious season is hot on its heels - flu season.

In order to get ahead of the virus,

Cascade Medical is holding a Drive-Thru Influenza Immunization Clinic Saturday, Oct. 3 from noon to 5 p.m. in the Alpine Lakes Elementary parking lot. The cost is $35, billable to insurance as long as you bring your insurance card to the drive-through clinic.

Health care officials stress because of the looming specter of COVID-19, it is vitally important you receive your influenza immunization this year. "Unfortunately, many of the symptoms present in those battling COVID-19 mirror those of someone infected with the influenza strains we know and very much don't love," said Cascade Medical Physician Dr. Tony Butruille. "It's not a 100% guarantee against infection, but getting your flu immunization greatly cuts down on the chances of our communities dealing with a one-two punch of an influx of patients suffering from flu at the same time as possible rises in COVID transmission due to us all staying indoors from the colder weather."

Butruille added we are in a critical immunization window right now. "The CDC recommends people get vaccinated before flu season starts, and before it starts to spread in the community. It takes about two weeks after vaccinations for antibodies that protect against flu to develop in the body, so the timing for you to receive your immunization right now is really optimal."

Cascade Medical Director of Public Relations Clint Strand said "Given everything we as a community have done to keep ourselves well over the past six months, making this clinic a drive-through opportunity made a ton of sense. Many folks don't want to head into a health care facility unless they are not feeling well. This gives them a chance to protect themselves and their community without leaving the safety of their car."

If you have any questions about the upcoming Influenza clinic, contact Cascade Medical Clinic Director Whitney Lak at (509) 548-5815.

Protests, protests everywhere

The nightly news is all about the latest unrest somewhere in the country. From the streets of Seattle and Portland to Louisville and Florida our country is under attack by those who claim their Constitutional right to protest excuses them for pillaging and looting in the process.

The protests are made in the name of justice, but unfortunately it is rarely justice they seek but revenge. The American concept of justice requires that the alleged perpetrators of injustice be given a day in court where they can calmly and logically confront their accusers and tell their side of the story.

Street justice on the other hand demands that the perpetrator be hung from the nearest tree. In the old west a horse thief was put on a horse with a noose around his neck and the horse was spanked to ride away leaving the thief to spin in the wind. There was no opportunity for the thief to explain how he had rented the horse from the local livery stable.

BILL FORHAN

There has certainly been people who were wrongly accused and convicted despite the best efforts of attorneys and prosecutors to prevent that from happening. But given a trial by a passionate mob versus a dispassionate presentation of the case I would opt for the latter.

But to the point about the growing frustration in the country over the issues of our time. The question about why the growing crowds of unhappy citizens marching for causes is increasing needs to be examined. They are not all violent, but there is an increasing trend in protests.

Generally, people protest because they do not believe their voices are being heard or they see what they believe is an injustice. That's fair and our Constitution guarantees citizens the right to "peaceably assemble for a redress of their grievances." It also guarantees that we all have the right to disagree with the protestors.

The first problem is if you disagree with the protestors you are accused of being anti-social, racist, or just a lackey of some hated group. There is little or no meaningful discussion.

The second problem is the protestors believe they have the right to destroy property, steal from their neighbors or local businesses because society has not been fair. It doesn't matter that the person they stole from was in no way responsible for their mistreatment.

I have no problem with peaceful protests. But those who are challenging us to be better human beings are simply dishonest when they refuse to discuss the issues. Or even worse, attempt to discredit our criticism of their positions with shallow arguments about our questionable loyalty to their most hated organizations or industries.

It is time to get real here. Black Lives Matter is not an organization that truly cares about the quality of black lives. The organization is simply using the unfortunate events of our recent past to push their radical agenda. The leaders of this organization are trying to draw in gullible people of all colors to support their revolution. Misguided and guilt-ridden individuals are still joining the revolution. Their demands grow increasingly unreasonable and illogical, while their violence continues to escalate. Defund the police? If they care about black lives why are they killing black cops?

Friday afternoon we had another peaceful protest in Leavenworth. A group of environmentalists marched for Climate change. They carried signs like, "The Earth in on Fire." Well, it's true that the west coast has endured tremendous fire damage this year. The question we need to ask is why are the fires worse than they have been historically? Politicians and environmentalists want to blame it on global warming. Problem is the climate is actually cooling. In my mind the fires have become worse because we have totally neglected good forest management. The forests are now overloaded with dead and diseased trees that once ignited make the fires worse.

It is time we all learned to respect that protests are important but it is more important that we learn to listen to each other and work to resolve problems with enlightened policies and programs that truly make a difference.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Thanks firemen!

We would like to thank the Cashmere, Dryden and Leavenworth firemen who came so quickly to put out our garage fire. Unfortunately, the garage couldn't be saved, and was a total loss, but you saved our home from burning down. We are eternally grateful. God bless you all.

Critical Look at Covid

I read with interest Dr. Pete Rutherford's Response to Taking a Critical Look at Covid published in the Sept. 23 issue of the Echo. It was very well written and presented a thoughtful and informative picture of his opinions regarding the situation. As the CEO at Confluence Health, he is right in the middle of the health care industry's handling of this problem in our region.

His article raised several questions in my mind that I hope he can address in a follow up. First he reiterates the fact that there have been 6,426 confirmed cases in the four county region served by Confluence. This is about 2.5% of the population of that region. Then applying the results of some studies done on the antibody testing done in other regions, he concluded that we can estimate about 5% of the region's residents have been infected thus far. He then states that this is far from the 60 to 70% infection level needed in our region to reach the "herd" immunity level; the target for which we are shooting. My question is this: How can we reach this target level when everything we are doing with the lockdown is to prevent the incidences of new cases? Is the goal to hold the new case factor at a minimum until we can develop effective vaccines? If so, it means that we will be in one phase or another of this lockdown for many months to come. The news items about vaccines indicate we cannot likely expect to get one or more vaccines through the testing and approval process until at least November and more likely January 2021. After that comes manufacture, then distribution, then trying to convince enough people that the vaccines offered are effective and safe. Following that we will then need studies to see how many people have the antibodies in total. In my mind I don't see this happening in less than six months. This means we will be in some sort of lockdown until at least the middle of 2021. What am I missing here? If my assumptions are correct, we will have many more lives destroyed between now and then as more people lose their jobs, more businesses fold because they cannot operate at profitable level and state and local governments try to deal with their expanding deficits. Economic pain is not as visible as physical pain but it is still pain.

We are your community's firefighters. We visit schools to talk to students about fire prevention and safety. We show the special clothing we wear to protect us from the smoke and heat of fire. We may look a bit scary, but we are not. We are here to help you.

This is a chart for you to use to talk with your family about fire prevention and safety. Cut it out and hang it on your refrigerator!

Family Fire Safety Checklist

- Only cook in the kitchen when an adult is helping you.
- Don't touch matches, lighters or candles. They are for adult use only.
- Do you have smoke detectors on every level of your home? Test them monthly and change the batteries at least once a year.
- Do you know two or more ways out of the house?
- Never use elevators (stairs are much safer) if there is a fire.
- Smoke rises, so if there is a fire, stay low: crawl under the smoke.
- Have you picked a place to meet the rest of your family once you are all out of the house?
- Once you are out of the house, stay out of the house.

Find the 12 "fire safety" words or phrases in bold to the left, then place them into the puzzle!

Remembering RGB

Ruth Badar Ginsburg died on Sept. 18 and many are grieving the loss of a dedicated Supreme Court Justice, eulogizing her legacy.

A WALK WITH PASTOR JOHN SMITH

demands unbiased and impartial decisions, RGB was anything but. Her radical Feminist and Leftist ideology shaped and influenced her decisions and millions of Americans have suffered because of it.

Although, a woman achieving a position in our nation's highest judicial branch is highly commendable, her "legacy" is far from exemplary. She had a consistent record of ruling in favor of abortion to the point of legitimizing the horrific practice of partial-birth abortion.

The Bible says, "When the wicked perish, there are shouts of joy" (Psalm 11:10) and yes, I do rejoice that due to RGB's death that her legacy of evil has been brought to an end and there is now hope for a righteous replacement, however, I do not rejoice that she died without Christ.

in the death of the wicked" (Eze. 33:11) because their death means certain judgment and forever condemnation.

Ginsburg's passing reminds us that regardless of the position that anyone holds, death will come to every person eventually. As God reminds political leaders in Psalm 82:6, "I said, 'You are gods, sons of the Most High, all of you; nevertheless, like men, you shall die and fall like any prince.'" The political leaders in Psalm 82, much like many today, thought of themselves as untouchable and that they could use their God-given authority to oppress and subjugate people without consequence.

the leaders of ancient Israel from judgment, what makes us think that RGB (or any leader for that matter) will escape being examined by the highest court in the cosmos?

But as stated earlier, I do not rejoice in RGB's death because she didn't place her faith in Christ. Now, it is true she could have placed her hope in Jesus moments before her passing. As the Puritans used to say, "There is only one deathbed profession of faith recorded in Scripture so as we do not presume but also so that we do not lose hope."

opportunity. Furthermore, her relatives record her dying wish was not the advancement of the Kingdom of God, his glory, or the salvation of her family, rather that her position would remain vacant till after the election. Think about that for a moment, death is right at the foot of her bed and she is worried about who Trump may pick to replace her.

What happened to Ruth Badar Ginsburg will happen to us all with the exception that our death will have little fanfare. It will be likely that our death will not cause flags to be at half-mast, nor will millions tweet eulogies, and the mainstream media will not herald our life as "groundbreaking". However, despite all this, the grave is the ultimate equalizer. RGB as well as you and I, will someday close our eyes in death and open them in eternity.

RGB should be remembered as an example of a life and death unwilling and unready to meet Jesus and I pray we all learn from her.

Dr. Rutherford also does an excellent job of setting out the impact this virus has had on the medical profession when all eyes were focused on fighting the virus as we "flattened the curve". That was the initial objective of the lockdown and that was successful. He rightly points out the physical and emotional drain on the staff as they were faced with a large load of patients and they struggled to understand what was going on.

that there were three people in the Covid unit, including one patient in ICU and one patient on a ventilator. The entry of more treatment drugs to the scene is also helping as we go.

Finally, I was fascinated to learn about QALYs (Quality Adjusted Life Years) and how they are being used to make treatment decisions. "QALYs" are defined by Dr. Rutherford as follows "the amount that this country has decided it is willing to pay for an additional year of an individual's life". The number is currently said to be at least $100,000 per year. He then uses a life impact estimate of 10 years for patients dying of COVID. The assumption is then made that 2 million people will need to die to reach herd immunity levels, all of which calculates to a total QALY-based cost number of $2 trillion. While I understand his calculations, the conclusion seems unreal to me. The average daily death toll in the US for the last 30 days is 850 per day. There are currently 206,560 total deaths to date in the US. To reach the 2 million level at that daily rate would take at least 2,110 days, or 5.8 years. Even Dr. Fauci believes he is confident that this will be over by the spring of 2023. Most estimates I have seen indicate a total of less than 300,000 deaths. Based on total deaths of 300,000, the QALY-based cost total is $300 billion; not $2 trillion.

Regardless, the real economic cost appears to be far more than either of these amounts. A June 2, 2020 Forbes article states that a recent CBO report on the subject indicated that the pandemic's impact on the US economy is estimated at $7.9 trillion in real economic output, or $16 trillion over the next 10 years. Using the 2 million lives estimated by Dr. Rutherford for herd immunity as the potential number of lives that might have been lost without action, the 7.9 trillion "cost" of these actions relating back to each "quality adjusted life year" saved or served as a patient is about $400,000 per life year. That is four times the $100,000 annual threshold mentioned in Dr. Rutherford's letter. The 10 year cost is double that, or $800,000 per life year. Stated another way, it is $4 million and $8 million respectively for each life saved or serviced.

At the very least these numbers should make one stop and wonder if the lockdown approach has been the best one we might have taken. There are more than money factors involved when making decisions about saving lives but it is a very big factor as evidenced by the fact that the medical profession uses QALY data when making all kinds of treatment decisions already, i.e., cancer treatment, surgeries, etc.

We may get the virus under control in another year or two but we will be coping with the economic and emotional fallout of all of this on our lives for far longer as schools, businesses, state and local governments, and just plain folks get themselves sorted out.

I believe our leaders made what they thought were the right decisions at the time based on what they knew at the time. I am not second guessing that. On the other side of this, there will be examples of countries and even states that took different approaches. We will be able to study the outcomes and, hopefully, learn from our mistakes and do a better job next time.

THE WASHINGTON OUTDOORS REPORT

Brown trout caught on a spinner.

For the Love of Brown Trout

By JOHN KRUSE

I didn't realize how much I missed catching brown trout until I hooked a 14-incher that immediately launched out of the water three feet into the air. Tough, hard fighting and beautifully colored, brown trout are a true treat to catch whether you hook them on the Jefferson River in Southwest Montana where I was catching them last week, or here in Washington State.

My love affair with brown trout started when I was attending Eastern Washington University. My roommate, Steve Ronholt, and I got permission to park on a rancher's property and hike to Rock Creek where it flowed into Rock Lake in Whitman County. Spring fishing with spinners in April often got us into 12 to 16-inch brown and rainbow trout there. Curiously enough, Steve, like me, later became an outdoors media professional, co-hosting the long running fly-fishing television show, "Fishing with Ladin". But that, is another story.

Since our forays to Rock Lake opportunities to hook into brown trout, at least in Washington, have been limited to a few chance encounters. That's why I decided to find out where a person could still catch a brown trout in the Evergreen State, where the rivers generally yield rainbows or cutthroat trout.

The German brown trout was introduced to the United States in 1883 and to the famed Madison River, flowing from Yellowstone National Park through Montana to the Missouri River, in 1889. Checking the Washington Department of Fish and Wildlife website I found the state record is a 22-pound fish, caught by R.L. Henry out of Sullivan Lake in Pend Oreille County in 1965.

Brown trout are still found in Sullivan Lake and Rock Lake as well as a good number of other lakes around the state, a total of 75 lakes in 24 counties, though some of these stockings occurred years ago and remnant populations could be slim at best. A list of those lakes can be found at <https://wdfw.wa.gov/species-habitats/species/salmo-trutta#locations>.

Wanting to learn more, I reached out to Chris Donley, WDFW's Regional Fish Program Manager in Spokane, to get more information about brown trout in Central and Eastern Washington. I asked him for some suggestions on where to go for bigger brown trout.

Donley replied, "In order by preference but not a definitive list would be Rock Lake, Waitts Lake and Clear Lake in Spokane County." Donley continued saying, "Pretty much any water that receives them has trophy potential. Browns are difficult to catch and tend to survive to older ages in most lakes where they are stocked." Donley says the agency, "Stocks them in lakes to provide a trophy opportunity because they can grow to such large sizes. It isn't uncommon to come across a 5 to 10-pound brown trout in lakes that are for the most part known for producing 12-inch rainbow trout."

One thing not mentioned on the WDFW website are the rivers or streams where one can fish for brown trout. Asked about this Donley replied, "The best streams for brown trout are the Colville River, Rock Creek and Crab Creek. Occasionally, when it has water, Wilson Creek is a sneaky little sleeper too. For the most part these are on private land and people need to seek permission (to gain access). In addition to this, anglers should check trout stocking reports because there are some brown trout stocked in wastewater drains in Region 2 that can provide flowing water action." Region 2 encompasses Okanogan, Chelan, Douglas, Grant and Adams Counties.

Now that you have some ideas about where to look for brown trout, rig up your fly rod or spinning rod and take a trip to a body of water that has them. You just might fall head over heels for them like I did.

Do you need a pneumonia shot?

Q: It's time for my flu shot. Can I get both my flu shot and pneumonia shot at the same time?

Yes, you CAN get them both simultaneously, but the pneumonia shot is very different from the flu shot. Flu shots must be reformulated every year, while "pneumonia" shots give lifetime protection.

Q: Why are there 2 pneumonia shots? Can I get both of them at the same time?

Although it's referred to as a "pneumonia" shot, it doesn't work to protect you against getting all types of pneumonia, just one type. The vaccine protects against a particularly nasty bacteria called pneumococcus.

Pneumococcus is also called Streptococcus pneumoniae or S. pneumoniae. The pneumococcus bacterium causes life-threatening infections in your lungs, brain, and blood, especially in infants and older people.

Every year, thousands of adults are hospitalized with life-threatening pneumonia caused by pneumococcal bacteria, and 18,000 adults age 65 and older will die from a pneumococcal infection.

According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), based in Atlanta, pneumococcus is responsible for 1 out of every 5 cases of meningitis in children under 5 years of age.

Meningitis from infection with pneumococcus is very difficult to treat. Even with antibiotics, 40% of adults over the age of 65 who contract pneumococcal meningitis will die.

The CDC's Active Bacterial Core Surveillance System documented 41,000 cases of severe pneumococcal disease with 4,900 deaths during 2006 and considers it one of the most preventable causes of death in the United States.

The pneumococcus bacterium responsible for these life-threatening infections have more than 90 different strains, called serotypes. Although there isn't a vaccine that protects you from all of them, there are 2 vaccines currently available to guard against the strains most responsible for causing severe infections.

Since Pevnar® 13 started being given routinely to infants and children, it's proved amazingly effective, decreasing the incidence of serious pneumococcal infections by 80 percent.

There are now fewer pneumococcal infections in older adults too, as children transmit viruses and bacteria through hugs and other close contact.

Vaccinating older adults with Pevnar® 13 has NOT decreased pneumococcal infections, causing the CDC to change their recommendations.

The CDC now recommends everyone 65 years old and older receive Pneumovax® 23, but healthy adults over 65 do not need Pevnar® 13.

Q: What's the difference between the 2 pneumonia vaccines?

Pneumovax® 23 protects you against 23 different strains of pneumococcus. Many older adults have already received it. Pevnar® 13 is newer and a little stronger, with 12 of its 13 strains the same as in the other one, and one strain unique to it.

Should you get a pneumonia shot?

1. YES, if you are over 65 years old and have NEVER had a pneumococcal vaccine.

The CDC recommends everyone over 65 years old receive Pneumovax® 23, which can be given with a flu shot.

2. YES, if you have a medical condition that puts you at a higher risk of getting a severe infection.

You should get BOTH, with Pevnar® 13 given first, followed by Pneumovax® 23 one year later.

3. YES, if you received Pneumovax® 23 before age 65.

If you received your first Pneumovax® 23 shot before you were 65 years old, you would need a second one for lifetime protection. It should be given at least 5 years after your first one, and at least 1 year after getting Pevnar® 13.

4. NO, if you have already received two vaccines with Pneumovax® 23 and one with Pevnar® 13.

If you received Pneumovax23® at age 65 or older, you would NOT need an additional one for lifetime protection. You need just one Pevnar® 13 vaccination for lifetime protection.

5. Possibly, if you are a healthy adult at least 50 years old.

Pevnar® 13 doesn't decrease the risk of pneumococcal disease in healthy adults. Talk to your doctor about whether and when pneumococcal vaccine is best for you.
