

Small Business relief drowning in the swamp

Cashmere Valley Bank, one of the largest local banks in North Central Washington, is not participating in the Payroll Protection Program.

By BILL FORHAN,
Owner NCW Media

The big story last week was the small business relief program or Paycheck Protection Program (PPP). It's a program touted to jump start our collapsed economy by helping small businesses get some immediate funding to keep people employed.

The program started accepting applications April 3. At the rate this is going, the money won't be disbursed to the small businesses that really need it before it is too late.

The problem is finding a bank that is processing the applications. Locally, Cashmere Valley Bank is not accepting applications.

North Cascades Bank has a link on their website for submitting an application although it is not clear if you must be a current bank customer in order for them to process the application.

Washington Federal Bank is accepting applications and according to their website they do not require the applicant be a current customer of the bank. They do not have an online link for submitting applications but do have a link to get a call back. Washington Federal has branches in Leavenworth, Wenatchee and Chelan.

Forbes magazine reports that as of April 5, Wells Fargo is not accepting any more applications. All of the other national banks are only accepting applications from businesses that have a current active account with them.

NCW Media is contacting all local banks to assess their acceptance policy with regard to this program, but as of this writing it appears that finding a lender will put the program out of the reach of most of the small businesses that need the help.

There are some online companies that are taking applications. For example, Kabbage is accepting applications. Although Forbes reports they are forwarding the loan applications for those who qualify to their "partner lenders." Many of these potential lenders are asking for information that is not required by the program. A clear sign that they are simply using this program to identify possible borrowers for their high interest working capital programs.

Here is what the SBA says is required:

The application form - SBA Form 2483 2 pages that require a signature and several places need initials.

Federal form 940 for 2019 - Shows the total payroll for last year, payroll register for 2019 and 1Q of 2020.

A schedule of any shareholder of the business that hold more than a 20 percent interest.

A schedule of any other payroll related costs that you are claiming as part of your payroll costs. In Washington state there is no state income tax but unemployment and workers compensation premiums could qualify. Any health insurance and retirement plan costs can be included.

Most lenders are asking for a copy of the applicant's driver's license although it's not clear this is required by the government.

Other lenders I have talked to ask for other information that is not required and is a red flag that they are more interested in getting the applications to sell the applicant other loan products that are not part of this program.

This is a highly touted measure to get the economy moving and protect small businesses from financial collapse. The problem is it looks like lenders, who are the most important link to making this work, are not really behind it.

Time is of the essence in this program. It is intended to provide financial relief to small businesses and their employees. Unless the private sector banks can quickly process the applications and get the money into the local economy. Many local small businesses will shut down and unemployment claims will continue to soar.

Many small towns across the country only have one local bank. These communities are primarily served by small businesses that need this help. Without access to a qualified lender these small businesses cannot access the help they vitally need.

Cashmere Food Bank needs help

By PAM LEIGHTON

This week the Food Bank gave out an unprecedented 125 boxes of food with the help of the National Guard and Chelan Douglas Community Action Council. Unfortunately, they ran out of boxes in the first hour. That meant several families did not get food. I had calls and text messages after 3:30 wondering what happened. We would normally be open until 4:30. Since there is such a high demand for help with food, we will be offering boxes every Wednesday during the Pandemic crisis. We need to get the word out to people that there will be food again every Wednesday, beginning at 2:30. The National Guard and CDCAC will be distributing at our same location. If you have questions please feel free to call 509.669.3159. To send cash donations a check can be made out to Cashmere Food Bank, PO Box 225, Cashmere, WA 98815. There is also a drop off cupboard at the Food Bank for non-perishable food donations.

THE WASHINGTON OUTDOORS REPORT

Fishing Rod-Reel-Line Maintenance

Time Enough At Last

By JOHN KRUSE

One of the best-known episodes from the classic television series, "The Twilight Zone", was about a bespectacled bookworm named Henry Bemis. All he wanted to do was read books undisturbed but life for this bank teller just got in the way. That was, until he emerged from a lunch break in a bank vault to find the world had come to an end thanks to a nuclear war and he was the sole survivor. This gave him the opportunity to finally read all the books he wanted. The episode "Time Enough at Last" ended with fate playing a cruel trick on Henry Bemis just as he was about to enjoy life in this post-apocalyptic world.

The story seems apt for anglers, hunters and outdoors enthusiasts in Washington who find they can't currently enjoy their passions of hunting and fishing or even getting outside to most of our public lands during this coronavirus induced lockdown. So, what's a hunter and angler to do? We've got a few suggestions for you focusing on routine maintenance tasks you have likely put off because of past time constraints!

Firearms Maintenance: Hopefully you clean your firearm after each outing to the range or into the field but let's face it, many shooters don't clean that firearm until the end of the season and in some cases, still haven't. There's no excuse to put that task off any more and your firearms will function far better and last longer for the effort.

Rod, Reel And Line: Most folks don't think of maintaining their reel or changing out their fishing line until they either lose a fish when the line snaps or your fishing reel seizes up in the middle of a retrieve.

You can prevent both scenarios with a few easy steps that you really should do once a year. First off, take the spool off your reel (if it's a spinning reel) and then clean and lube the reel well, getting out the grime that has likely accumulated there. They actually make reel lube for fishing reels but if you can't find that a synthetic oil lubricant will also help prevent rust and keep those gears and bearings working.

As for the line, change that out once a year. Many spools come with a small piece of tape on the line. If you have ever forgotten what pound test you have on that reel, you can remember by writing down the test on that tape along with the date

Missing the Assembly

With the mandates regarding social distancing, travel restrictions, and the prohibition of social gatherings, it has forced churches to reevaluate their understanding of ecclesiology—what the church is and what does it do.

Many churches have opted to go virtual, offering their services online via live stream on social media. So, instead of getting ready for church and packing the family in the car to gather for worship, all one needs to do is turn on the computer, log into Facebook and you can have the worship experience in the comfort of your own home.

However, as amazing as modern technology is and how numerous people have been blessed and edified by watching services online, watching a live stream on your computer or phone is not church.

The word “church” by its very definition is a gathering of people. The word in Greek is ekklesia, which means “called out assembly” and the only way any of us can do church is if we assemble publicly to worship God. If you aren’t able to gather or assemble with other brothers and sisters, then you aren’t having church.

The potential pitfall that will come out of this pandemic is you will have a whole host of people, that when the restriction is lifted, will feel perfectly fine staying home. After all, they have had weeks to develop a habit and understanding that they can achieve the same spiritual result online without going to church. It grieves me, that church leaders are reinforcing this tendency by telling people that they are doing church in their living room. Keep in mind, that those same leaders a few months ago would have discouraged people from sitting in front of a television or computer screen and calling it “church”.

Now some might chide me, saying “We are the church.” and the church is a matter of being rather than going. I agree with that sentiment to an extent, but I find it rather difficult to “be the church” when you don’t go to church or gather for worship.

Yes, we live in some unprecedented times and the day calls us to be wise and prudent as to how we conduct ourselves in light of this viral outbreak. We take precautions to not unintentionally infect anyone with COVID-19 but also, we should make every effort to not unintentionally signal that not gathering for public worship is acceptable.

We should take seriously the virus but also we should take seriously Hebrews 10:24-25 which state, “And let us consider how to stir up one another to love and good works, not neglecting to meet together, as in the habit of some, but encouraging one another, and all the more as you see the Day drawing near.”

We should mourn at the restrictions in place. Our hearts should grieve that churches have shut their doors and brothers and sisters are unable to gather together to worship. We should weep and yearn for the day when we can break bread with our brothers and sisters at the Lord’s Table and proclaim the death of Christ in communion.

How long will this restriction last? I have no idea. There is a part of me that wonders if it will ever be lifted. Furthermore, I wonder when churches in our nation will say “enough is enough” and then assemble to give praise and glory of God? I hope soon.

Until then, I urge that none of us settle into complacency and accept

what we are doing now as “church”. It’s not. Besides, sitting on the couch looking at a screen cannot compare to looking into the eyes of your brother or sister in Christ or hearing them join with you in song. The cold and deadness of a digital screen cannot measure up to the life and warmth that Body of Christ has to offer and so we should be even more diligent to fight against the temptation to believe that gathering together is unimportant or irrelevant when we have technology at our disposal.

I miss the church gathered and I hope you do too.

it was installed and tape that on the inside of the spool (i.e. 10lb 2020).

Other Gear Maintenance: If you are a hunter you may use decoys and this is the time to clean them and touch them up with paint. If you are a duck hunter you can also check the cords and weights on each decoy and replace the ones that have been lost.

Duck hunters and anglers use waders and now is the time to patch those leaks so you can actually stay dry the next time you wade into a lake or stream.

The Boat: With the vast majority of boat ramps closed this is the ideal time to make some improvements to your boat. Consider installing new rod holders or upgraded marine electronics. You could also set up some downriggers to use for salmon or lake trout. If you are not well versed in the use of downriggers check out the basics courtesy of Cannon Downriggers at www.cannondownriggers.com/learn/downrigger-basics.

Online Learning: Downriggers are not the only thing you can learn about online. If you have been putting off taking that Washington State Boater's Education Course now is the time to take it www.boat-ed.com/washington/.
On the firearms side of the house the sporting goods industry reports a lot of people have become first time pistol owners during this pandemic for home security purposes. Owning a firearm is one thing. Knowing how to use it in a safe and proficient manner is another. That's why a $60 investment into the Basic Pistol Course being offered online by the National Rifle Association could be a very good bet. <https://basicpistol.nra.org/>

Sorting And Organizing: Last but not least, head out to the shop or the garage and do some serious spring cleaning and organizing when it comes to your fishing tackle and hunting gear. Think about it, you'll finally be able to find that perfect lure, those shooting glasses or that missing pair of pliers when you need them if you take the time to do this now.

Put it all together, and there is plenty to keep you busy during the next few weeks while we suffer together through our state closure of fishing and hunting. When things open again though, we'll be ready!
