City Council approves Corona virus policies

By KIRK BECKENDORF
NCW Media Reporter

The Cashmere City Council meeting on March 23rd was dominated by city issues related to the corona virus pandemic. To maintain social distancing, two city council members and the Director of Operations called in via speaker phone and the council members physically present, were scattered around the meeting room.

The Council unanimously approved a resolution declaring a state of emergency due to the novel coronavirus (COVID-19). This resolution allows the mayor to seek emergency funding from federal, state or other sources, to address impacts on the city caused by the spreading virus.

The council also unanimously approved a resolution to provide supplemental leave to city employees impacted directly by COVID-19. This supplemental benefit would be in addition to normal medical leave. For full-time employees the resolution provides up to 80 hours of leave and 40 hours for part-time employees. This supplemental leave will be for employees who have tested positive, have COVID-19 symptoms, if they live with someone with COVID-19 or if the city is officially shutdown due to the virus.

A request for relief of its lease obligations from the Riverside Center was approved by the council. The unanimous decision was made to waive the Center's monthly lease of approximately $2600 for April, and to authorize the mayor to extend the waiver on a month to month basis through June or until the emergency has ended. Events that were booked at the Riverside Center have all been canceled through May, due to the Governor's proclamation to end group gatherings. After some discussion, council member Daniel Scott made a motion to approve the waiver with the stipulation that the Center cannot double dip from funding relief from other sources and that the center could not be used during the time that rent is waived.

To provide relief for city residents financially impacted by COVID-19 the council approved a resolution to waive all late fees for utility bills through June and to reassess the policy in July. Payment plans will be developed on a case by case basis, according to City Clerk/Treasurer, Kay Jones.

In non-virus related business, the contract for improvements to Well #10 was amended by the council, allowing for the purchase of a new motor, rather than repairing the old motor. Scott asked if the new motor would be more efficient. Steve Croci, Director of Operations said it would. The budget was increased from $62,323.20 to $69,367.02.

A minute with the Mayor

During an emergency we seek some sense of safety from the stability in our community. As Mayor of the City of Cashmere I am committed to keeping Cashmere a safe healthy city by providing the following:

Jim Fletcher, MAYOR

Continuing Essential City activities as described in the Governor's Proclamation. Serving a purpose related to public health, safety and welfare. Preventing and avoiding damage or unsafe conditions, and address emergency repairs.

Making the best decisions I can when considering the information available to serve Cashmere's residents and employees

Balancing the needs of citizens and employees of the city of Cashmere

Emergency COVID 19 conditions have resulted in business closures, unemployment, and economic worries for Cashmere's residents. Families effected by business closures or loss of a job should sign up for a deferred payment plan by contacting the city at 782.3513 or

angie@cityofcashmere.org

My belief in the people of Cashmere is your collective desire to preserve what it means to be a small community. Being 'Cashmere' is helping our friends and neighbors through difficult times. Therefore, I ask each of you to join me in activities that will help us to be healthy so we can return to a more normal great place to live. These community activities include:

Supporting our medical and first responders by keeping ourselves healthy so they are not at risk when helping someone in our family

Practicing social distancing. It's your responsibility to protect yourself first so you then protect your family. Limiting your exposure may save you or a family member from illness.

Wash hands or use sanitizers especially after touching any surface that is frequently touched by other people.

Supporting local businesses and charities. All are so essential to the quality of life in Cashmere.

Preparing for the long haul. This virus will be around for several months, maybe longer

Cashmere City Council adopted policies for city employees in the event they have been infected with COVID 19 or need to be quarantined. Employees have paid time off/sick leave benefits including a supplemental 80 hours of paid time off required by federal Emergency Paid Sick Leave Act. City priority is to reduce risk of virus transferring between employees and the public by adjusting schedules to respond to immediate essential needs, prioritizing and delaying certain non-essential city functions. Unfortunately, this closes City Hall to walk in customers, cancels various committee meetings and community events. We will be returning phone calls and responding to emails as quickly as we can.

As always, I can be reached at mayor@cityofcashmere.org.

THE WASHINGTON OUTDOORS REPORT

Columbia Hills State Park – A Nice Place To Visit When You Can

By JOHN KRUSE

Last week's edition outlined all of the public lands that were open in Washington State, albeit with several restrictions. We edited that column several times, trying to keep up with the rapid changes coming at us as state and federal agencies revise rules while combating the coronavirus pandemic. Unfortunately, changes continued happening to the point that some of the information in last week's column was obsolete by the time many of you read it.

The biggest changes? The closure of all fishing statewide until at least April 8. That and the closure of Washington's state lands to the public. This includes all of Washington State Parks, Department of Natural Resource lands, State Wildlife Areas and state boat launch sites. It's all part of Governor Jay Inslee's "Stay Home, Stay Healthy" decree, and these closures are clearly designed to keep you off the road and close to (if not in your) home.

Having said that, our state parks and lands will open up again, and hopefully do so before spring passes us by. That's why we are profiling a wonderful state park, divided into four units, that is a great springtime destination for hikers, wildflower enthusiasts, anglers, history lovers and people who just enjoy beautiful views in unique landscapes.

Columbia Hills State Park

Located in the National Columbia River Gorge Scenic Area of Southcentral Washington north of The Dalles, this park is divided into four units, all accessible from State Highway 14.

One great reason to visit this park during the spring is to go for a hike amongst the wildflowers. The trails connecting the Dalles Mountain Ranch, an old homestead, and Crawford Oaks Trailhead, both on the north side of Highway 14, offer 6-1/2 miles of trails to explore.

Park Ranger Andy Kallinen says grass widows and buttercups are blooming now but the crowds typically show up here from mid-April into May to take in the hills covered with yellow arrowleaf balsamroot and purple lupine. Kallinen says, "For the (University of Washington) Husky fans out there, it's quite a color splash."

Another unit of the park is Horseshief Butte. The prominent landmark and Ice Age remnant just south of Highway 14 has attracted rock climbers for some time but in recent years hikers wanting to soak in views of the Columbia River Gorge have come here as well. Ranger Kallinen stated a number of "social trails" that lead nowhere had developed over the years and they are completing trail work that eliminates those trails and clearly marks the ones hikers should stick to. A loop hike with a small amount of bouldering offers up to 1 1/2 miles worth of trails to enjoy.

The main unit at this dispersed park is found at Horseshief Lake, a 90-acre impoundment of the Columbia River. A campground is located here on a peninsula gently jutting out into the lake. There is also a boat launch at the lake. Fishing opens up the last weekend of April and the lake is stocked with trout. Andy Kallinen says, "The trout fishing can be good into early June and after that if you want to go after the smallmouth bass, yellow perch and other warmwater fish that can be good too."

One unique feature found at Horseshief Lake are the rocks

containing Native American art, some of the artwork being hundreds of years old. They include petroglyphs, etched engravings, as well as pictographs which are painted rocks. Several of them are on display in a well signed interpretive area you can visit anytime and others can be seen during ranger led hikes.

Put this all together and you've got a great destination for a day visit or for a weekend camping trip once this state park, and our other ones in Washington, open up again for these activities. You can keep up with the latest news about coronavirus related closures and the like on the Washington State Parks website at <https://parks.state.wa.us/1177/Novel-Coronavirus--COVID-19>.

Moving forward after the crisis

Our communities are heavily dependent on tourism. What is clear is the month of March and most likely April will be an economic disaster. At the March 24 Leavenworth

City Council Report it was reported that parking receipts for the previous weekend The were down 99 percent.

The financial impact of that will not be completely felt until May when tax receipts for March will be received from the state.

Last year March and April accounted for $226,000 or 12 percent of the city's retail sales tax revenue. To make that up in the last 6 months of the year will require a 20 percent increase in retail business just to get us back up to last year's levels.

Obviously, we will not be at zero collections but the mountain we need to climb to catch up is going to be steep.

There is hope. Many tourism industry leaders believe that when this crisis is over there will be a surge in pent-up demand. People who have been quarantined will be anxious to get out and it is unlikely they will be anxious to travel overseas. Those people also believe much of the tourism boom will come through "staycations."

Given that advice, we are looking at our annual tourism promotional efforts a little differently. Each year we publish Sonnenschein auf Leavenworth. Normally we print the spring/summer edition in March and put it out in April. It has been distributed through free distribution racks in hotels and car rental agencies. We are changing that approach for this year.

We have postponed printing of the guide until late April. We are negotiating with local community newspapers around the Pacific Northwest to insert the magazine in their newspapers. This will effectively move the target market from the transient tourism market, which may be significantly suppressed this year, to local Washington and possibly Oregon residents.

There are other ways you can promote your business during this difficult time. We have opened up a special section on our classified advertising site - NCWMarket.com. This category is free to local businesses in North Central Washington.

BILL FORHAN

Utilizing this category you can post your hours of operation and any special delivery issues. The site can include up to three photos per ad listing and as much text as you think is important for customers to know. It also includes a link to your website if you have one. To post an ad you simply have to set up an account and log in. Then fill out the ad information. The ad will be sent to our administrator who will review it and approve it for posting to the site. You can change the ad as often as you like. So, if you are running a lunch special at your restaurant, for example, you can change the menu item every day if you like.

In a similar vein. The Washington Tourism Alliance is promoting a program to support severely impacted tourism businesses. We encourage all local tourism based businesses to take advantage of this program. As of Sunday night when I checked the website there were only a handful of North Central Washington businesses listed on the site.

Here's a quick summary of the program.

The Covid-19 crisis has been catastrophic to the tourism industry in Washington. All over our state, businesses are struggling to stay open and keep on their employees. The Washington Tourism Alliance is doing everything possible to support our income streams through a charitable trust

industry and we would like to offer at least a sliver of positivity in this trying time. We are proud to introduce the showWALove.com website. A place where Washingtonians can purchase gift cards from you and show their support for tourism-related local businesses.

If you would like your business to participate, go to showWALove.com. It only takes about two minutes and it's completely FREE!

Now is a Good Time to See a Professional Advisor

By BETH STIPE
Executive Director of the Community Foundation of North Central Washington

These are scary and uncertain times. We are being asked to keep a distance from our friends and fellow community members, we feel isolated at home, and we worry about the health and well-being of our friends and family. We wonder how the economy is going to rebound from all of this, and when we will feel a sense of normalcy again.

It is understandable then, that many of our donors are asking themselves some tough questions: Do I have my affairs in order? Will my loved ones be cared for should something happen to me or my spouse? Are my financial assets allocated in a way that will minimize risk but perhaps take advantage of the bear market? How can I best support charitable causes at this time when I know my community needs it most?

If you find yourself asking these questions, you are not alone. You are also fortunate to live in a community with an abundance of trusted professionals who can help you navigate the complicated answers to these questions. At the Community Foundation of NCW, we have the privilege of working with dozens of professional advisors who assist clients with estate planning, financial planning, and tax-smart strategies. They see the value that charitable giving provides their clients—as well as the community—and we work with them to help their clients meet their charitable goals. To help you find a Professional Advisor, we have compiled a list on our website at <https://cfncw.org/professionaladvisorlisting/>.

If you're like me, you've cancelled your travel plans and find yourself with more time on your hands to tackle some projects that have been easy to put on the back burner. Now is a good time to sit down (or set up a virtual meeting) with a professional advisor. Below is some guidance for setting up those meetings:

When is it time to see a Professional Advisor?

- If you are thinking about creating or updating your will
- If you are interested in the tax-benefits of charitable giving
- If you are planning retirement and want to learn more about creating

income streams through a charitable trust

What type of Professional Advisor should I see?

- Attorney: Visit your attorney if you need to write or update your will, consider creating a trust, or find out how to create income streams during life while also leaving a legacy.
- Accountant: Visit your accountant to explore ways to meet your charitable goals while also making tax-smart decisions.
- Financial Planner: Visit your Financial Planner to figure out how best to achieve your giving goals within your overall financial picture.

The list of Professional Advisors on our websites includes a wide variety of attorneys, accountants and financial advisors throughout North Central Washington. Remember, choosing a Professional Advisor is an important decision. Take time to find the right fit and make sure to do your research and ask the right questions. If you are not sure where to start, please call us here at the Community Foundation of NCW. We are happy to help you find the right path.

OBITUARY

Patricia Ann Mitchell

Patricia Ann Mitchell (Patty) was born Patricia Ann Tuthill on May 1, 1930 to Leslie E. and Charis J. Tuthill in Seattle, Washington. Patricia's father was a mining engineer who supervised mines in the Pacific Northwest in the 1930's. She and her brother lived with her family in Oroville for some time where her father supervised operations at the Gold Axe mine, and she spent summers at other mine sites in the Northwest and Yreka, California. Patricia attended Roosevelt High School in Seattle and then studied art and fashion design at the University of Washington. At the University she was a member of the Delta Delta Delta sorority, and she was active in student government. She later worked for a sportswear firm in Seattle preparing buyer fashion booklets for the Bon Marche, Frederick and Nelson, and Best (later Nordstrom's) department stores. While living in Richland, where she had many friends, Patricia designed the costumes for the Richland Light Opera company's production of My Fair Lady. She also studied art at the Boston Museum of Fine Arts School, the Fogg Art Museum in Cambridge, Massachusetts, and the Silvermine College of Art in Connecticut. She was a member of the Harvard Dames, and she attended classes in psychology at Harvard. When her husband, Captain William F. Mitchell, USN, attended the Industrial College of the Armed Forces in Washington, D.C., Patricia attended the College's national security seminars and made a field trip with him to Germany to study that country's industries, financial institutions, government, and natural resources.

May 1, 1930 - March 25, 2020

At the U.S. Naval Academy, Annapolis, Maryland, the Mitchell's home facing the parade ground was open to midshipmen, their families and friends forming lifelong, close friendships. Here she was a member of the Officers and Faculty Wives' Club and the Naval Academy Chapel Guild.

Having regularly visited the Leavenworth, Plain and Lake Wenatchee area for thirty years, together with her husband she designed and created their home near Plain where they have lived since 1983. She was a member of the North Central Washington Museum, the Evergreen Club in Plain and the Ponderosa Firemen's Auxiliary.

She is survived by her husband, William F. Mitchell at home; a brother, Dick Tuthill of Lynnwood; a daughter, Leslie Snyder and her husband, Richard, of Kirkland; a son, Russell R. Stenquist, and his wife, Joni, of Santa Ana,

Humbled by God

God is humbling us and He will do that to people or a nation that has become swollen with pride—thinking more of themselves than they should or boasting in their achievements and forsaking that all the credit and glory goes to God. In the Bible, it says that God hates “haughty eyes”, considering them abominable (Prov. 6:17) and stands opposed to the proud (James 4:6). Therefore, when pride is rife within an individual or a group of individuals, you can be sure that God stands against them. Admittedly, we are a very proud people. We take pride in our booming economy and industry. As a global superpower, we boast at our ability to launch forces to any spot on the map instantaneously. Additionally, the whole month of June is devoted to “Pride” and during that time, pride is literally parading down the street and celebrated. However, the pride of this magnitude God does not overlook. Take ancient Israel for example, they were prosperous, their economy was booming underneath a very capable leader and as Hosea writes in Hosea 10, this “luxuriant vine” was setting themselves up for disaster. God lays the indictment down that the more prosperous they became, the more they boasted in their sin (Hos. 10:1) thus bringing the Lord to humble Israel in judgment. Another example of God using his hand to humble the proud is King Nebuchadnezzar. Nebuchadnezzar was ruler over one of the mightiest empires in all of human civilization, Babylon. He had amassed an amazing amount of wealth due to Babylon's conquests which enabled him to build massive architectural achievements. As it is recording in Daniel 4:28-37, he was standing, glorying in all that he accomplished, he then is suddenly humbled by God and driven out into the pasture to become like a wild animal. This great king who was arrayed in the finest clothes available, who lived sumptuously on the choicest food is now naked and eating grass like an ox. How far the mighty have fallen!

Nebuchadnezzar would be restored, however, but not before he did something first. It is something that we ought to do when God brings us down because of our pride. Daniel 4:34 says, “At the end of days, I, Nebuchadnezzar, lifted my eyes to heaven, and my reason returned to me, and I blessed the Most High, and praised and honored him who lives forever.” It wasn't until Nebuchadnezzar acknowledged who God is then his reason returned to him and was restored. It is the same way with us. How often we have boasted in so many things, now we are being humbled and so it is time to turn our eyes back to the Lord. When we acknowledge him and praise him, then our senses are returned and we can see things clearly. Until that happens, we will

NCW Media Inc.'s Obituary and Memorial Policy

An obituary is a way for family members to commemorate a loved one's life and to notify the larger community of the deceased. Obituaries are also used for historical and ancestral data. Memorials are another way of letting the community know about the life and memories of the person who has died. A memorial is different from an obituary. An obituary is usually current while a memorial can be written later. For publication in the Cashmere Valley Record or The Leavenworth Echo, an obituary or memorial needs to be typed and emailed to editor@leavenworthecho.com no later than 4 p.m. Friday for the next week's issue. Funeral homes and chapels can submit obituaries by noon on Monday, except holidays. Obituaries are priced per word while the charge for memorial ads are by the column-inch. Cost of the obituary/memorial is due at the time of placement. For information call 509-548-5286, or email editor@leavenworthecho.com

Can Old Drugs do new Tricks

Watching the press release the other day of the FDA describing medications being studied for use against coronavirus, I was intrigued when the official mentioned they were studying 2 drugs as possible treatment options, chloroquine and hydroxychloroquine. I am personally familiar with hydroxychloroquine, because I took it for several years to successfully treat my lupus. Ten years ago, my upper arms and lower abdominal muscles started swelling and hurting. When the pain got so bad I couldn't turn over in bed by myself, raise my arms above my shoulders, or lift more than 5 pounds, I got scared. At the same time, my hands broke out in an itchy, painful rash, and my cuticles became so exquisitely tender that I could barely stand to wash my hands. When I saw my family doctor, he explained that I had a type of autoimmune disease called lupus and prescribed prednisone. If I am very lucky I will NEVER, ever take that demonic medicine ever again. While I was taking the prednisone, I couldn't eat, I could barely sleep, and had several very scary “out of body” experiences. After only one week, I quit taking it and begged my doctor for something else. He referred me to a colleague of his, a rheumatologist at Virginia Mason Hospital in Seattle, who I found out also takes care of my younger sister. Evidently, she and I both have lupus, although she has a different type than I do. With lupus, your body attacks its own cells, creating inflammation, pain, and sometimes permanent scarring. While some types of lupus affect blood vessels or organs, I have the dermatomyositis form, which targets your skin and muscles. My rheumatologist started me on hydroxychloroquine, the exact same drug that the FDA is now studying for use against coronavirus. Both hydroxychloroquine and its parent drug, chloroquine have been around since the mid-1940s, and were originally developed and marketed as alternatives to quinine to treat malaria. Malaria is an illness caused by a parasite called plasmodium that lives on blood. Plasmodium is transmitted from one host to another by the bite of an infected mosquito. Although malaria used to be common in parts of the United States, today nearly all cases are acquired abroad, either in travelers returning home or recent immigrants. Half of the world's population is at risk of developing malaria. In 2015 there were an estimated 214 million cases of malaria worldwide, 85% caused by the parasite Plasmodium falciparum, causing 438,000 deaths. Malaria from P. falciparum causes infected red blood cells to stick to the sides of blood vessels, blocking oxygen delivery to your organs, and can be fatal if not treated. Quinine was the first drug found to be helpful against malaria. A Jesuit missionary in South America heard about healing properties of the bark of the cinchona tree from the local people, and spread the word to Europe. Native to the Andes mountains of Peru and Ecuador, the cinchona tree was imported and cultivated in India and Indonesia to produce the drugs quinine and quinidine. While quinine treated malaria, quinidine was a heart suppressant used to control certain types of irregular heartbeat. Quinidine is rarely used today because safer heart medicines are available. Quinine's extremely bitter taste gives a characteristic “bite” to both tonic water and vermouth, a flavored wine used in making martinis. When Japan captured Indonesia during World War II, it cut off the source of 90% of the world's supply of quinine. Although German scientists found a replacement medication fairly quickly, called quinacrine, it eventually proved to be too toxic to be used for long periods of time and could not prevent malaria. With quinine still unavailable during the 1940s, the governments of both Germany and the United States each assigned task forces of scientists to discover and develop replacement antimalarial medicines. Ironically, although each group worked independently, they both came up with the same solution: the discovery of chloroquine and its close relative, hydroxychloroquine. Chloroquine and hydroxychloroquine don't have just the ability to combat malaria. The scientists who developed these medicines found that they also had potent anti-inflammatory properties, particularly helpful in easing the pain and stiffness of rheumatoid arthritis (RA). Hydroxychloroquine continues to be frequently used for both RA and lupus, while chloroquine is reserved for treating malaria that has become resistant to other medicines. Taking hydroxychloroquine brought my lupus under control. Let's hope that either it or its close relative chloroquine can be found useful in today's fight against the COVID-19 coronavirus.

Should you split your pills?

Have you ever gone to bed and, just as you were falling asleep, a task left undone jumped out at you? It was over 20 years ago but I still remember it because of what happened afterwards.

I filled a glass half full of tap water, tossed the tiny capsule into my mouth and drank the water. Puzzled, it didn't seem like the pill went all the way down, so I drank another half glass of water just to make sure, and went back to bed.

chest started burning every time I ate, and over the next couple of days the burning intensified until every time I swallowed drove a hot poker inside my chest. Sent directly to the ER to make sure I wasn't having a heart attack, the doctors found that pesky antibiotic capsule stuck to the lining of my esophagus, burning a hole in it.

With treatment, the pain finally went away but ever since, I've had to use something to "slide" my pills down or I choke on them, usually a spoonful of peanut butter or bite of banana. But I'm not the only one with this problem.
